A large houseboat has just been purchased by the Motor Boat Club of America to be used as its temporary quarters this Summer at the foot of West 112th Street and the Hudson River. The boat was built for a resident of Utica about a year ago, but it has never been used. It will be brought to this city by way of the Erie Canal and then down the Hudson River from Albany next month, and it is expected that it will be moored off the foot of 112th Street by May 1. The boat is 80 feet long and 16½ feet wide. A promenade deck extends nearly the entire length, forming the roof of the house. Some interior alterations are to be made, and a small dining room will probably be fitted up at one end.

Negotiations are in progress between the officers of the Motor Boat Club and the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers regarding the holding of the motor-boat carnival next Fall. The event was held by the latter association last year, but as the Motor Boat Club has since been organized, and many of its members are also members of the Engine and Boat Manufacturers, it is likely that the management of the racing events this season will be turned over to the new club.

A meeting of the Motor Boat Club will be held early next month. After April 1 the initiation fee of $50 will go into effect. Among the new members who will be elected will be Charles G. Gates, Tyler Morse, Edward J. Schroeder, Clarence A. Godshalk, Dr. Egbert Le Fevre, Dr. J. Ralph Jacoby, Leon S. Mendel, Walter Ferguson, Louis Lee Haggin, and Andrew J. McIntosh.

The Trout Season on Long Island.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTPORT, L. I., March 28.—Anglers of New York and vicinity are eagerly anticipating the legal opening of the trout fishing season on Long Island next Saturday, which is about two weeks in advance of the general opening in the State. Not in many years have the prospects for successful sport been more promising than at present, an unusually mild Winter and the liberal restocking of the preserves insuring good catches.

The members of the Country Club, who will probably follow their rule of other years in beginning the season on April 1, maintain their own hatchery. The boats have been thoroughly overhauled, while much new and costly tackle has been obtained.

Early Pickups on the Diamond.

Two more games have been added to the Columbia baseball schedule, one with Rutgers College at American League Park on April 18 and another with the Norwalk Baseball Club at Norwalk, Conn., May 30. This brings the total up to twenty-four. The game which was to have been played with Polytechnic Institute yesterday was called off owing to the fact that there was no diamond avilable to play on. The game with Stevens on Saturday will probably be played at Columbia Oval, Williamsbridge.

Byers, the Baltimore Club's premier pitcher, recently underwent a severe surgical operation, but nothing serious is anticipated. The operation was due to an injury brought about by Byers falling out of his berth in a sleeping car late last season.

Manager "Jimmy" Collins of the Boston American League team says the foul strike rule is a positive injury to the game. "The batsman has two strikes called on him before he is aware of it," says Collins. "The game is so much in favor of the pitcher that the batsman becomes discouraged. It takes almost all the confidence out of him. The game should not have been allowed to degenerate into one of strike-outs and fielding, making batting one of the minor features. Batting ought to come before everything else. It should be encouraged in every possible way by the rulemakers."

The Xavier Athletic Association will as usual be represented on the diamond this season. The following men have started indoor work in the club gymnasium under the guidance of "Bill" Tierney, the old Fordham College star, who has been secured as coach: Romer, Doyle, Hofer, Brewer, Kearin, Elling, Coy, Foulke, Clarke, Brennan, Craven, and Robertson. Among the games arranged by Manager Poggi are those with Seton Hall College, Crescent A. C., Englewood Field Club, Montclair A. C., Trenton Y. M. C. A., Suffern Field Club, and Plainfield A. C. The season will probably open, as in former years, with Manhattan College.

While "Spike" Shannon has been named as field Captain of the St. Louis Nationals, the real responsibility of running the club will fall to Manager McCloskey. He will direct the men from the bench.

Pitchers Mason and Burchell refuse to sign again with the Baltimore Club until they receive assurance of more salary. Last year, when Pitcher Wiltse deserted the Baltimores, his salary was apportioned among the four remaining pitchers. It will not be repeated this year, hence the refusal of Mason and Burchell to sign.

The strong Cedar team of the Bronx will open its season next Sunday with the Paterson (N. J.) team at Bronx Oval, 168d Street and the Southern Boulevard. The Cedars will present a formidable line-up, with Murray and Kritcher as the battery.

The first game of the season on the Ridgewood grounds will be played next Sunday, when the Ridgewoods and the Philadelphia Quaker Giants will face each other. Manager Hussey is confident that the Ridgewoods will break all records this season. Lindemann, the club's star pitcher, is in splendid form.

SAVOY HOTEL
LONDON.

OVERLOOKING THE RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

Never has the Press of England shown greater unanimity than in its praise of the additions and improvements to the Savoy Hotel, London, upon which have been spent upwards of one million pounds sterling.

The new building is characterized by extreme luxuriousness. The Times.

Elegance and artistic character are everywhere. Nothing has been omitted that could conduce to the comfort and content of the visitor. Ladies' Field.

The most beautiful hotel in Europe.—Outlook.

An ideal home for twentieth century London—Queen.

The great pile of buildings included in this latest addition to the architectural sites of London forms a combination of luxury and beauty which cannot be surpassed in the wide world. The New Savoy is a vast palace of a thousand splendours, of a thousand surprising and delightful innovations. Nothing that could contribute to the comfort, the smoothness, and the joy of life is wanting which the inventive genius of America and Europe could supply, or that the taste and skill of the world's schools of art in all its branches could furnish. The place is, in its way, a very triumph of genius. Its match is not to be found in London, nor in Paris, nor, indeed, in any capital of this little planet. To do it justice in a necessarily brief article is impossible. Having rambled through its glorious salons and galleries, and ante-chambers, up and down marble staircases of noble breadth, beneath panelled ceilings, adorned in relief with exquisite golden tracery, one feels that all this royal magnificence, this opulent beauty, might well inspire a volume which should be bound in white satin and gold.—Western Mail.

MR. NICOLL'S REMARKS.

There is something the matter with the cooks of New York. The dishes they have of late prepared for good men's boards appear to inflame passion and incite to violence of speech. It was at the dinner table of a harmless Greek letter society the other night that Mr. JEROME let the lightnings of his anger play upon the writers of the yellow weekly and monthly press. At the banquet of the Democratic Club Tuesday evening Mr. DE LANCEY NICOLL spoke upon the subject of Democratic politics with a degree of heat that seems to us indicative rather of a desire to relieve his spirit burdened with accumulated wrath than to offer sage counsel to a party wandering unguided in a somewhat trackless wilderness. It must have been the victuals. The cooks will have to be more prudent in their seasonings.

Really, Mr. NICOLL's discourse at the Democratic Club would have been better if he had left out the hard words about Mr. HEARST. It may be that as a measure of personal hygiene Mr. NICOLL profited by ridding his system of the unpleasant epithets he applied to the late candidate for Mayor. But we doubt whether Mr. HEARST is any better for it. We do not see how the plight of the Democratic Party is visibly improved by these passionate references to bygone things. Mr. NICOLL accuses Mr. HEARST of treason to the Democratic Party, and declares that he and his agents, while they accepted headquarters hospitality, stabbed the candidate in the back. At the same time he conferred upon Mr. BRYAN all the honors and titles of regularity, and praised his loyal devotion to Judge PARKER, as evinced by his many eloquent campaign speeches. Now, while nobody can produce evidence of the fact that would be accepted in a court of law, it is very generally believed that multitudes of Mr. BRYAN's personal following, that class of voters usually described as Bryan Democrats, went over to Mr. ROOSEVELT in 1904. Mr. NICOLL says Mr. BRYAN could not help that. Has it occurred to Mr. NICOLL that Mr. HEARST may be equally blameless for the disloyal behavior of his followers, supposing him to have had followers? Why not give him the benefit of the doubt, just as Mr. BRYAN gets the benefit of the doubt in his case?

But not for that reason only—for reasons of much greater validity, growing out of common sense and common observation, Mr. NICOLL's reminiscences of the campaign of 1904 must be adjudged profitless. Mr. ROOSEVELT was elected by nobody's treason. Democrats in regiments, brigades, and whole army corps voted for him because they liked him, because they believed that of all the candidates in the field he was most likely to do the things they desired and would approve. These Democrats had no particular admiration for Judge PARKER. He was too conservative, and in 1904 conservatism was not in many of the States the prevailing Democratic sentiment. Mr. ROOSEVELT had already declared his position. He had already formulated policies and issued challenges that not only produced misgiving but awakened alarm. The great corporations, trusts, monopolies, combinations, and so on, that would have welcomed the candidacy of MARK HANNA had his life been spared, trembled not a little at the prospect of four years more of Mr. ROOSEVELT in the White House. But they concluded that on the whole the safest way was to support him. They did it earnestly, actively, and, in view of recent disclosures, we may add, generously. If any of them fancied that by manifesting an open zeal for Mr. ROOSEVELT, and few of them took pains to conceal it, they were purchasing immunity from molestation subsequent events must have undeceived them. However that may be, the corporations and great numbers of those who rail against the corporations and insist that they be curbed, stood shoulder to shoulder in the Roosevelt ranks.

In talking to Democratic clubs and in giving advice about Democratic policies it is just as well to recognize facts like these. It is much more profitable than to waste breath in abusing Mr. HEARST, who does not particularly mind being abused. If the tone of the speeches at the Democratic Club dinner was of deliberate and calculated purpose, we must assume that the recent meeting of the General Committee of Tammany Hall, at which Mr. COCKRAN spoke to his resolutions, and the club meeting which Mr. NICOLL addressed had a certain not accidental relation. It would appear that the Democratic organization of New York has taken this way of giving notice to Mr. HEARST that it is not open to his advances, that it is not to be marshaled to his support.

LET US HAVE PEACE.

The situation in the bituminous coal strike negotiations is that the miners declare they will not accept the highest wages which the operators say they can pay. Whether or not the miners would accept the offered wages if they believed the operators were stating an economic fact does not appear, nor is it certainly known whether the operators' assertion is a statement of fact or a mere expression of determination. Under these conditions it is impossible for third parties to decide upon the merits of the contention, and yet it is important that public opinion should be based upon the truth, rather than upon prejudice for or against either party. In the operators' favor it should be said that they proffered an inspection of their accounts. In the miners' favor is the fact that their wages are not exorbitant, even at highest. If the disagreement is final as the matter stands the case is peculiarly fit for impartial investigation.

Said Vice President LEWIS addressing the miners: "I know what a suspension of work means for our people. I know what it will probably mean to millions of other people who are not directly interested in these questions. We believe that the operators can pay the 1903 scale." Here is revealed a sense of responsibility to millions unrepresented in the negotiations whose result directly and intimately concerns them. If the operators were working under a public franchise the law would not allow them to stop work for an hour. The wages would have to be paid however unreasonable, or the franchise would be endangered. But although the operators are not under this direct legal compulsion it does not follow that they are free to close their mines without responsibility to the public at least as strong as the miners' representative disclosed. The burden is upon both parties to certify to the public not merely their contentions, but the facts, to be ascertained and declared by impartial investigators. After the resources of negotiation have failed the resources of arbitration become applicable. And pending arbitration work need not stop, and should not stop. The decision should not be under duress, but upon the application of reason to the certified facts. It is in every way better that the parties should make this decision for themselves, and if they fail it will be imposed upon them by force of public opinion. It would take the unions years to recover from an unsuccessful strike, and the unionists would not recoup for weary months the loss of wages even if their strike should succeed. Reason should prevail before the bitterness of contest makes it doubly difficult to do in the last place what ought to be done in the first.

A VANISHING REVISION.

We do not suppose that Mr. McCALL of Massachusetts had the remotest hope that Mr. SERENO E. PAYNE, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, would accede to his request for "a consideration of the tariff with a view to its revision and readjustment." He must have known beforehand that Mr. PAYNE would decline to take up the tariff on the eve of Congressional elections, as he knew also that it is impracticable to take up the tariff at a short session. And since every session is either a short one or is immediately followed by Congressional elections, the tariff will not be taken up at all by the party at present in power, unless indeed, under the pressure of acute fear of party reverses. So far as experience shows, the tariff will not be revised until the protectionist party loses its hold or fears to lose it.

Yet Heaven knows that the tariff is crowded with excesses and absurdities, with vexatious and oppressive duties, and with duties that have long since ceased to have any reason for being. The other day Mr. WILLIAMS introduced a bill to reduce all duties that were in excess of 100 per cent. to 100 per cent., and he published in The Record an official statement as to a large number of such duties. No one, we suppose, will claim that 100 per cent. duty is not ample to protect American producers from foreign competition, or will deny that any adult American who cannot sell his goods at a profit at a price twice that of his competitors deserves the aid of the tariff. But there is a multitude of these utterly outrageous duties, and they are not all imposed on articles of little importance by any means. For example, the imports of goods mostly woolen for the last fiscal year were worth $7,782,456, and the duties collected on them were $8,216,692. We shall not insist that all these goods paid, on each unit, more than 100 per cent., but that was the average, and if there are some paying less there are others paying more. These goods in the climate of the Northern States are a necessary of life. It is ridiculous, as it is certainly oppressive, to tax the consumers even 100 per cent. on them, and, of course, the tax collected on the foreign goods does not begin to cover the amount actually extorted from the consumers.

Glancing over the statement submitted by Mr. WILLIAMS other items will be noted of sinister significance. Some forms of cotton goods are taxed as high as 201 per cent. Varieties of silk goods are taxed from 100 per cent. to 221 per cent. Plate glass runs from 101 per cent. to 151 per cent. Forms of women's and children's dress goods range from 100 per cent. to 165 per cent. In nearly all these cases it will be found that the duties are heaviest on the low-priced goods, which alone are suited to the purses of the working classes or the relatively poor. One asks, in the face of such a record, how it is that the tariff remains untouched. That is mainly due to the fact that large interests are dependent on tariff favors, and an organized, powerful, and wealthy body of energetic and able men are constantly on the watch to prevent interference with these favors. The interests injured by the tariff are for the most part scattered and unorganized, and are largely those of classes which suffer indirectly and are but imperfectly aware of the harm done them. Both these conditions are liable to change. Then there will be a reckoning and a revision.

THE SOLUTION.

In his conflict with the judiciary the President is slightly anticipated, it seems, by Mr. JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON, who "loosened up" in Chicago on Tuesday to help the "cause" of Socialism. Mr. PATTERSON in the course of his remarks touched thus gently, but firmly, upon the question of regulating the railroads:

> If we want to take over the railroads there is only one way to take them over, and that is to take them over—confiscate them.

There we have it, in swinging, outspoken, repetitive Anglo-Saxon, with muscled Latinized summation. Why should Mr. ROOSEVELT, by limiting the powers of the courts, seek further but slowly to deprive the railroads of the benefit of the Constitutional provision which guards their property against confiscation? The way to confiscate is to confiscate. Simply repeal the Constitution, and the courts will no longer prove meddlesome.

RAILWAY "FIRSTS ON RECORD."

The first conviction of a railway for charging extortionate rates is, we believe, yet to be recorded. There have been cases in which rates were decided too high with reference to other rates, but none of extortion pure and simple. Singular as this may seem, there is another even more remarkable statement made in connection with the prosecution in Philadelphia of the Great Northern Railway for giving rebates. This is stated to be the first prosecution under the Elkins law of 1903. Wearied readers of the railway debates must wonder what is the use of enacting new laws when old laws are allowed to run years without application to flagrant cases. The case is not yet decided, so that it is premature to discuss the merits, but it is not being allowed to go by default by the hardened offenders. The shameless railways set up all sort of technical defenses, which possess small general interest, and add that if they had not given the rebates upon the American materials which were exported the sellers would have lost their sale, and the railways would have lost their freight.

In other words, in this case it is argued that the rebate was not a method of unfair domestic competition, but was a means of creating trade. Is it right or wrong that under such cases exporters should receive a lower rate than is lawfully collectible upon shipments within the United States? Who would be benefited if the traffic did not move? Who is damaged by its moving cheaply when it would not move otherwise? Such concrete cases occurring during the debate at Washington illuminate points which otherwise may seem obscure, and show their intimate relation to the realities of trade.

BILLIARDS.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new." "The strong man armed keepeth his house till a stronger than he shall come." These familiar quotations recur when SLOSSON is defeated by HOPPE at "18.1," or, for that matter, at any other game that is played on a pocketless billiard table.

For quite a quarter of a century SLOSSON and SCHAEFER have had the primacy of billiard playing in this country and, for that matter, in the world to or between themselves. They have, separately and together, "downed" every growing player who aspired to their class, with the single exception of FRANK IVES, who made good his place in it till he was removed by a premature death. HOPPE is his successor. HOPPE has proved himself, albeit in a very dull and slow game, the dullness and slowness of which go to show that each player played in great fear of the other, the superior of one of the two champions.

We see no reason why he should not prove himself as easily the superior of the other. Billiards is not exactly "athletics." It may be well played by valetudinarians. But it does require a prompt, unconscious coördination of hand and eye, which implies perfection both of eyesight and of the nervous system. To maintain this perfection and equilibration for twenty-five years is much more than is granted to most men, and should be enough even for SLOSSON and for SCHAEFER. Since they are forced at last to resign the sceptre, if they are forced to resign it, it behooves them to do so gracefully. And they will have the consolation of knowing that HOPPE can hold it as long as they have divided it only by proving himself a third miracle.

Has SERENO E. PAYNE's letter made HENRY M. WHITNEY the next Governor of Massachusetts? Boston papers please answer.

Is Mayor DUNNE a "parallelopipedon"? With this epithet, first hurled by Dr. JOHNSON at the nonplused fishwife, President PRUSSING of the Citizens' Association of Chicago hopes finally to overawe the belated, but still voluble, apostle of municipal ownership into silence. Should DUNNE turn termagant in earnest, however, we suggest that Mr. PRUSSING try him with HUXLEY's poser: "If you have no foundation of knowledge or habit of thought to work upon, what chance have you of persuading a hungry man that a capitalist is not a thief with a circumbendibus?"

Export of electrical energy from Canada developed at Niagara is to be checked, according to the new policy announced by Mr. HYMAN, the Canadian Minister of Public Works. Simultaneously President ROOSEVELT has recommended that Congress enact into law, without waiting for a treaty, the restrictions upon the use of the Falls suggested by the American members of the International Waterways Commission. Six bills lately introduced in the Legislature by Assemblyman FOELKER would repeal all dormant American charters, and limit the live charters to their respective present powers to abstract Niagara waters. Ultimately a treaty is to be negotiated that will bring the matter to a successful conclusion. The temporary measures to check at all points the Liliputian binders of the giant cataract should be vigorously pushed.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Is "Ostentation" Semitic?

There was more than one reason, perhaps, why Judge COHEN's remarks on manners at the meeting of the Temple Beth-El Club were received with "only a slight ripple of applause." That his speech was critical instead of laudatory is, of course, a sufficient explanation for lack of wild enthusiasm, for the expectation is that such addresses shall be made up of verbal bouquets, and the expectation is rarely deceived. But the Judge was not only critical; he was, perhaps, unduly critical, or mistakenly critical, when he ascribed to and reprehended in the "new rich" among his co-religionists certain traits—ostentation, lack of simplicity, overindulgence in the joys of the table, loudness, intrusiveness, and the like—that are, rather, the marks of wealth recently and quickly acquired by people of any race or creed. Doubtless Judge COHEN could have named more than one man to whom all his words would have applied with terrible accuracy, but he could have looked further in almost any direction and found others of the same obnoxious sort, in the same stage of development, and suffering from a like bewilderment and confusion as to relative values. At any rate, much the same charges have been made from every pulpit since time out of mind, addressed to such representatives of undigested riches as happened to be in the neighborhood, and social arbiters in every land have always smiled disdainful at the antics of climbers who have not yet caught their breath after a successful rush up the sharp acclivities of trade. It seems to be hard to keep in mind that manners, like morals, can never, except with the greatest peril, be described as ethnic. Every race has been everything it has had time to be or that circumstances have forced it to be, and only the individual can be justly praised or blamed for rising above or falling below the standard of his possibilities and his opportunities. Even the newly rich, whether taken by groups or as a whole, are not all alike; they only tend to display certain traits characteristic of the transition period through which they are passing.

More Money for the County Fairs.

According to report from Albany, the Cassidy-Lansing bill to put race-track gambling back among the felonies is dead, and Dr. SLICER can congratulate himself on his success in foiling "the poolroom interests" he saw behind it. Whether the race-track gambling is to be sterilized according to his desires remains to be seen. We suspect that the promise to make "playing the horses" innocent had much less to do with the fate of the bill than did the promise of a few thousand more dollars from track receipts to the virtuous farmer for the support of his county fairs. That, in all probability, it seems to us, was the really effective argument. And what an argument! The rural mind is certainly peculiar. Vehemently scornful of what it believes to be urban vices, it is perfectly willing to profit by them and cynically indifferent when its representatives in the Legislature fix up a deal by which the wicked bookmakers can be blackmailed. And yet it is the rustics who bellow most fiercely when what they call a compromise with vice is suggested—without showing how they can get a share of the profits from the compromise. When that is done their ire dies away and they coo softly.

Prophets Too Ambitious.

As THE TIMES has probably taken occasion oftener than any other paper in the country to defend the Weather Bureau and its prophecies from the attacks of the scornful and the humorous, it has no compunction in expressing regret at the news, announced by the head of the bureau at the dinner of the Maritime Association, that an attempt at long-distance, or, rather, at long-time, forecasting by the Government observers is about to be made. Mr. MOORE gave no details of the methods to be followed in predicting the weather for a month or more to come, and, therefore, it would be unjust to assume that the study of the weather of to-morrow and next day has been neglected for these larger achievements. That conclusion would be natural enough, however, and if there is any basis for it a mistake has been made—unless there is good reason for believing that something like certainty as to to-morrow's weather is most easily to be attained by looking far into the future. That is by no means impossible. But why is it that Mr. MOORE and his subordinates make so much of a mystery of their highly interesting science? If they would put within reach of the public full knowledge of how they work and what their forecasts really mean, feeble jokes about their fallibility would come to an end, and the large measure of their success would receive an appreciation which it now lacks. But the tendency seems to be the other way—to veil the methods of the bureau in secrecy, and especially to withhold from amateur prophets the data on which to found predictions. No other explanation can be imagined for the recent refusal to publish the barometric readings which were of value as well as of interest to so many people. Of course they were used by a little band of weather quacks and charlatans in making up forecasts of the most absurd sort, but that was a comparatively innocent form of amusement, and its results deceived nobody not predestined to be fooled. In our opinion it would be well to let the amateurs, and incidentally the humbugs, try their hands at prediction as much as they please. The official prophets have nothing to fear from such competition, and it might bring out some fine suggestions. Meanwhile it does seem that the Weather Bureau might profitably confine its energies to discovering the weather chances for a single week. If they can do more, of course it will be extremely useful in numberless ways, but meteorology is still a baby science, and it should learn to walk before it tries to run.

STREET CAR EXTORTION.

Scientific Accuracy with Which Standing Room Capacity Is Gauged.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why does not the Metropolitan Traction Company frankly declare its policy to be that of collecting as many fares as possible at the least possible expense to itself? Any one can see that the number of cars running at any hour during the day is nicely adjusted to the necessity of filling the car at all hazards.

Living in Madison Avenue, as I do, I have opportunity in plenty to observe the skill with which the timetable is kept always at the point which will leave "standing room only"—and mighty little of that! The crush is almost as bad at 10 o'clock in the morning as at 8—at 3 o'clock in the afternoon as at 6; it is merely a matter of fewer cars. During the hours when trade is naturally slack the cars are run on a headway of from ten to fifteen blocks. This is the calm statement of one who has counted carefully all Autumn and Winter. The result is that it is as difficult to obtain a seat during such "slack hours" as at any time.

While I presume we must endure the overcrowding of the cars during rush hours, I can see no possible reason why we should patiently endure this evidence of greed on the part of the traction company.

In the evening it is as difficult to get home against the current of the crowd as with it. Again and again have I stood on the corner of Madison Avenue, uptown in the Eighties and Nineties, at about 6 in the evening, endeavoring to get a car to take me south. One would pass by crowded. This I would refuse, seeing that another one, empty, was behind. But the empty one bore the sign "No Passengers," and refused to stop for me. The next one would bear the same irritating and unnecessary legend. The third would stop for me—but it would be jammed.

I am certain that this is the daily experience of others. I do wish that all who feel as I do, that the company is not doing its best to supply seats to its passengers, would make their views felt. Perhaps some day we shall have mass meetings and do something.

Patience is no longer a virtue.

Expense of Not Looping the Loop.

Miss H. Stamirowski, a "loop the loop" girl, has sued Madeline Barber on account of alleged negligence which caused one loop the loop to go astray, thereby injuring Miss Stamirowski. The case was tried in London in the King's Bench Division, and before a common jury. Plaintiff, who is 20 years of age, was formerly a dancer at the Alhambra, and was engaged, on behalf of the defendant, to imitate the performance of Diavalo in looping the loop, a performance occupying about three seconds.

Counsel said that in the original performance not only skill but nerve was required. In this instance the bicycle and loop were so arranged that no skill was required. On the second performance, when the bicycle got to the topmost point of the loop, which was about twenty-five feet from the stage, a click was heard, the bicycle stopped, and the plaintiff fell and was picked up unconscious.

In instructing the jury the Judge dryly remarked that he supposed the public would not have cared about the performance if they were quite certain that the young lady would not be killed. He further commented upon the fact that, while boasting ourselves as a civilized country and forbidding such spectacles as bullfights and the like, we still allowed such public spectacles as looping the loop.

The jury then awarded the plaintiff $1,250 or £250.

New Casino for Monte Carlo.

From The London Pall Mall Gazette.

MONTE CARLO, March 8.—The Casino receipts between Jan. 1 and the end of February show an increase over last year of £100,000. It will be remembered that at the beginning of 1906 figures showed a decrease of £60,000, so that more than £160,000 over the usual receipts have been taken in two months.

The question of building a second colossal Casino within the Principality at Beausoleil has now reached a most interesting stage. Permission to build a Casino has been granted, the syndicate has been formed, and the site bought. The position is on the very frontier line between France and Monaco, near La Turbie railway station, and is at present occupied by a small buvette and the Hotel Montfleury, whose proprietors are offered some £3,000 to leave. These premises are to be pulled down, and the new Casino erected in its place. The acquiring syndicate commands a capital of £80,000, and is registering its enterprise as a Societe Anonyme, under French company law. M. Camille Blanc has resigned the Mayoralty of Beausoleil.

Gambling in European Trains.

From The London Pall Mall Gazette.

BUCHAREST, March 8.—Owing to the great increase in card playing and other forms of gambling in this part of Europe, and the general demoralization resulting therefrom, serious efforts are being made to bring about a reform. The Central Committee of the Roumanian Commercial Travelers' Association has addressed a circular letter to all the members informing them that card playing in railway carriages is strictly prohibited, and that members disobeying the injunction will be brought before the Disciplinary Council of the association and summarily dealt with.

What effect this somewhat drastic attempt to improve the moral conduct of the commercial travelers in Roumania will have remains to be seen.

The Languages of France.

From Le Petit Parisien.

One result of the new census will be to determine the number of people speaking the old provincial languages. Flemish is no longer spoken, except in a small part of the Pas de Calais. Catalan exists alone in the Eastern Pyrenees. Mistral, the poet, has revived Provencal as a literary language, but the peasants scarcely understand it. The two languages which are best preserved are Basque and Breton, spoken respectively by 100,000 and by 1,000,000 mouths.

CRUELTY OF MODERN LIFE.

Does Prosperity Breed Indifference and Callousness?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I visit your city not infrequently on business, but am here now after an absence of many months and find myself keenly susceptible to impressions.

I have spent the day among business men, and I find that almost without exception those who are in a position to make money have had "the biggest year" in their experience, and are looking forward to the year that is to come as one that should equal, if not exceed, the one that has passed. And yet there is an undertone of perplexity and discontent that is unmistakable, and it is particularly interesting because of its ethical characteristics. It was very well expressed to me to-day by a merchant who deals in large affairs and who said to me:

"Business is getting more and more complicated. There are so many and such large interests with which we have to contend nowadays that it is hard for us to 'know where we are at.' The keynote of life in New York and to a certain large extent everywhere, but particularly here, is cruelty. It is a question of 'dog eat dog.' You see it not only in business but in the very life of the streets, where the mad onward rush of the pedestrians, the cabs, the trolley cars, and every traveling thing threatens to destroy whatever stands in its way." And I found that my busy friend was disposed to give a moment of his valuable time to a consideration of what it all meant, and whither we were all tending.

To-night, in search of recreation, I attended the Lyceum Theatre and there saw "The Lion and the Mouse." Before going I knew nothing as to the character of the play, but had been told it was "the best thing at the theatres." I saw a large audience of handsomely dressed and apparently light-hearted men and women who listened to, laughed at, and applauded a play which has no excuse for being unless it truly "holds the mirror up to nature," and yet which reflects a picture that should make every true lover of his country cringe in humiliation and shudder with apprehension. There is powerfully portrayed the typical, successful financier and monopolist, the intellectual monster who has allowed every noble human sentiment to be crushed out of reckoning in his mad pursuit of wealth and power, and the audience actually seemed to think it was funny! Nor did they even seem to be sobered or shocked by the representation of the Senate of the United States as being in the control of this man monster to do his bidding in the pursuit of his own private personal aims! That he finally decided to influence his minions for good rather than evil was of no alleviating or encouraging significance, because in the final result he used them merely as means to his own selfish ends.

As I left the theatre it was with a feeling of depression and apprehension. How many others shared my emotions I have no means of knowing, but if perchance they were few in number it was because they were not susceptible to the true significance of what they had seen. To-day "everybody is prosperous," and they can "afford" to laugh at evils the burden of which is not felt. But is there not ahead of us a "day of reckoning?" What will happen when "prosperity" is less in evidence, and people are provoked to reflection by hard experience and suffering? How much reflection will precede action, and what will that action be? Surely there is heavy responsibility somewhere, and it behooves some of us to reflect in season.

Suggestion for the "Englishwoman."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with much amusement Mrs. or Miss Maxwell's criticisms about us, and have agreed with nearly everything she has said. I am pleased she should admire the American man, and think it quite probable he is the most desirable of his sex in the world. However, I think she is a little unkind, as for anything which meets her disapproval she seems always to hold the women to blame. She should remember that in this country the daughter of the house usually is the most indulged, whereas in England the son is deferred to to such an extent, I understand, that the results are undesirable for the woman he marries. When a girl marries in the United States she does not always recover from the indulgence she has met with in her father's house, but expects the same from her husband. I am afraid our men will begin to consider themselves abused angels, and, like the proverbial "worm," they will "turn," a result to be devoutly deplored.

I have only lived in New York for a little over a year, and therefore the lack of manners of the New York man in the car and on the street strikes me particularly, for in my home women hanging on the straps of a car while the men remain seated is practically unheard of, and the rude man in the South is even more of a rara avis than the courteous one here. Couldn't our English friend express her views on this subject, as I am told the well-bred Englishman is always courteous abroad? However, if she again will hold the women responsible, let her carefully refrain, or the women won't even be able to find standing room in the cars.

A SOUTHERN WOMAN.

New York, March 27, 1906.

An Enemy of Tobacco—and Man.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In The Sunday TIMES a letter from Brooklyn, signed "J. Y. C.," asks why there shall be any restrictions put upon the selfishness of men, whereby decency shall have the privilege of doing away with the stench and uncleanliness of tobacco. Then the lonely Englishwoman deplores the fact that the American husband has no place or den in which he may be as disgusting as he may desire.

Why give up any place exclusively to him? Women are not able to get away from the fumes of tobacco if they step outside the door. Those who are so unfortunate as to have men stopping in the house are not able to get away from it anywhere. One woman said to her it was heaven to have the husband away from home that she might have more nearly pure air to breathe.

Stamps That Stick Not.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Three cheers for "G. R.'s," optimism regarding the "stamps that stick not." No doubt 1,078,322 gallons of glue ought to make the stamps stick, but—they don't. I just had to pay the postage on two letters mailed to me. Three groans for "G. R.'s, optimism.

THE ALBANY CLUB.

Some Reflections Aroused by Its Choice of a President.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Yesterday in your editorial article "The Albany Club" you accept as normal the unanimous election of Mr. Hamilton, the notorious lobbyist, as President of that concern. You say that "there is no reason to suppose that it (the club) is not above rather than below the general level of sensitiveness in such matters."

You seem to ignore the fact that the ancient city of Albany for a century and a quarter has been the theatre on whose stage legislators, lobbyists, &c., have been the conspicuous actors in the drama of "The Grafters." This play has, of course, been frequently adapted to meet the critical taste or moral status of the spectators; these changes molded the play to tragedy, comedy, melodrama, or farce, as would most easily beguile the public that owned the theatre, paid the performers, and all the expenses, legitimate and otherwise.

Now this annual season—a run of four months or so that a Frohman might envy—could not but have some direct interest upon the spectators nearest to the stage—videlicet, the citizens of Albany. Many of these could not live in such an atmosphere of demoralization, gag, and stage business without being affected by it. Some of them now living saw the costly playhouse itself built upon insecure foundations and with such faulty construction that the stability of that fabric of $25,000,000 worth of mingled architecture and graft is seriously threatened. Many of the Albanians also played minor parts, as ushers, reporters, pages, &c., and so appeared upon the stage itself. The stock company, away from the conservative influences of home, lived in clubs, sometimes at the expense of the scene-shifting lobbyists, and others boarded at hotels, where their "gag" was probably accepted as Shakespearean and legitimate.

The writer is not a "yellow journalist," and does not desire to exaggerate or imply that there are not many honest legislators or that the mass of the people of Albany are tainted by such indecent and dishonest practices as are rife under the roof of the Capitol. He is himself a native of that ancient city, and it has been his fate to be there often during the sessions of the Legislature, and often for long periods. He has heard legislators there who would personally spurn any attempt to bribe or unduly swerve them chat and joke in public places about the venality of some of their associates and the corrupt practices of the lobbyists without a single expression of disgust; they seemed to accept it as a part of the play that did not concern them.

In such an atmosphere is it any wonder that there should be in Albany at least one club that would unanimously honor a Hamilton by an election to its Presidency?

Spare the Silent Letters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have to thank you for the courtesy of your criticism on my last letter under this heading. I would point out, however, that the letter was dated by me March 14 and was largely a reply to "Warren," who had written on the 12th a letter which was practically a plea for phonetic spelling. Had I written on the 20th (after Mr. Carnegie had so carefully pointed out that what he advocates is merely reform) I should certainly have written in a different strain.

As an opponent of phonetic spelling I am as uncompromising as ever—i. e., I will never agree to the doctrine that orthography is to be the slave of vulgar pronunciation. I certainly would welcome any rational scheme of spelling reform, but also I should rejoice to see a simultaneous scheme for a rational reform of pronunciation. I am proud of being termed by you a conservative, but please to remember a true conservative only wishes to conserve the good. As soon as existing conditions are proved bad he welcomes reform.

Franklin Also a Spelling Reformer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was only recently that I read of Mr. Carnegie's surprise in learning that Benjamin Franklin was the founder of the first public library in this country. I wonder does he know that Franklin also agitated some reform in spelling? In a letter to Miss Stevenson, dated Sept. 28, 1768, he answers several objections which had been made to such a reform. It is interesting in connection with the present movement, and as showing the breadth of Franklin's activities.

A Little Thing, but Our Own.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there not such a thing as professional courtesy and justice among newspapers toward each other? On March 11 THE TIMES printed a short verse purporting to give a pedantic interpretation of the song, "Everybody Works but Father." THE TIMES headed it "'Everybody Works' in Boston," and it was signed R. O. Man. A few days later I noticed that The Springfield Republican reprinted it without giving credit to THE TIMES. Then on Saturday last The New York Sun printed it on its editorial page under the caption "How They Sing It in Boston," giving credit to The Republican.

Where Shall the Line Be Drawn?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Upon reading some of the newspaper criticisms of District Attorney Jerome for his views on campaign contributions by the insurance companies a serious question is presented to me.

Have I, in contributing toward the maintenance of a watchman in my home neighborhood, been guilty of larceny from my family by the expenditure of funds justly theirs by right of inheritance, I having done so on my own judgment without their knowledge or consent?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In order to correct an erroneous impression conveyed by an item in a recent issue of your paper we, the undersigned, beg to state:

April 1—I tried to bloom;
Still too bleak and drear;
Snowflakes shivered in the air,
Far and near.

April 5—The other flowers
Always wait for me;
Dear, dear; what a backward Spring
This will be!

April 10—Heard Robin call,
All so blithe and bold,
That I hurried out, but guess
I took cold.

April 15—Out at last!
Skies are blue and clear,
Everybody's happy now—
Easter's here.

WHO MADE THE STATUE OF MRS. G. H. GILBERT?

Cosentino Says He's the Sculptor, Mrs. Matthews Says She Is.

TWO MEMORIALS PLANNED

Actress's Close Friends Will Erect a Memorial Window—Who Are Backing the Other Isn't Known.

Mrs. Elizabeth St. John Matthews, who has a studio in the Arcade Building in Broadway, near Sixty-fifth Street, and Oronzo Cosentino, who has his studio at 1,931 Broadway, near by, are in a dispute as to which of them made the twelve-inch model of a statue of the late Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, the actress. The statue, it is said, is to be erected in Central Park.

According to Cosentino, he was engaged by Mrs. Matthews several months ago to make the Central Park statue model. It is a representation of Mrs. Gilbert in her part of Granny, which she was playing when she was stricken with her last illness. The model shows her sitting in a rocking chair, with her hands folded across her lap, her face wreathed in a grandmotherly smile, and with an old-fashioned lace cap on her head.

Cosentino is a young cripple who came over from Italy about two years ago. When he referred to Mrs. Matthews last night he got excited.

"My!" he said emphatically. "So Mrs. Matthews declares that she made the Gilbert model and that I never had a hand in it. She came here every day for two weeks for me to make this model, and finally I completed it and gave it to her. She gave me $1 a day for my work. She says I am no artist, and only an incompetent assistant. Ah, I am the genuine artist!

"I made this model for her and I also made the model of the 'Three Martyred Presidents.' It is all my work. I also made a bust of Sir Thomas Lipton. Here is a letter of commendation I have from C. A. Theller for making a bust of his old friend, the late Capt. F. Norton Goddard."

Cosentino ran over to a pedestal bearing a draped figure.

"Here is a bust of Caruso, the great singer," he said, removing the drapery. "It is for the West Side Ladies' Association. That proves I can do the work."

A friend of Mrs. Matthews said last night that the work in dispute was only a small 12-inch sketch model which has been completed in the last two weeks, and that Cosentino had not been inside her studio for a year. Mrs. Matthews's friend also said:

"The 'Martyred Presidents' tablet which he also says he did was erected on the walls of the Fifty-seventh Street branch of the Young Men's Christian Assiciation in this city a year and a half before the boy came to this country. While it is true that a copy of this tablet was presented to Prince Henry, this also was several months before the boy came to America.

"The boy's wage was but $1 a day while he was employed by Mrs. Matthews, and if he was as skillful as he says he was he could easily have made six or seven times this amount from any sculptor in this city who employs assistants, as most of them do, this amount being the regular rate for competent assistants.

"The boy has several friends who tried hard to get him a place, and it was after they failed in doing so that Mrs. Matthews continued giving him, through sympathy, the same amount per day for work that was afterward destroyed because it was not good. The boy is simply trying to get some free advertising."

"Is any money being raised for the Central Park statue?" Mrs. Matthews's friend was asked.

"No, I believe not. I think all the money necessary has already been raised."

"How much?"

"I can't say."

"By whom and from whom was it collected?" he was asked.

"I can't tell you anything further than that a committee has been superintending the work."

"Who is on that committee, and who authorized its appointment?"

"I can't tell."

J. W. Rumsey, business manager for Daniel Frohman, says that Mrs. Gilbert's friends are working for a $5,000 fund with which to install a window in the Bloomingdale Reformed Church at 106th Street and West End Avenue. Mrs. Gilbert attended this church for years, and her pastor, the Rev. Dr. William C. Stinson, and George Gould, Maude Adams, John Drew, Charles Frohman, and others, have interested themselves in a benefit performance which is to be given at the Knickerbocker Theatre on April 17 to help raise the money.

Mr. Rumsey said last night that Mrs. Gilbert's friends were hard at work on the church window project.

"The Rev. Dr. Stinson suggested this plan," he said, "and all of Mrs. Gilbert's professional and personal friends, as far as we know, favored it. I can't imagine who is at work upon the Central Park statue plan."

FEARED ST. VITUS'S DANCE.

Young Man Felt an Attack Coming on and Drank Acid.

Two boys were playing ball in a vacant lot at the corner of Second Avenue and Forty-first Street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon when a young man approached and asked them to get him some headache powders from a nearby drug store. He talked in a rambling manner and acted queerly, but they took his money and went to get the powders.

When they returned he was lying on the ground writhing in agony. Before an ambulance from the Norwegian Hospital could arrive the man was dead. He had taken carbolic acid.

In his pockets were found papers showing that he was Elias Bamberger, 19 years old, of 1,251 Fortieth Street. His family said that he was a sufferer from nervous trouble and had periodical attacks of St. Vitus's dance. He had felt one of these attacks coming on and was despondent over it.

PLUNGING HORSES AGAIN.

Sensational Act Reintroduced at the Hippodrome.

A new sensation—or, rather, a renewed one—was provided at the Hippodrome yesterday by a rearrangement of the quasi plot of "The Society Circus," in order to permit the return of the plunging horses.

When Paul Pasky (Edwin Clark) is carried away by the gypsies he is taken to the forest, and there tied to a tree and taunted. In the midst of the hilarity a violent storm drives all the gypsies away except one girl, who seizes the occasion to release him. He takes to horse, and she (Adele Von Ohl) follows him with the returning gypsy band in full pursuit. The chase leads across a lake into which pursued and pursuers plunge. The result is thrilling in the extreme for the spectators—and for the horses.

The vast auditorium was filled with an enthusiastic audience, which held its breath, while the frightened horses were struggling through the tank, and otherwise hugely enjoyed an evening filled to repletion with marvelous feats of skill of daring and stage pictures of wondrous effectiveness and beauty, which New Yorkers and visitors to New York have long since learned can be seen at the Hippodrome as nowhere else in the world.

COLLEGE MEN AT THE PLAY.

"Columbia Night" Brings Many Students to "Brown of Harvard."

Last night was "Columbia night" at the Princess Theatre, where Henry Woodruff is appearing in "Brown of Harvard." The house was decorated with Columbia colors, and Columbia flags were used on the stage in honor of the occasion.

The lower boxes of the house were occupied by the members of the cast of "The Conspirators," the Columbia show recently given at Carnegie Lyceum, and between the acts the musical numbers of the piece were played by the orchestra, the students joining in the choruses.

NO PINE COFFIN FOR JERRY.

Jersey City Boys Saved Suicide's Body from Potter's Field.

Ten-year-old Jerry Murphy's body was saved from a pauper's grave in Jersey City by the Gregory Street boys. Jerry Murphy was a little waif who dropped in srom somewhere two months ago, and got a job in the old dye works on Monitor Street. His recompense for his work was a bit of food each day and the privilege of sleeping on the floor of one of the dye works rooms.

There was an idea among those who knew him that he had run away from a good home, and when he was found dead in his straw bed with the gas overhead turned on, less than a week ago, all who knew him concluded Jerry had killed himself in a fit of homesickness.

The body was taken to the Morgue and the city was preparing to put it in a pine coffin and send it to Potter's Field when the Gregory Street boys became interested. When his work was done Jerry would slip down among the Gregory Street boys for an evening of frolic, and as one of them said, he made himself "solid wid all ov us." They made up their minds to give him a funeral.

Johnny Evener, better known as "Johnny Git a Hair Cut," organized the crowd into a begging party. They were encouraged when Robert Davis chipped in handsomely, and the hat was passed around among all the politicians they had ever heard of. By next nightfall Johnny had $30 in hand, and asked an undertaker if that was enough to give Jerry a decent funeral. It wasn't quite, but the undertaker said it was, and had the body removed from the Morgue to his establishment.

Johnny next asked Father Walsh if he would say the prayers at the funeral, and Father Walsh not only consented, but provided the grave. The boys gave of their sparse wardrobes to dress Jerry for his fine coffin, and yesterday 200 boys gathered around the coffin and followed it to the cemetery.

EX-MAYOR VAN WYCK WEDS.

Marries Former Wife of John C. Hertle—Now on a Trip to Europe.

The marriage of ex-Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck to Mrs. Kate E. Hertle was announced yesterday when the bride and bridegroom were already on their way to Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm II.

The wedding took place at the Broadway Tabernacle, at 5 o'clock Monday evening, with the Rev. Dr. Jefferson as the officiating minister. Mrs. Hertle was accompanied by her three daughters by her former marriage, and Mr. Van Wyck by his brother, Augustus, and his son, William Van Wyck. George Freifeld, counsel for Mrs. Hertle in her recent divorce suit and a close friend of Mr. Van Wyck, and a few other intimate friends, were also present.

The ceremony took place on the seventh floor of the Tabernacle in the administration offices. Immediately after the service Mr. and Mrs. Van Wyck drove to the steamship.

The date of their return to this country is not yet fixed, but Mr. Freifeld said yesterday that there was nothing in the rumor that the ex-Mayor intended to make his home in Paris. He is too good an American, Mr. Freifeld thinks, ever to desire to expatriate himself.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Wyck have been friends for many years. She was, till last year, the wife of John C. Hertle, whom Mr. Van Wyck, when Mayor, made a Commissioner of Accounts. His selection was regarded by Tammany Hall as a "personal appointment," but he was reappointed by Mayor McClellan after the fusion administration of Mayor Low.

In December, 1904, Mrs. Hertle sued for a divorce, and the case was heard before Emaunel Blumensteil as referee. The proceedings have never been made public, and the papers are now sealed.

Mr. Hertle was not informed of the marriage of his former wife till after the ceremony was over. He was ill yesterday and declined to see callers.

TONG KILLINGS PAUSE AND CHINATOWN FEASTS

Early Advent of the Millennium Celebrated at Chu Gow's.

PEACE PRESENTS AWARDED

But When a Waiter Dropped a Tray, Many Lights of the Tongs Ducked.

Mock Duck, the Hip Sing hatchet man, is in jail. For more than three weeks there hasn't been a homicide in Chinatown. So the Chong Wah Kong Shore, or Chinese Reform Association, quite naturally got together last night and celebrated the dawn of the millennium.

They did it by giving a fifteen-course banquet at Chu Gow's Port Arthur Chow House in Mott Street—a banquet that was murderless, though emissaries from the Hip Sing and the On Leong, the two warring tongs, ate their birds' nest soup at the same table.

Chu Gow's place to the epicures of Chinatown represents the very garden of Celestial joys, and last night its cuisine was taxed to the utmost, for not a dish had been overlooked that would tickle the palate of Celestial or barbarian. Nominally the feast was for the purpose of commemorating the signing of the peace of Pell Street, which, among many of the Celestials given to heathen ways, is looked upon as the latest joke on the foreign devils.

Judge Foster of General Sessions, who acted the part of arbiter and peacemaker in chief when the treaty was signed, occupied the foremost place in a long line of foreign devils who graced the head table. Among the Celestial guests attending the place of honor naturally fell to Dr. F. Froman Tong, a High Commissioner sent by the Sun of Heaven to learn the latest tricks of the Western barbarians and betray them to the Celestials.

Joseph M. Singleton, who is variously known as the "Good Old Man of Chinatown" and the "Rich Old Man of Chinatown," and who is President of the Empire Reform Association, was toastmaster. Dr. Tong sat on his left, and Judge Foster on his right.

Among the other guests at this table were D Cady Herrick, Lewis Nixon, Chinese Consul General Shan, Lock Wing, Chinese Vice Consul in this city; "Tom" Foley, Judges McCarthy and Conlan of the City Court, Magistrates Moss, Steinert, Breen, Zeller, and Barlow, Congressman Goldfogle, Jue Chue, Secretary of the Empire Reformers, and Fung Y. Mow of the Star Rescue Mission.

At a table directly under the eyes of Judge Foster and the other foreign devils the Hip Sing and On Leong emissaries had been placed. Over their heads a stuffed dove, white emblem of peace, hung by a long string, the other end of which had been fastened to a dragon's tooth in the chandelier over the table. The dove had its wings spread and easily dominated the gathering.

There were about three hundred guests. It required nearly five hours to go through the various courses, between each of which were sandwiched no end of sweetmeats and helpings of Chinese wine. Most of the Celestials present wore Western attire, and not a few were in evening clothes. Out of respect for the foreign devils who had been invited they condescended to eat their rice according to the barbarous custom of the latter with a fork. Here is the menu:

Pineapple, Lychee Nuts,
Golden Limes, Loung Gnan,
Almonds, Crystallized Ginger.
White Rice Wine.
Birds' Nest Soup.
Fried Shark Fins, Mushroom Chicken, Rice.
Broiled Squab, Lobster Omelet,
Broiled Capon, Pheasant Egg Omelet.
Imperial Duck.
White Cloud Tea.
Golden Coin Cakes, Sponge Cakes,
Rice Cakes.

The guests at Table 2—the table above which the dove of peace hovered so serenely—was watched narrowly by every diner in the room. Although three weeks of unruffled peace has gone a long way to assure the residents of Chinatown that the Tongs have come to some sort of an understanding for the present, the Celestials who so often have been ground between the upper and the nether millstone have not had time to get over their nervousness. On one occasion, when a waiter dropped a tray with birds' nest soup and several bowls were broken, every Chinaman who did not plainly see what had happened either jumped or ducked.

The guests at Table 2 were: Wong Quou Sing, President of the Benevolent Order of the Hip Sing; Hoey Gow, its Treasurer, and Yep Shung, its Secretary. The On Leong was represented by President Hoo Pooh, Vice President Chong Pun Sing, and Treasurer Lee Gong Yee. They seemed to get along splendidly together and clinked their cups time and time again with oblique glances at the white bird overhead.

As the feast was drawing to a close an ebony chair with gorgeous dragons' and lions' heads carved on it was presented to Judge Foster in token of the Empire Reformers' appreciation of his efforts on behalf of Tong peace. The presentation speech was made by Congressman Goldfogle. Gold medals with suitable inscriptions were presented to Dr. Tong, Mr. Singleton, Fung Y. Mow, and Jue Chue for their peace making achievements.

Tom Lee, the wise old man of Chinatown, sometimes styled "Mayor," was not invited.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE HEARING.

Opponents and Advocates Before Joint Committee at Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 28.—About a hundred women came to Albany to-day to take up the fight for woman suffrage where Susan B. Anthony left off. The Hill-Dowling bill striking from the Constitution the word "male" was championed before a joint meeting of the Judiciary Committees.

The opposition was first heard. Mrs. Gilbert E. Jones, Mrs. Rossiter Johnson, Mrs. Julian Heath, Mrs. Alfred Meyer, Mrs. George Phillips, and Mrs. W. G. Crannell of New York, representing the Association Opposed to the Extension of the Suffrage to Women, presented an argument, going over the ground taken by the suffragists. Their address, in part, was:

"If the whole woman suffrage movement died to-morrow, never to revive, the women of New York State would not by that bereavement lose a single opportunity of usefulness, a single needed right, a single path to education, to occupation, or true advancement. Woman's rights have come to her without the burden of the ballot tagged on to them. She has them all—all that the suffragists used to talk about fifty years ago as the needed results of the suffrage. The procession has gone forward and passed the suffragists.

Those who held up the standard of suffrage for women were Mrs. Mary E. Craigie, who headed the delegation; Mrs. Ellen Hawley Crossett of Warsaw, President of the New York State Woman Suffrage Society; Mrs. S. F. Blatch of New York, Mrs. Henry Villard of New York, President of the William Lloyd Garrison Equal Suffrage Club; Mrs. Annie Holland Howe of Albany, and Helen Z. M. Rogers of Buffalo, a woman lawyer.

These advocates declared that the general moral tone of the State would be raised if women had the ballot.

Mary Isabel Le Gal Dead.

Mary Isabel Le Gal, widow of Col. Eugene Le Gal, died on Tuesday in the Old Ladies' Home, 104th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. She was 84 years old. She is survived by a brother, Frederic A. Bartlett of 50 Willow Street, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Le Gal was a daughter of Dr. John S. Bartlett, a surgeon in the British Navy at the time the War of 1812 was declared. He had no opportunity to serve his country during that war because the packet on which he was sailing from England for the West Indies was captured off the coast of New England, the war declaration having been made after it had left the home port.

He was paroled in Boston and there met Martha Hatch, mother of Mrs. Le Gal. In 1822 he came to New York and remained here until he died. He ran two papers in this city—The Albion, devoted to the affairs of English people in this country, and The Anglo-American, which was started during the Crimean war.

Col. Le Gal was a member of the old New York Light Guards and was the founder and Colonel of the Lafayette Guards. He married Miss Bartlett in 1844.

A WOMAN IS TO DESIGN NAVAL ACADEMY DOORS

The Judges Unanimously Accept Miss Longman's Drawing.

MEMORIAL TO CLASS OF '68

Present Model Said to Excel the Artist's "Victory" at the St. Louis Fair.

By the unanimous decision of the judges in the competition for the bronze entrance doors for the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, first prize was awarded to Miss Evelyn B. Longman. The judges were Col. Robert M. Thompson, Daniel C. French, Ernest Flagg, Walter B. Chambers, and Charles Grafly. The doors are the gift of Col. Thompson as a memorial of the Class of '68.

There were in all thirty competitors, but Mr. French said that the judges had little difficulty in arriving at a decision, and that all agreed without hesitation that Miss Longman's work merited the award.

"Miss Longman's achievement in winning this competition," he added, "has been equaled by few, if any, sculptors of her sex in this country. Her success did not surprise those who are familiar with her previous work, for in several instances she has given evidence of great ability. Perhaps her best-known work is the figure of Victory in the Festival Hall at the St. Louis Exposition. This has since been remodeled in bronze for the Union League Club of Chicago."

The doors, with the transom and space above, are to be approximately 21 feet in height and 10 feet wide. Plaster models of all the designs are on exhibition at the rooms of the American Fine Arts Society, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street.

Miss Longman's design is divided into two main groups representing "Peace" and "War." In the former, on the left portal, an old man, symbolizing "Science," is in the act of explaining a problem to students in the garb of the Naval Academy. One youth holds in his right hand a model of a man-of-war, while under his left is a draughtsman's triangle. In the background ships and lighthouses appear.

In the group, "War," which adorns the right portal, a female figure typifies "Patriotism." A coat of arms shows beneath her draperies. One clenched hand rests upon a cannon. The other points to the distance, where rise the masts of ships, toward which the naval cadets in the background are marching. A young man who is about to take his place at her side represents the response of youth to the call of patriotism.

The prize which the winner receives is the contract for the execution of the doors. Fifteen thousand dollars is assigned for this purpose, and the cost will in all probability not exceed two-thirds of that sum. Thus Miss Longman will profit to the extent of $5,000, if not more. Cash prizes of $250, $150, and $1,000 have been awarded to the following sculptors who secured second, third, and fourth places in the competition: A. A. Weinman, Paul Nocquet, and Bruno Louis Zimm.

THE AUTO RIDE OF
Teddy-B and Teddy-G
NEXT SUNDAY

The Bears were shown the works inside,
And how to steer and how to ride,
And what to do to climb a hill,
And how to start or stop at will,
And the horn to blow and the way to back
When there's danger forward on the track.
TEDDY—G said he would chauffeur be,
And run the car like sixty-three;
While TEDDY—B said folks would find
Him following pretty close behind.

THE STORY

The Roosevelt Bears start out from Boston to Lexington and Concord in an automobile. They see the grave of Longfellow at Mount Auburn, study American history at Lexington, and have an interesting hour at Concord. The fun begins when they start for home. Their auto breaks down, and when they get it started again they are unable to regulate the speed and it heads for Boston at a pace that breaks all records. The two pictures in this announcement show a little of what happen. Get THE NEW YORK TIMES next Sunday. The automobile pictures are alone worth the price.

The bears read history for an hour
In the Hancock House and Belfry Tower,
On monuments and tablets here
They learned the stories of Paul Revere,
And Captain Parker and his patriots brave
Who tried to make King George behave.
Then off again on lively run
To see the home of Emerson.

"Do you know the law?" the policeman said;
But TEDDY—G just shook his head;
While TEDDY—B said "We may be green;
But the thing to fine is this old machine."
They argued points to prove their case
And told the officer face to face
That this ride of theirs was a record run
And they didn't like to be pinched for fun.
But all their talk was of no avail;
The were taken off to Boston jail
And given a cell and locked up tight
And told to stay there for the night.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rise—Call Money Rates 4@6½ Per Cent.

Demand Sterling Declines — Engagement of $1,000,000 Gold Made.

Yesterday's upturn in prices found as little explanation in actual developments as did the decline of the previous day or the advance made by prices on Monday. Announcement of the engagement of an additional $1,000,000 gold in Europe for importation to this city was not made until long after the close of the market, so that it exerted no direct influence upon sentiment during the day, but the general understanding that the foreign exchange market has been for some time in such shape that relief to our money market in case of need would quickly come from this quarter has had, doubtless, more or less general weight. The general run of such news as came to light was hardly favorable to rising prices, since it consisted in the main of advices from Indianapolis detailing the rather heated speeches made by representatives of the miners and operators in the bituminous fields in session there, while a further restrictive influence might naturally have followed the advance in call money rates to a higher point than has been touched in some time. The disposition of speculators, in whose control the market rested, as it has for some time past, was to put as cheerful an interpretation upon these matters as possible, a position which aided in the drives made against the short interest in stocks here and there through the list. Thus it was pointed out that up to the close of business, at least, no definite break had come in the negotiations at Indianapolis, and that even if a strike were declared in the bituminous fields, this would diminish the chances of a similar disturbance in the anthracite regions, since the limitation of resources following the cessation of work in both fields would seriously hamper the miners. In the same manner it was pointed out that the rise in call money rates attended preparations for the disbursement of large interest and dividend moneys next week, and that for this reason the activity in money was a matter of momentary importance only. For the first hour of trading prices hesitated, but thereafter grew generally firm under the leadership of Erie and Brooklyn Rapid Transit, rising slowly but persistently, with only the briefest reactions, to the close of the day, when such advances as 1⅝ points in Union Pacific, Reading, Erie, and Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and a point or more in many standard shares had been scored.

As opposed to the advance in call money rates, there was a weaker tendency in the time money market, due, it is understood, to an influx of out-of-town money for use in the time money market. Demand sterling was again weak, increasing the chances of further importations of gold. A turn for the better in the news from Algeciras was reflected by improvement on foreign markets, especially at London. Of local interest were the declines in grain markets, and the further advance of prices in the cotton market. The Erie reported the handsome increase of $601,000 in February net earnings.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 28.—Rates for money were harder in the market to-day. Nearly $10,000,000 in Treasury bills matured, but the supplies were absorbed by the payment for new bills, a call for the Japanese loan, and the settlement. Discounts were quiet and easier.

On the Stock Exchange business expanded moderately with the satisfactory conclusion of the settlement, while the prospect of easier money at the quarter end stimulated investment purchasers of consols, which, with other British securities, sympathized.

Foreigners were steady, but dull in the absence of Continental support.

Copper shares hardened in sympathy with the metal.

Americans opened a fraction below parity on local buying, but the operations were not large, owing to the uncertainty regarding the coal trade situation. In the afternoon Wall Street advices caused a further improvement, but the market eased later and closed quiet.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104¼.

Bar silver quiet at 30d. per ounce.

India Council bills were allotted to-day at 1s. 3 15-16d.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15; Lisbon, 4.50.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day was £77,000.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Reports of war in the local brick trade grew apace today and though they could not be confirmed officially, they affected the market for Illinois Brick shares on the local exchange materially. It was stated on seemingly good authority that the Illinois company in its supposed purpose of putting the new National company out of the running as soon as possible, had offered to sell big contractors brick in million lots at $4 a thousand. The National is just about to get into the field to deliver on contracts made at $6.

The recent price of the Illinois has been about $7 net with some shading from that figure. It is acknowledged that these prevailing prices are much too high, but that the heavy building during the open Winter has made the demand very brisk. Some of the biggest contractors in the building trade to-day said they were not advised of any cut in prices of a spectacular nature. Still the price of Illinois Brick stock ran off from 63½ as at the close yesterday, to 60 before noon. Then an order was put in the market to buy any part of 1,000 shares at that figure. This was an effectual check to the decline and the stock ran up again to 62.

It was a live question in La Salle Street whether the pool which recently acquired a line of the stock and raised the price to around 70 was being forced out, or whether it was this interest which supported the market to-day. An official of the National Brick Company to-day said: "There is no brick war, but one is likely."

Money, 5½@6 per cent. New York exchange, 6 cents discount to par.

PENNA. R. R. REFUSES TO HAVE ITS RATES FIXED

Mr. Rea Says the Aldermen Can't Bind Connecting Company.

OUTSIDE SHIPPING AFFECTED

Vice President Says a Clause Providing for Reasonable Charges Would Be Acceptable.

Vice President Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania Railroad made public last night a letter which he had mailed to President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen and Chairman of the Board of Estimate's Conference Committee on the New York Connecting Railroad franchise dispute.

In this letter Vice President Rea, who is President of the Connecting Railroad, declares his company will not agree to have the Board of Estimate fix the rates to be charged by the road for traffic going through the city, nor the rates for the inter-State commerce of the company.

"The power to determine rates for carrying property within the limits of the City of New York," Mr. Rea said in his letter, "could not be vested in the Board of Estimate or in any other public body except only as the railroad might, with all other New York State railroads, be subject to general regulation under legislative authority. It would be impossible to raise the capital for this construction if the entire value of the enterprise was subject to the hazard of unlimited special determination of rates by the Board of Estimate or any other local board, however high its character and position.

"The Pennsylvania and New Haven Railroad Companies are subject to the provisions of their own charters granted by other States than New York and to the laws of such States, and they could enter into no stipulation subordinating their corporate powers as to the business between New York and those States.

"Practically all the business which the Pennsylvania or New Haven Road would bring to the Connecting Railroad would be inter-State business, for it would be traffic coming to New York from other States or going to other States. With respect to such inter-State commerce the Pennsylvania and New Haven Railroads are subject to such constitutional enactments as the United States Congress may make and to the lawful jurisdiction of the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

"I regret, therefore, to be unable to comply with your request to prepare a clause for insertion in the proposed certificate binding the Connecting Railroad and its allied companies as you suggest. I repeat, however, that if the other provisions of the proposed certificate should be satisfactory there would be no objection to a provision prohibiting excessive rates upon the railroad of the New York Connecting Railroad Company and requiring that its rates should be reasonable.

"As bearing upon the policy of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Long Island Railroad and companies connected on Long Island, it is not improper for me to point out that no charge whatever is made for the distribution of freight within a large area at the western end of Long Island, including most of the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, over and above the rates of delivery merely on the Harbor of New York."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

"I understand," said the communicative member of a large Stock Exchange firm, "that the good guessers are all adrift on the market; that there is nothing really doing around the Street, and that about 90 per cent. of the transactions we see reported on the tape from day to day represents the eighth-chasing of the floor crowd. Brokers tell me that business is rotten. It must be. We find it so, but we find also that we are borrowing about $8,000,000 less money than we were three months ago. This is to say, that our line of stocks has been cut in two. Other brokers tell me that their lines have been reduced 40 to 60 per cent. since January. In this office we have very few more stocks than we had in the Spring of 1904. Commission houses, in brief, are pretty well sold out. Now, one thing I have learned in twenty years' experience in this business is that when commission houses haven't got the stocks prices are apt to go up for some foolish reason. I have never known it to fail. If I were a speculator, I should be willing to let somebody else have all the inside information if I might have access to the books of three or four large representative commission houses. I should know that the market could be sold when my commission houses were loaded up to the limit of their capacity with stocks, and then when those same houses were out of stocks, and bewailing the absence of business, I should quietly cover my line and go long. I should be right at least three times in five on the twenty-point swings of the market, and right invariably on the larger swings if I simply disregarded all advice and went against the books. I wonder that brokers don't profit heavily by their common experience. But a broker who speculates is almost as easily misled by advice and information as his clients. I think this market will go up because brokers haven't got the stocks. That's the only thing I am sure of. As to everything else in the situation, I am as much confused as the rest. I merely know that I have never seen prices go down much with relatively so few stocks in broker's hands."

Edward D. Jones, who was the Jones of Dow, Jones & Co., publishers of the white slips and The Wall Street Journal, has taken a partnership with the Stock Exchange firm of S. L. Blood & Co., where his ideas will have all the room they require.

⁂

It has become a fixed idea in Wall Street that there must be a Spring rise this year. There seems to be only one small doubt concerning it, which is that it may be talked to death before it gets started. There is a tradition which calls emphatically for a Spring rise in prices. The existence of such a tradition is curious enough, but its survival of countless disappointments is marvelous. The market has never shown any respect for the tradition. An examination of its record for the last ten or fifteen years would probably show that its Spring movements have been as uncertain as its Summer, Autumn, or Winter fluctuations, recalling Mark Twain's assertion that there is one very unlucky month for speculation and eleven others. A long time ago some notable operator, who happened to be long of a big line of stocks at Springtime, and who, no doubt, was worried about his commitments, declared it unwise to sell stocks when the sap runs up the tree. The saying has been variously attributed to Daniel Drew, Addison Cammack, Jay Gould, and ten or twenty others, according to the name first suggesting itself to the writer in want of an idea to pad out comment on a dull Spring market.

⁂

Another idea, only a little less prevalent than the belief in a Spring rise, is that another bulge of 6 or 8 points in prices will bring the psychological opportunity to get out of one's stocks, and lay out a campaign on the bear side. About three in every five men you talk to about it declare that the big interests, vaguely so-called, will presently turn to and of one accord work for higher prices, with a view to distributing "the goods." Each man believes that he will read the signs aright, get the last 1 per cent. of the rise, and go short for a long pull. Things do not happen by any such happy rule in Wall Street. Moreover, if they were to happen thus once in the manner described the same men who are now waiting for a profit of 6 to 8 points on the long side, intending then to go short, would probably be so bullish at the culmination of the Spring boom that they would double up instead of remembering to take their profits, and go the other way. Very few speculators have the gift of acting upon their original ideas to the logical end.

⁂

Recently a prominent banker advised a few of his friends to buy a stock which was then selling around 60. They asked him how much profit they might expect. "I can promise you that the stock will sell at par," the banker replied, "but when it sells there you will be so bullish on it that you will decide to hold it for 200."

⁂

During the greater part of yesterday's session the stock market exhibited a kind of quiet strength which served to emphasize those technical conditions, chiefly the scarcity of floating stocks, which have recently been so much commented upon. In the last hour, after call money had been above 6 per cent., it developed more pronounced strength, under the leadership of Union Pacific, Steel common, Pennsylvania, Erie common, and one or two other of the better class of stocks, and the trading assumed breadth and proportions suggestive of other than professional activity. The aggressive buying came principally from houses of speculative tendencies, but that was not necessarily a disparagement of its character, for, on occasions, highly speculative houses are put forward to stir the cauldron. The market responded very willingly, almost enthusiastically, to the leadership of Union Pacific when, in the last hour, it went from 154 to 155 on very active trading. Wolf Brothers were, perhaps, the largest buyers on this advance. On several occasions recently the stock has been checked around 154, halting just under that price or just above it, and reacting 1 or 2 per cent. On Tuesday it sold at 154⅛ and went back. Yesterday forenoon it got up to 154⅛ again and rested around 154 until late in the afternoon. The trading at 154 and at an eighth suddenly increased in volume, and then on the most aggressive buying that has been seen in the stock for several weeks it advanced rapidly to 155, the highest price at which it has sold since the break of 10 points from around 160. Simultaneous strength and activity in Steel common, which advanced to 41¼, gave the market a more convincing appearance than it has presented for many days. It needs the leadership of a few such stocks as Union Pacific, Steel common, and Pennsylvania to restore speculative confidence.

The word arbitration, used in relation to the threatened coal strike, had a wonderfully reassuring effect upon sentiment. The strength of coaler stocks, including the most conspicuous laggard of the group, Pennsylvania, and of the United States Steel shares, which have been depressed by fears of a coal strike, led Wall Street to adopt a complacent attitude toward the whole difficulty. When the market is strong people say: "We shall have a bull market, strike or no strike." When it is weak they are dubious again.

⁂

Perhaps the most valid criticism made of yesterday's market was that bullish speculation cast on the lines indicated in the last hour could hardly be kept up without causing acute flurries in money before the turn of things in April. Operators who have been encouraged to expect a better market in April are doubtless impatient. They would begin at once and take their chances with the money market in the next ten days, being themselves well provided, probably, with time money. Speculation last Winter would not wait upon the money market, and a bull campaign was carried through a period of almost prohibitive interest rates. The bulls who did that were able in January to get their profits, when money rates were low again and anybody could buy stocks. It is argued that the performance could be repeated on a smaller scale, and the probability of money flurries during the next eight or ten days need not interfere with the mechanical work of advancing prices preparatory to developing a broader general speculation in April with easier money.

⁂

Erie common of late has been uncommonly well supported in the market, deserving comment for that reason, and yesterday it was the object of aggressive speculative buying, on which it advanced rather easily. It begins to look as if the Erie might work out its salvation as a railroad proposition in a manner fully to justify the expectations of its friends. Its earnings are showing up remarkably well. The gross for February shows an increase of $922,338, and the net an increase of $601,347; the gross for eight months shows an increase of $3,854,417, and the net an increase of $1,620,096.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 28.—Active arbitraging between here and New York was the feature of this market to-day. Not only were Reading and United States Steel dealt in actively, but Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Erie were also animated. The rumor that President Mitchell would urge the anthracite miners to continue work through April helped Reading and Lehigh Valley, but Lehigh Navigation was a point lower.

There was a persistent demand for Cambria Steel, but Philadelphia Rapid Transit recorded only a single sale. It is believed that Mayor Weaver has signed the Market Street Subway ordinance and will announce the fact at to-morrow's meeting of Councils. West Jersey and Seashore was up a point, and Pennsylvania Steel preferred gained a similar amount. The remainder of the purely local issues were steady to firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Prices Score New High Record, but Slump on Curb Follows Closely.

Prices scored new high records on the Cotton Exchange yesterday, May selling up to 11.30 within the first half hour of trading and July to 11.22. Heavy rains over the cotton belt and strength in Liverpool and New Orleans made the shorts nervous. Their anxiety was aggravated by the activity of the bull leader and the Wall Street contingent, which was credited with some buying. There was very little outside interest in the market, and a moderate decline followed, May going down to 11.22 and July to 11.13. A tip was circulated that the forces in control were going to put May up to 11.40 before the close, and the market recuperated, selling again at 11.30 for May. The latter option closed at 11.27, ten points above the previous close, and July at 11.18, against 11.12 the day before. Liverpool advanced six points and closed barely steady. In spot sales there were 12,000 bales, of which 10,000 bales were American cotton. The New York spot market advanced 10 points, to 11.80 for middling and 12.05 for Gulf, against 8.05 and 8.30 last year.

After the close here the New Orleans market broke sharply on large selling orders from New York, at one time being down about 12 points from the highest. The close was 4 points below Tuesday's finish. On the curb here prices sold off seven to eight points from the close. It was rumored that there was a good deal of quiet selling of May by the leading holders.

Spinners, it is asserted, manifest more concern over the situation. A buyer for some of the down-east mills said that if the advance continues they will come into the market for supplies. It was said yesterday that Philadelphia spot interests had been selling to the mills to deliver on call, and the latter were beginning to demand the goods. This spot short interest, it is thought, may help along a further advance.

The bears, however, adhere to the belief that the strength is entirely due to manipulation. The strike outlook in the coal regions was used as a bear argument. It was argued that in the event of so many being idle, the consumption of cotton would be curtailed.

Port receipts were 16,472 bales, against 18,393 bales last week and 35,421 bales last year. Thus far this week, 76,262 bales have arrived at the ports. The exports were 12,618 bales. Receipts at the thirteen interior towns were 10,273 bales, against 10,988 bales last week and 27,705 bales last year; thus far this week, 30,436 bales, against 28,124 bales last week and 57,174 bales last year. Shipments, 12,578 bales, against 14,479 bales last week and 22,949 bales last year. The semi-weekly movement totals 42,029 bales, against 38,114 bales last week and 58,667 bales last year. Estimated receipts at Houston to-day are 1,800 to 2,300 bales, against 2,997 bales last week and 8,823 bales last year; Galveston, 5,500 to 6,500 bales, against 6,307 bales last week and 9,805 bales last year; New Orleans, 3,500 to 4,000 bales, against 2,198 bales last week and 10,599 bales last year. Port receipts since Sept. 1 are 6,669,782 bales, against 7,754,748 bales last year. Exports since Sept. 1 are 6,280,654 bales.

Cotton Opinions.

HUBBARD BROTHERS—Manchester has secured in one way or another nearly all the cotton it requires for this season's consumption, so that the competition for the remainder of the present crop will be between the Continental and American spinners. The market needs new factors to bring about a revival in activity, and we believe these factors must be found in the conditions governing the new crop rather than in the remnant of the old crop.

JOHN MUIR—The average outside speculator is inclined to hold aloof from the market at present prices, seeming to think 11¼c for the Summer positions a pretty fair price, and that with a good crop well under way, October and December might be high enough at 10½c. This latter feeling is beginning to permeate the entire trade, and it seems to us will take continued bad weather to bring about a change, as it is a pretty well-conceded fact at present that the reduction in acreage last year was exaggerated.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—The older the season grows the greater becomes the trouble of the spot short.

ATWOOD VIOLETT & CO.—An important feature of the contract market at present is the amount of short sales made by spot interests, with spinners holding the long end. The latter need the cotton, and are calling for it. This means that their long contracts will not be thrown on the market, and adds stability to the bull side, while at the same time the strength of the contract market enables the spinner to dictate his own price for his goods.

THEODORE PRICE received this from his chief statistician touring the South at Charlotte, N. C.: "Raining all day; fields barely touched and too wet for plowing before ten days. Little cotton held by farmers. Mill people heavily short and nervous."

THE WHEAT MARKETS.

News and sentiment were against the wheat market pretty much all day and prices at the close showed ½@¾c net loss. Rallies were confined to one or two slight uplifts following strength in corn. At the opening the market was affected by lower cables and weakness at outside points, notably the Northwest, where liberal receipts promoted a bearish undercurrent. Later the market met stop orders and declined under 85 cents for May. Throughout the afternoon it was weak at this level, closing around lowest point of the session. Practically all of the crop news from interior points was favorable, likewise weather conditions, which included good rains. Broomhall reported that the estimate for Victoria was 23,520,000 bushels, with an export surplus of 15,520,000 bushels. Last year's crop was 20,944,000 bushels. This had a depressive effect upon Liverpool, in connection with the favorable news sent over from this side as to crop conditions. The Paris market was also weaker, closing 5 to 35 points lower. Berlin was ¼@½ mark down, and Budapest net unchanged. The cash market locally was easy, closing thus: No. 2 red, 84⅝c, elevator, and 87¾c nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 87¾c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—Ignoring the weakness in wheat the corn market acted firm all day, and at the close showed ⅛@¼c net advance. Its main features were very light offerings and good bull support. Actual news had little important influence either way. Cables were easier and primary receipts 646,000 bushels, compared with 795,000 bushels last year. The seaboard clearances amounted to 339,000 bushels. On export account the sales were only 8 loads. No. 2 corn closed 54c, elevator, and 51¼c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 52¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 52¼c, free on board, afloat.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 28.—The local money market is practically unchanged.

Call loans, 5@6 per cent. Time loans, collateral, 4¾@5½ per cent. Time loans, mercantile paper, 5@5½ per cent. Clearing House loans, 5 per cent. New York funds, 10 cents discount. Clearings, $24,938,291; balances, $1,655,091. Sub-Treasury debit, $43,555.

Copper shares opened irregular, with trading rather limited. Boston Consolidated lost about a point in the first half hour, but later recovered a good part of the loss. United Smelting shares were strong. Balance of coppers generally show fractional declines. Trading in the miscellaneous issues was confined to a few specialties, and but nominal price changes were seen. American Pneumatic stocks were weak on profit-taking, both the common and preferred showing fractional losses for the day. The closing was quiet and steady.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Trading Slack and Featureless on the Curb.

Corn Products Active Before Listing on the Exchange—Mining List Heavy and Neglected.

Trading was sluggish in the curb market yesterday, even the mining shares were comparatively neglected. Prices, however, were generally well held. Corn Products Refining stocks, which were admitted to the Exchange yesterday, took on considerable activity on their last day on the curb. The common sold 1,400 shares and the preferred 1,600, both on a declining scale; the former closed at 24½, a loss of ¼ point, and the latter at 79½, a full point down. Interborough-Metropolitan gained ⅝ on somewhat better trading than has appeared in the stock lately, closing at 52. Trading in the mining shares developed little interest and was somewhat irregular.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 28.—The Baltimore market continues slow. Some of the less active issues had a slight rally. Trading in the favorite and speculative securities was slightly off. Consolidated Gas 6s sold in moderately fair blocks for ¼ loss. United Railways 4s were also on the weak side, losing ¼. Sparrow's Point 4½s declined fractionally. Norfolk Railway and Light 5s were ¼ higher.

In the stock list the feature of strength was First National Bank, which was the only stock to show an unusual opening, advancing 6¼ points. Houston Oil, which has been declining steadily, ran off ⅝ more to 11¼. Northern Central advanced ¼. The close was dull but steady. Sales: Bonds, $60,000; shares, stock, 1,117. The list:

NEWCOMBE A BANKRUPT.

Suspended Broker Has Nothing the Sheriff Can Levy On.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Isaac B. Newcombe, stock broker of 41 Wall Street, by these creditors: William J. Brown, $3,435 on an assigned claim of Camille Weidenfeld; John C. Thompson, $4,567, and Charles H. Coddington, $1,000, all for money lent to him and accrued interest. It was alleged that he is insolvent, and on March 24 admitted in writing his inability to pay his debts and willingness to be adjudged bankrupt. Deputy Sheriff Murray recently received executions aggregating $43,840 in favor of Stewart Browne, his former partner in the late firm of Stewart Browne & Co., but the Sheriff found nothing to levy on. Newcombe was suspended from the Stock Exchange on May 2, 1904, for five years.

The Auction Room.

Joseph P. Day conducted yesterday in the Real Estate Salesroom one of the most successful of recent auction offerings, finding buyers at satisfactory prices for twenty out of twenty-one parcels in his schedule.

Considerable interest centred in the sale of 85 Nassau Street, not only by reason of the property's value, but also because it had not changed hands except by inheritance since 1800, when Peter Corne bought it for £800. It brought forth lively competition yesterday, and was finally struck down to Charles Laue on a bid of $144,000.

Auctioneer Day's other offerings included a wide range of flat and tenement properties in many sections, from the lower east side to the Bronx.

Detailed results of the sales follow:

STRAUSS, BORN FIGHTER, SHOOTS HIMSELF AT 72

Police Doorman Was in Many Battles Here and in France.

ILL-HEALTH CAUSES SUICIDE

He Got a Medal from Marshal MacMahon for Bravery at Solferino—Police Headquarters Shocked.

Killed by his own hand, a veteran of three wars, who had come unscathed out of half a hundred battles, Dan Strauss, died yesterday morning. He was a fighter with the French fifty years ago at the battle of Solferino, and received a medal of honor from the hands of Marshal MacMahon, but he died a doorman at Police Headquarters in Mulberry Street.

Strauss was known at Headquarters as a philosopher, who took everything as it came and made no kick. That was until he became sick. On election day, 1904, the doorman caught a bad cold, and it stayed with him. Once the sunniest man in the building, the doorman began to show signs of melancholy.

Two weeks ago Col. Kipp, Inspector McLaughlin, and the other friends of the Alsatian veteran determined that he must take a vacation and get back his health. They told him so, and he was packed off to the country. Day before yesterday he came back, apparently much improved, and took his old stand. At night he went home to his flat, 208 West Seventeenth Street, and played pinochle with his wife. Laughing at the victory he had won over her, he went to bed at midnight. But he could not sleep. At 1 o'clock he started toward the bathroom with a sleeping powder in his hand.

A moment later Mrs. Strauss heard a single report. Her husband had shot himself through the head with an old-fashioned revolver like the ones policemen used to carry in the seventies. A physician was called in, and then another. With their help the old man lived until 6 o'clock, and then he died.

The news of the doorman's death came as a shock to Police Headquarters, where men are not easily shocked. Everybody knew Dan, everybody from the Commissioner down to the messenger boys. Inspector McLaughlin was Dan's hero—which was something to be, considering how many heroes the doorman had seen—and he was especially affected by the suicide of his follower.

Dan Strauss—if his full name was Daniel nobody ever heard of it—was born in Alsace seventy-two years ago, and to his dying day he bemoaned the loss of the province to France, and looked forward to the glorious day when it should be regained. He started out in life as a locksmith, but that was too peaceful a calling for him. He was a born fighter, and fight he must. So he enlisted as a bugler in the army of Napoleon III. Soon after that the war between France and Austria broke out, and he went to battle.

After that it seemed too long a time between fights for Dan, so he left France and came to New York. A policeman being the nearest thing to a soldier, when he disembarked he got a job on the old Metropolitan police force. In 1861, when President Lincoln made his first call for troops, Strauss joyfully turned in his shield and started to the front. He fought all through the civil war, and was in a dozen hard battles. He used to say that Malvern Hill was the hardest fight he ever saw.

Back to France went Dan in 1870, when the Franco-Prussian war began. There he joined the army with which he had fought in earlier days. Though he never got a commission, he was such a brave fighter against the enemies of France that he had two or three more medals when the surrender came.

But the medals were not all he got. Somebody died and left him some money. In those days, too, New York had its fascinations for the man with money to spend, and Paris could not keep Dan Strauss away from it. When he arrived here he formed a partnership with Maurice Vignaux and opened a billiard room at Fourteenth Street and University Place. Politicians and men about town used to make it a loafing headquarters. Dan was always the good fellow—a good liver and a good spender. He bought champagne for his guests and gave them credit. They liked Dan, but not all of them paid him. So he "went broke."

Then the veteran became a doorman and a doorman he was until he died. He held his job through all the passing administrations—through Walling and Murray and Burns and Conlin and Devery. They all knew and liked him. But none of them was so well loved and admired by Dan Strauss as Inspector "Billy" McLaughlin.

Several years ago Joseph Strauss, his brother, committeed suicide in much the same way. He, too, was in the Police Department, acting as clerk and interpreter.

STOLE A CENT, GETS 3 YEARS.

14-year-old Boy Robbed 10-year-old Girl—Goes to Reformatory.

For stealing a penny from Priscilla Summers, a lass of 10, Magistrate Crane sentenced Michael Petite, four years his victim's senior, to three years in the Reformatory yesterday.

Priscilla lives with her parents at 234 East Ninety-sixth Street. Tuesday night, after he had finished dinner, her father gave her a penny and told her to go to the newsstand at the Second Avenue corner and buy him a paper.

At the corner Michael Petite met her. Her penny was clasped tight in her little hand.

"What are you holding so tight, little girl?" he asked.

"It's a penny," she said, "and I'm going to buy a paper for my father with it."

"Give it to me," said Michael, grandly. "You don't know how to buy a paper. I'll do it for you."

Priscilla thanked Michael, but declined his offer. When she tried to pass on he caught her about the neck with one hand, while with the other he forced her fingers open and took her penny. Priscilla screamed loudly, and a policeman who was near by ran up and arrested the lad.

When arraigned before Magistrate Crane Michael looked hardly any older than did his accuser. He is very small for his age, but when he faced the court he wore a defiant air and made a face at Priscilla.

"What did he do to you?" asked the Magistrate of the prosecuting witness.

"He choked me," piped Priscilla, "and stoled the penny that my papa gave me. Then he told me 'Twenty-three.' Once, when I said that number to my mamma she washed my mouth out with soap. It's an awful bad number to say."

"My boy," said Magistrate Crane, "you are old enough to know better than to rob this little girl. I will send you to the Reformatory for three years. They will show you there how to behave."

Michael made another face as he was led away.

EXILED FROM COSTA RICA.

Four Politicians, Including an ex-President, Here on Enforced Vacations.

Four Costa Rican politicians, all of them officially exiled from their country, arrived in this city on the Atlas liner Sibiria from Port Limon yesterday morning. The exiles are Bernardo Soto, an ex-President of Costa Rica; Octavia Garcia, editor of the San José Republica; Aber Pacheco, a lawyer, and Maximo Fernandez.

The Costa Ricans were not inclined to say much. It was explained that ex-President Soto had forbidden them to talk for publication. The information was obtained from other sources that the banishment was caused by Soto's announcing himself a candidate for President against President Esquivil. When Esquivil heard of Soto's ambition he had Soto and his three chief lieutenants arrested and placed in prison in San José, the Costa Rican capital.

Soto and his companions were then told to choose between a long term in prison or a long sea voyage. They decided to take the voyage. In order that the plans should not miscarry the four politicians were then sent under guard to Port Limon and placed on board the Sibiria.

AUTO HUNG OVER DITCH.

But the Chauffeur Wasn't Scared, and a Broadway Crowd Cheered Him.

That Henry Hopper of 47 West 137th Street is an intrepid chauffeur was the verdict returned yesterday afternoon by an admiring jury of policemen of the Tenderloin Station, commanded by Roundsman Polley in Broadway.

Hopper was piloting a two-ton automobile hansom belonging to the New York Transportation Company down Broadway at Thirty-eighth Street. On the west side of the street ten Italians under an Irish foreman were busy in a hole eight feet deep and fifteen feet square, enlarging a sewer top. Just as Hopper's machine neared the excavation, the steering gear broke and the auto made for the hole. The Italians saw it coming and scrambled for dear life.

While they were struggling to get out, the automobile, with Hopper still in the seat, crashed into a fence of two-inch plank set upon barrels surrounding the excavation. The machine snapped the fence and then ran into a second one of equal thickness. The second fence stopped the machine just as it leaned over the hole—half way in and half way out—towering over the pale-faced Italians who were huddled speechless in a corner.

As the machine hung over the hole, Hopper looked down and laughed.

"Come out o' that," he commanded, "and help me out o' this." Then he lighted a cigarette and crossed his legs nonchalantly. A crowd of five hundred persons was soon on the scene.

Twenty men tried to pull the auto back to the street, but they couldn't budge it. Then somebody got a rope and hitched one end to the machine and another to a trolley car standing near by. The car backed away, but still the machine wouldn't leave the excavation.

Then they connected two cars, and by their combined force the hansom was restored to the pavement.

Hopper didn't want to leave his seat while all this was going on, but the police made him get down. After it was all over he jumped to the box again, put on the power and scooted west into Thirty-eighth Street. The machine was uninjured, and the crowd cheered.

NEW CHARGE AGAINST DUNN.

Accused of Stealing a U. S. Steel Bond and Sending It to Goslin.

An additional charge of larceny, based on a hitherto unstated offense, was made by Assistant District Attorney Lockwood in the West Side Court yesterday against Charles M. Dunn, the alleged accomplice of Alfred R. Goslin. Dunn is already under $6,000 bail on charges of perjury and conspiracy, and Goslin is now a fugitive, having failed to appear last Tuesday before Magistrate Wahle at the hearing on the charges against him and Dunn of having swindled the Western Gold Mining Company out of $29,500 worth of stock.

According to affidavits filed by Mr. Lockwood, Dunn was employed in 1901 as a clerk in the brokerage office of De Coppet & Doremus, at 30 Broad Street. The contention of Mr. Lockwood is that he was Goslin's agent there.

While Dunn was in the office a certificate for 100 shares of the United States Steel Corporation, worth between $9,000 and $10,000, disappeared. According to an affidavit by James D. W. King of the New York Bureau of Information, Dunn mailed the certificate to Goslin, who, through a third man, raised $7,500 on it.

Dunn waived examination yesterday on the charge of larceny and was held for trial.

ELECTRIC CONTRACTS ABROAD

Westinghouse Interests Get Orders Worth About $2,000,000.

The Westinghouse interests have obtained several foreign contracts within the last few days, particularly from Great Britain, Australasia, and South Africa. These orders range from the largest type of generators down to the smallest motors and represent fully $2,000,000.

One of the principal contracts is that placed by the South Wales Electric Power Distribution Company, which plans to generate electric energy to operate a number of the big Welsh iron, steel, and tinplate works. The London County Council has let an order worth about $250,000 for motor equipment for the electric cars to be run on the lines now being converted from horse to electric motive power in the northern part of London.

The South African orders include one for electric machinery for the Rand water works.

5TH AV. BURGLAR ROBS 6 HOUSES IN 3 NIGHTS

Plucky Miss Witherbee Almost Caused His Capture.

HE GOT AWAY WITH $15,000

Entered King, Griswold, Matthews, and Mall Homes—One Victim Was Waldo's Cousin.

Central Office detectives and the police of the Mercer Street Station are making every effort to run down a burglar who entered six houses in the North Washington Square section in half as many nights and got away with booty valued at approximately $15,000.

In every instance the marauder worked alone. In every instance he unlocked the front door as a means of exit, and cut the telephone wires before starting work. In at least two of the houses entered the indications are that he used some kind of a drug to overpower the inmates.

His first appearance was at the home of Edward King, 1 University Place, where he got jewels worth about $2,000 and $500 in cash. This was early in the morning of March 24. The following morning he was more industrious, if less fortunate. He began with a visit to the residence of Frank Griswold, 9 West Ninth Street, where the extent of his depredations, owing to the absence of the master of the house, can only be guessed at.

From the Griswold place he went to the home of Mrs. Pierre Mall, 8 Fifth Avenue, whence he must have been frightened away. Nothing daunted, he went across the street and entered the basement of the A Club, where he was discovered while in the rooms of the Japanese butler on the ground floor and forced to flight.

The next morning, March 26, he called at the residence of E. R. Matthews, 11 West Ninth Street, next door to the Griswolds. Here he got $1,000 worth of jewelry.

The star engagement was played just before daylight Tuesday morning, when he ransacked the home of Frank S. Witherbee, 4 Fifth Avenue, and got away with jewels valued at $10,000, although he was discovered by Miss Witherbee and only escaped with the servants at his heels.

It was the Witherbee burglary which aroused the Police Department to a realization of the fact that it had a burglar of unusual resources to deal with. Mrs. Witherbee is a sister of Mrs. Lispenard Stewart, who lives next door, and a cousin of Rhinelander Waldo, First Deputy Police Commissioner. The old Rhinelander mansion overlooks the Witherbee place from its rear windows. It is within a stone's throw of the residence of Mayor McClellan.

The burglar effected an entrance to the Witherbee house by climbing to the roof of an extension and opening a side window. He slipped downstairs, unlatched the front door, and made everything ready for departure. Then he went back upstairs and into the room of Mrs. Witherbee. The telephone wires leading into this room were cut and he cleared the dresser of jewels. Next he visited the room of Florence Ramboldi, a maid, getting more plunder there.

From the maid's room he entered the apartment of Miss Evelyn Witherbee, who is only 16 years old. Miss Witherbee was awakened by a noise at her bureau and turned to see what had caused the disturbance when the thief flashed a lantern into her face. The girl pretended to be asleep and the burglar, reassured, continued at his work. It was by this time a little after 5 o'clock.

For fully ten minutes the thief was busily employed. When he had gathered up every valuable in sight he tiptoed into the bathroom and into the room of the governess, Fraulein Duncan. Miss Witherbee slipped out of bed and into the hall, where she turned out the gas, thinking that if the man was armed and fired at her she would have a better chance for escape in the darkness. From the hall she went to her mother's room and tried to rouse her, but she was either sleeping very soundly or under the influence of some drug.

She finally waked the butler, Thomas McGuire, and the footman, Thomas Maxwell. As she did so the intruder ran down stairs. Maxwell was right after him as he raced through the front door. John Hoffman, a stableman, who is employed in the neighborhood, was passing at the time and had a good look at the thief.

"He was a young fellow," says Hoffman, "and was wearing a long overcoat and a visor cap. As he ran through Washington Mews, a narrow alley almost facing the house, he called 'Stop, thief!' himself, so that anybody in front of him would think he was a citizen pursuing a thief, and not a thief himself. He dropped a pair of opera glasses, several spoons, and some silver knives as he ran. I picked them up and gave them back to the Witherbee servant."

Mr. Witherbee said last night that he was sure the burglar must have used some drug to stupefy his wife and the maid, as they are both light sleepers. Among the articles stolen at the Witherbee house are a gold-filled watch, a gold hunting-case watch, a blue enameled watch, a watch with a diamond, pearl and sapphire border and a diamond pin attached; two silver watches, both heirlooms; a black enameled bar pin, studded with seven diamonds; a diamond and pearl arrow, a diamond and pearl belt pin, an emerald brooch and necklace, set with turquoises; emerald studs and sleeve links, a pair of diamond and ruby sleeve links, three studs set with sapphires, and a number of rings, pins, and necklaces set with diamonds and rubies.

At the King home, which was visited last Saturday night, the thief got in through a second-story window and visited five sleeping apartments in succession. Miss Elizabeth King lost a casket of jewels. From Mr. King's trousers the thief took $500 in cash. A diamond sunburst belonging to Mrs. King was also taken. The thief had adopted his usual precaution of opening the front door, and escaped by this exit without disturbing anybody in the house.

At the Griswold residence the burglar, after cutting the telephone wires, got some valuable pins belonging to Mr. Griswold, and was going through Mrs. Griswold's dresser when the noise awakened her. Seeing that he was discovered, the thief slipped down the front stairs and through the front door. The following morning he called at the Matthews home about 3 o'clock, where he passed through the cook's room. The cook was still in a dazed condition when, several hours later, the burglary was discovered. The man took his time about going through the house, sampled some cigars and wine in the dining room, and finally departed by the front door, after trying on Mr. Matthews's overcoat and throwing it aside.

As a consequence of the series of burglaries, the night watchmen about Washington Square are all on the alert, and Capt. Stephenson of the Mercer Street Police Station has detailed every man available for night duty. Deputy Commissioner Waldo looked into the Witherbee case personally, and his activity stirred up the Central Office to an unusual degree.

The police believe that the thief works with a rope ladder armed with a hook, by which he can catch a window ledge or the roof to an extension, and thus reach unprotected windows.

SCHOOL SITE PURCHASE.

Education Board Repudiates Metz's Charges of Extravagance.

The Board of Education at its meeting yesterday attempted to fasten upon the Controller's office the responsibility for unnecessary extravagance in the acquisition of a school site for Public School No. 67, at Central and Tompkins Avenues, Glendale, L. I.

The action of the board was prompted by the following statement made by Controller Metz at the first annual dinner of the Flushing Business Men's Association on March 20:

"Now I want to refer to the purchase of that school site for Public School No. 67, in the Glendale section of Queens. Three years ago a piece of ground there could be purchased for $1,200. The city didn't take it. A real estate man bought it for $900. He put up five houses at a cost of $14,000. We had to buy one of them at a cost of $5,400 and tear it down before it was completed.

"There is no reason why the city cannot buy vacant lots as well as the real estate speculators. There is no necessity for going around buying up flats and then tearing them down."

"Controller Metz should understand that the entire responsibility for extravagance in this matter is chargeable to the Controller's office and not to the Board of Education," said Richard Adams, Chairman of the Committee on Buildings.

Mr. Adams issued a statement on behalf of his committee in answer to the Controller's charges. In it he said that in 1900 arrangements were made with the owner of the property to acquire the lots for $1,200. Controller Coler said the price was too high and refused to assent to the purchase. It was after this that the owner of the property prepared to erect apartment houses on his land, and the Board of Education was obliged to acquire the lot next to the one on which the school was built in order to prevent cutting off light and air from the school building. In 1904 condemnation proceedings were authorized, and the lot was acquired for $5,565.71. Mr. Adams said that if Controller Coler had assented to the original terms for the purchase of the property it could have been obtained for $1,200.

The board passed a resolution requesting the Board of Estimate to authorize the issue of $300,000 corporate stock for the acquisition of a site on which to build a central supply depository. The plan is to acquire a site 300 by 200 feet as near as possible to the Board of Education Building on Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street.

Supt. Maxwell submitted a report showing that there are now 73,070 part-time pupils in the entire city. This is an increase of 7,276 over the same period last year. The part-time pupils are divided among the boroughs as follows: Brooklyn, 40,371; Manhattan, 25,592; Queens, 6,665; Bronx, 278; Richmond, 164. The total registration for all schools is now 571,915, an increase of 18,493 over the same period last year.

THE "AUTO COP" IN A SMASH.

Dillon's Wheel Broke When He Chased a Speeder—May Never Ride Again.

Detective John Dillon, known as the "auto cop" because he has done more to regulate traffic in the Bronx than any other officer, was probably crippled for life yesterday while dashing along Pelham Parkway in pursuit of an automobile.

Dillon spied the machine when it was going at the rate of about thirty miles an hour and gave chase on his bicycle. The man who was driving the machine crowded on the power as soon as he saw that he was pursued. The young woman waved her hand to the policeman. Dillon was going at a terrific rate when the fork of his wheel broke and he was thrown headlong.

The fall broke his left kneecap. He was attended by Police Surgeon Huggins of the Westchester Precinct and removed to his home. The physicians say that it is doubtful if he will ever be able to ride a wheel again.

Dillon's territory is in the extreme upper section of the city, including the Morris Park race track and Pelham Bay Park. Thousands of automobiles pass there daily, and as the roads are as smooth as a billiard table it is a favorite section for fast running. For several years Dillon has held the record for the largest number of arrests in the borough.

AID TO RUSSIAN LACEMAKERS.

Sale of Needy Peasants' Handiwork in Old Greenwich Village.

In a quaint studio building in the rear of 28 Jones Street, in old Greenwich Village, there was a sale yesterday of Russian brasses and laces. Interesting chains of hand-wrought silver and samples of laces were shown for orders. The sale was under the auspices of Greenwich House, for the benefit of its handicraft school and took place in the building where the students do their lace work.

Yesterday's sale of Russian lace was brought about by the present distress in the lace-making districts of Russia, which has forced the lace workers there to send as much of their handiwork as possible to this country. The settlement is selling this lace to help the Russian workers.

COMMISSIONER WARBURG OUT

Leaves Education Board—Speyer Declines Offer to Succeed Him.

Felix M. Warburg, a member of the Board of Education, whose term would have expired next January, sent his resignation to Mayor McClellan yesterday. The Mayor offered the place to James Speyer, the banker. Mr. Speyer declined on the ground that he could not spare the necessary time.

Already more than a dozen men have asked for the place. Rumor gives the preference to Marcus Moses, a member of the local School Board in the Yorkville district.

COAL MEN BREAK; STRIKE ORDERED

Anthracite Fields to be Tied Up on Monday.

500,000 MEN MAY QUIT

Soft Coal Miners Will Join ---Conferences Fail.

APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

Operators Request Him to Appoint a Commission to Investigate the Entire Situation.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 29.—A strike of miners, which it is confidently believed by their leaders will speedily involve between 400,000 and 500,000 men, will begin on Monday.

The Anthracite Miners' Scale Committee to-night issued orders for a total suspension on Monday morning of mining in the three anthracite districts, there being no time to confer about the contracts under which work has been carried on and which expire to-morrow night. This will call out about 150,000 workers.

The action of the anthracite committee followed upon the failure of the conferences of bituminous coal operators and miners of the central competitive and southwest districts to agree upon a wage scale.

The bituminous miners affected directly and indirectly by the disruption of the conferences number 384,500, distributed as follows: Pennsylvania, 160,000; Maryland, 5,000; West Virginia, 35,000; Virginia, 15,000; Ohio, 40,000; Indiana, 15,000; Illinois, 53,000; Iowa, 14,000; Michigan, 3,500; Kentucky, 4,000, and the Southwestern States—Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, and Indian Territory—40,000. Of these 120,000 are unorganized.

Operators of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio and those of Western Pennsylvania who are opposed to paying an increase in wages held a secret session to-night and adopted a resolution asking President Roosevelt to appoint a commission to investigate the coal situation.

Anthracite Miners' Action.

After the meeting of the Anthracite Miners' Scale Committee to-night President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers o America issued the following statement:

"The committee appointed by the Shamokin convention on Dec. 14 met to-night and had under consideration the letter signed by Mr. Baer, dated March 20, and wired him the following:

"'If agreeable to you, a meeting of the joint sub-committee will be held in New York at 10 o'clock Tuesday, April 3, for the purpose of further considering the wage scale in the anthracite field.' The committee having the matter in charge instructed the anthracite miners, except the men necessary to run the pumps and preserve the properties, to suspend work on Monday morning, April 2, pending further instructions from the committee appointed by the Shamokin convention.

"The entire Miners' Committee will meet in New York at 8 o'clock Tuesday night to hear the report of the joint sub-committee.

"JOHN MITCHELL, Chairman.
"T. D. NICHOLS,
"W. H. DETTREY,
"JOHN FAHY,

"Presidents Districts Nos. 1, 7, and 9."

The resolution adopted by the coal operators of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and those of Western Pennsylvania, who have opposed the payment of any increase in wages to the bituminous coal miners, was as follows:

"Whereas, The coal operators and the representatives of the miners of the States of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Western Pennsylvania having met in Indianapolis at the suggestion of the President of the United States for the purpose of endeavoring to agree upon a scale of wages and mining conditions for a period beginning April 1, 1906; and the parties having been unable to reach an agreement and having adjourned sine die; be it

"Resolved that we, coal operators of the States of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Western Pennsylvania, representing at least 80 per cent. of the tonnage in the territory involved, who have felt, and still feel, unable to pay any advance in wages at this time, do hereby propose that the President of the United States appoint a commission to investigate all matters which in the judgment of such commission have an important bearing upon or relation to the scale of wages which should be paid all classes of labor in and about the coal mines of the territory herein involved, and other conditions now imposed and insisted on by the United Mine Workers of America, such commission to report to the President of the United States its findings of facts, together with its recommendaions.

"Be it further resolved, That such commission have power to administer oaths and compel attendance of witnesses."

J. H. Winder of Ohio was Chairman of the meeting and C. L. Scroggs of Illinois was Secretary. A standing committee of two operators from each of the four States, with J. H. Winder, Chairman, was appointed.

The resolutions in full were telegraphed to President Roosevelt to-night.

In the heat of debate toward the closing of negotiations of the Central District Bituminous Conference to-day, Clarence Parker, President of the Madison Coal Company of Illinois, made an attack upon Mitchell. The miners' leader had asked Mr. Parker if he did not hold the dual position of President of a coal company and purchasing fuel agent of the Illinois Central Rail-

BURGLAR SHOT CARETAKER.

A Desperate Struggle in Woodbury G. Langdon's Morristown Home.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 29.—The Summer residence of Woodbury G. Langdon of 719 Fifth Avenue, New York, was broken into here at 11 o'clock to-night by a burglar, who shot William Paul, the caretaker, after a desperate fight.

Paul will probably die. His assailant escaped through a window without leaving a clue to his identity. Paul says he never saw the man before.

The caretaker was alone in the house, when he heard some one rummaging about in the dining room. He tiptoed to the door and surprised the thief at work. The men grappled and fought all over the room. Paul, who is a middle-aged man of powerful physique, says that his assailant was his equal in strength.

The burglar finally managed to draw a pistol, pressed it against Paul's shoulder, and fired. The wounded man fell, and his assailant fired a second shot, the bullet passing through his left arm. The burglar then jumped from the window, which he had pried open with a jimmy to gain an entrance.

The Langdon house is on Madison Avenue, and, although inclosed by private grounds, is near enough to neighbors for the sounds of the shots to summon assistance.

Paul was weak from loss of blood when Dr. Samuel Haven arrived. He said that the caretaker was in a critical condition. He is married and has a family.

There have been several robberies here this Winter, the last one occurring in Madison Avenue last Monday night. Four burglars were sent to State prison from this city last year.

YOUNG WIDOW SHOT HERSELF.

Then She Telephoned the Hotel Clerk—Mrs. Kay Will Probably Die.

Mrs. May Kay, a young Southern widow, attempted suicide last night in her rooms at the Hotel Alabama, 13 East Eleventh Street, by shooting herself in the abdomen. She was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital and will probably die.

Early last evening Gregor Kraischbaum, clerk of the hotel, got a telephone message from the young woman's room. She said: "Come up quick."

The clerk hurried up and found her lying on the bed. "I have shot myself," she said.

Dr. Travel of 27 East Eleventh Street was called.

"I shot myself," she repeated to the doctor. "I aimed at my heart, but was nervous and missed. It won't do any good to do anything for me, because I want to die."

Detectives Barnett and Ma ne found that the woman had come t this city from New Orleans. The detectives found this letter, written on the paper of the New St. Charles Hotel:

> New Orleans.
> My Darling Dear: I am leaving, but against my wish. If you love me please wait until my return. I simply cannot give you up. Yours sincerely, BILL.

It was learned that the young woman was a patient of Dr. P. E. Bush of 45 Charlton Street, who had treated her for nervousness.

Dr. Bush said last night that Mrs. Kay had come here to settle up the estate of her late husband, a banker. Her inheritance amounted to about $150,000. It has been learned by the police that a New York manufacturer, in business on Broadway, was an old friend of the woman. When she came to this city it is said that she gave this man funds and securities, for which she received no receipt. Her effort to get her property back is supposed to have weighed heavily upon her mind.

WALLACE FINISHES HIS TRIP.

Has Traversed a Part of Labrador Never Crossed Before.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., March 29.—A telegram was received here to-day from A. Dillon Wallace, the Labrador explorer, announcing his safe arrival with his companions, Eaton and Stanton, at Red Bay after a successful trip by dog team down the coast from Ungava Bay. The telegram said:

> "Just arrived at Red Bay. Eaton, Stanton, and myself in good health. Fine trip down the coast. Start for home at once."

Wallace and Eaton left Ungava Bay during the latter part of August by dog train, and at Rigolet picked up Stanton, who had taken the back trail out of the interior in order to bring back word of the party's progress.

The trip completed by Mr. Wallace has never before been made by land. The country traversed was largely unexplored.

ARMSTRONG ANNOUNCES CHANGES IN HIS BILLS

Committee at Work Until 1:30 o'Clock This Morning.

NEW EXPENSE ALLOWANCES

Reserves May Be Increased Conditionally—Companies May Hold Collateral Trust Funds.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Friday, March 30.—The Joint Committee on Insurance of the Senate and Assembly and the Armstrong Committee held a secret session lasting from 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 1:30 o'clock this morning, in order to perfect certain amendments in the insurance bills that will come before the Legislature.

Charles E. Hughes sat with the committees and advised them on the various matters which came up in the course of the nine hours' session and on actuarial matters they were advised by Messrs. Rhoades, Welch, Lunger, and McClintock.

Chairman Armstrong, this morning, after the adjournment, announced the following final disposition of the bills:

The bills relative to lobbying and political contributions and the code amendments relative to perjury, false entries, receiving rebates, and acquisition of property are reported with only formal amendments. The amendments to the insurance generally relative to standard forms and co-operative and assessment insurance are incorporated in one bill, and the changes are largely formal except that it is provided that every foreign company must do business within the limits of expenses laid down for the regulation of domestic companies or must leave the State.

Section 87, relating to contingency reserves, is amended so that the hundred-million-dollar limit is reduced to $75,000,000. The effect of this is that after a company has accumulated $75,000,000 of assets, it may have not only a 5 per cent. reserve, but annually the Superintendent of Insurance may permit the company to hold a larger reserve to meet depreciation or other emergencies.

Section 97, relating to loadings on premiums, is stricken out. Section 98, relating to the limitation of expenses, is materially modified. It provides that a company's first year's expenses for first year's business must not exceed first commissions to agents; second, salaries exclusively paid for new business paid in lieu of commissions; third, medical and inspection fees; fourth, advances to agents shall not exceed the loadings and margins originally provided.

This allows about 50 per cent. for new business to agents on ordinary life contracts. The agents are also allowed nine renewals of 7½ per cent. each, with a 2 per cent. collection fee after the tenth year. The companies are given the privilege to compute these nine payments over any period not less than three years, and providing that not more than two-fifths of the commuted amount shall be paid in any one year.

The section relating to investments is also modified to the extent of permitting the companies to hold the collateral trust bonds they now have, but not to accumulate any more of this class of securities.

This change will save the companies from disposing of about $100,000,000 of collateral trust bonds which they now hold, and they will not be compelled to sell them with their stocks. All the rest of the section stands as originally drawn.

The changes in the section relating to standard forms of policies are wholly actuarial. It is provided that the standard form shall go into effect Jan. 1, but prior to Oct. 1 the Superintendent of Insurance, after consultation with the companies and after a hearing, may modify the forms, but only to the extent that they will not conflict in any way with the general law on the subject.

JORDAN ILL IN ATLANTA.

Equitable's ex-Controller Will Return When He Pleases.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 29.—Thomas D. Jordan, ex-Controller of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, whose presence was vainly desired by the Armstrong Investigating Committee and whose whereabouts remained unknown for so long, arrived here this afternoon from Hot Springs, Ark. He is stopping with a friend.

Mr. Jordan is accompanied by Mrs. Jordan.

Jordan, when seen to-night, seemed to be weak physically. He said:

"I have done nothing wrong, and did not run away from New York as has been charged. I left New York because I was in bad health and needed a rest. My wife also was ill. We went to Hot Springs, Ark., and did not attempt to conceal our whereabouts.

"All this talk about my running away and being afraid to appear as witness before the Armstrong Committee is the veriest nonsense.

"I expect to return to New York as soon as I get ready. I have nothing to fear. The people who have been attacking me might have been in better business."

Mrs. Jordan was present. She also seemed to be weak and showed some emotion and much indignation. She said:

"We expect to return to New York when it suits us and not before."

BUILT CABINS IN A HURRY.

News by Wireless of a Glut of Steamship Passengers at Kingston.

The steamship Atrato of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, from Colon, via Kingston, Jamaica, while in communication by wireless with the De Forest station yesterday, reported that on her arrival at Kingston so many persons were awaiting transportation that twenty carpenters were put to work building cabins in the first and second saloons. Second cabins were used to accommodate first cabin passengers.

The Atrato has 270 first-class passengers on board, making it necessary to serve a second table at each meal.

The Atrato arrived off Sandy Hook at 9 o'clock last night. She will reach her pier about 8:30 o'clock this morning.

Bowery Track Removal Bill Passes.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—The Oliver bill, compelling the New York City Railway Company to remove two of its tracks on the Bowery, was unanimously passed to-day by the Assembly.

DOG GUARDS SICK MISTRESS.

Mary Ringrose Lay on Sidewalk Senseless—Had Diamonds and $40.

At the corner of Thirty-second Street and Madison Avenue Patrolman John Harms of the Tenderloin Station saw an object lying on the sidewalk about midnight last night. He went across the street to investigate and found a large St. Bernard dog, growling fiercely and preventing any one from coming near. It took the policeman ten minutes to appease the dog, and then he found that a well-dressed woman was unconscious on the sidewalk.

He called an ambulance from the New York Hospital and had her taken to the Tenderloin Station, the dog following. Dr. Cottle worked for an hour over the woman before he could restore her even partly to consciousness. He removed her to the New York Hospital.

On the dog's collar were the words "Hyacinth Ringrose, New York City." There is a lawyer of that name with offices at 271 Broadway, who lives at 343 Fifth Avenue. The police inquired at the latter address and were informed that Mr. Ringrose was ill with rheumatism and could not go to the station. Later on he sent a maid for the dog. The maid said that the woman was Mrs. Mary Ringrose and that she was an artist.

When found she was wearing seven diamond rings, a diamond clasp round her neck, and had $40 in her pocket. The doctor said he could not tell if she had been drugged. She was not held as a prisoner, but was entered on the station house books as sick.

POLITE LAW ENFORCEMENT.

A Recent Incident of Mr. Jerome's Suppression of Gambling.

District Attorney Jerome strolled into an uptown hotel the other night and calling the hotel detective aside desired him to call up a certain house not a long way from Broadway and summon to the telephone a man whose name he gave.

"But, Mr. Jerome," protested the hotel detective, "that's a gambling house."

"Never mind," responded the District Attorney. "You call that man up and tell him to come over to the hotel."

The detective complied, a little doubtfully, and in a few minutes in walked one of the best known gamblers who ever presided over a roulette wheel. He seemed disturbed when he met the District Attorney, but his greeting was as cordial as could have been expected.

"What's the trouble, Judge?" he asked.

"The trouble is," said Mr. Jerome, "that you are not keeping your agreement with me. You have opened your place and are running it. Now, I want to know what you have to say?"

"Say, Judge," responded the gambler. "That ain't quite right. I agreed with you to close the place I was running then, and not to open again during your term of office. Well, I did it. But you can't say that you are filling that term of office now, can you? It's a fresh deal, and the old agreement is off."

Mr. Jerome thought for a moment. Then he laughed.

"I guess you've got me," he said. "But that doesn't matter. You'll have to close now, and I mean by that, close at once."

"All right, Judge, it's a go. You have the cards," agreed the gambler, "but don't be too hard. I've got so and so and so and so up there now. [He mentioned several well-known names.] "I can't put those people out in the street. Give me till to-morrow."

"Won't do!" announced Mr. Jerome. "I said at once, Whom you may have up there is no affair of mine. You've got to obey the law."

There were more protests, but they were of no avail, and finally the gambler agreed to the inevitable. Half an hour or so later Mr. Jerome's detectives reported that the visitors at a very handsomely furnished house near Broadway had left it in no good humor and the lights were out.

DIPLOMATS BLAME AMERICA.

Treatment of Mr. Storer Harshly Criticised—He Returns to Vienna.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

VIENNA, March 29.—Bellamy Storer returned to Vienna this morning to find himself in a highly ambiguous and disagreeable position. According to diplomatic procedure he is Ambassador until letters of recall are presented by himself or his successor.

In the Diplomatic Corps here the manner in which Mr. Storer has been treated is criticised in terms which cannot be reproduced without disregarding the susceptibilities of the American Government.

It seems that at Washington the idea is entertained of conducting diplomatic intercourse solely through the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador there and the State Department until the lapse of time shall have repaired the consequences of firing out Ambassador Storer in hot haste and appointing his successor without consulting Vienna. But the Austro-Hungarian Government hardly appears to favor this lopsided suggestion and seems to hope that the State Department will find means of releasing it promptly from its present unpleasant predicament.

VIENNA, March 29.—The retiring American Ambassador, Bellamy Storer, returned here from Egypt this morning. In an interview he said:

"My resignation was requested on March 6 in a telegram from the President and was sent in on March 7. I have not seen what the newspapers have been saying, as I have been ill and have not been allowed to receive newspapers or letters. I am not going to resume charge of the Embassy. Mr. Rives will remain as Chargé d'Affaires."

Mr. Storer, when informed of the gist of the reports in circulation concerning the reasons for his recall, declined to comment upon them or to say anything about the grounds for his recall or Mrs. Storer's alleged actions in Church matters.

Mr. Storer, who is still in poor health, has been suffering from Egyptian fever. He said:

"I intend to return to America after having settled my personal affairs, but I think I shall not leave Vienna before the end of May. I intend in future to spend half the year in America and half in Europe."

MURDER AND SUICIDE IN C. N. BLISS'S STABLE

Coachman Shoots Groom, Then Kills Himself.

LITTLE SON SAW THE CRIME

Murderer Thought His Victim Sought His Place — Had Just Taken Mrs. Bliss Out Driving.

David Burhans, a coachman employed by Cornelius N. Bliss, shot and killed Thomas Hagerty, Mr. Bliss's groom, yesterday afternoon in Mr. Bliss's stable, at 142 East Thirty-ninth Street. He then sent a bullet through his own head and died instantly.

The only witness to the deed was Burhan's son, Thomas, an assistant groom. He rushed into the street for a policeman, and, seeing Patrolman William Beekler of the East Thirty-fifth Street Police Station, shouted:

"Come quick! My father has shot the groom and killed himself!"

Hagerty was removed to Bellevue Hospital, where he died last evening at 8 o'clock. Two bullets entered the back of his head.

Early in the afternoon Burhans drove the brougham around to the Bliss residence, at 198 Madison Avenue. He took Mrs. Bliss out driving, returning about 5 o'clock. After unharnessing the horses he pushed the brougham into a rear room of the barn, where Hagerty began to clean it.

Burhans's son was in the front of the barn, cleaning the harness. A few minutes later he was astounded to see his father with a revolver in his hand peering through the glass door which opens from the main barn into the cleaning room. Before he could cry out Burhans had fired three shots through the glass. One struck the brougham and the other two took effect in Hagerty's head.

The son rushed forward, but the next instant his father shot himself.

Mrs. Burhans, who lived with her husband and four children on the third floor of the building occupied by the stables, rushed downstairs upon hearing the shots. When she saw her husband and Hagerty, she became hysterical.

The only reason that can be given for the deed is an attack of insanity. Burhans had always been friendly toward Hagerty, but for the last year he had been subject to periods of melancholy, during which he appeared to become suspicious of the groom.

Coroner Shrady, after investigating the case with Detectives Hart and Higgins, said that Burhans evidently believed that Hagerty was trying to get his job away from him, and that the idea preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to make him insane. Last Summer Mr. Bliss, noticing Burhans's nervousness, sent him away for a vacation. He returned, after being gone only a day, and insisted on going to work.

Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., made this statement last night:

"No member of the Bliss family has any knowledge of the unhappy event, but we believe that Burhan became suddenly insane. Both Burhan and Hagerty had been in the employ of the family about fourteen years. They were temperate, faithful, efficient, and highly regarded by the family. Their wives and children will receive every attention."

Hagerty, who was 45 years old, lived with his wife and three children at 217 Lexington Avenue.

A PUNCHED NICOLL—HEARST.

Congressman Says His Critic Is Part of Belmont's Small Change.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 29.—W. R. Hearst to-night gave out a reply to De Lancey Nicoll's attack on him, saying, among other things:

"Privately, Mr. Nicoll is Mr. August Belmont's paid attorney in a suit now pending against me in the courts. Politically, Mr. Nicoll is a sort of phonograph for Mr. Belmont. Mr. Belmont talks certain things into Mr. Nicoll, and Mr. Nicoll talks them out, so that when Mr. Nicoll opens his mouth what issues forth is merely 'his master's voice.'

"Mr. Nicoll is owned by Mr. Belmont. He isn't much to own; he is a kind of punched Nicoll. But he is Mr. Belmont's Nicoll quite as much as any nickel that comes into Mr. Belmont's pocket as a Subway fare.

"Mr. Belmont says I am not a good Democrat. That is sad. Since when has Mr. Belmont become a good Democrat or a good judge of a good Democrat? Was he a good Democrat in 1896? Or in 1900?

"No, Mr. Belmont is never a Democrat unless there is something in it for him. He was a Democrat when he could get part of a hundred-million-dollar bond steal, as he did under Cleveland. He was a Democrat when he hoped to get further favors of the same kind through the success of his private Presidential candidate. He was a Democrat during the last New York City campaign, when he had McClellan's pledge to deliver the franchise if he would buy the election for him, but never patriotically nor unselfishly is Belmont a Democrat.

"Mr. Belmont finally says in a frenzy of phonographic eloquence that I am dishonest. That, too, is very sad. Well, if I am for sale, why doesn't he buy me as he buys his Nicolls, his Parkers, and his McClellans, his Murphys, and his Pat McCarrens?

"Mr. Belmont knows one thing better than he knows anything else, and that is that not all his millions will buy one little editorial paragraph in the smallest of my newspapers."

Hawaiian Stamp Brings $350.

A great philatelic rarity was in the collection of F. M. Ambrose of this city, which was sold at auction at 24 West Twenty-sixth Street last night. This was the thirteen-cent Hawaiian missionary stamp which was issued with the two and five cent stamps in 1851. It is one of the rarest of existing stamps. The two-cent stamp of this set is said to have been sold privately in London for $5,000. The thirteen-cent stamp sold last night for $350 and was bought on order.

HARLAN OFFERS TO RESIGN.

May Quit Supreme Bench to Take Charge of Church Work.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The Post to-morrow will say that Associate Justice John M. Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, announced to the officials of the New York Avenue and Assembly Presbyterian Churches Wednesday night that if the latter would consolidate with the former, the Assembly Church giving $25,000 from the sale of its present property, as a nucleus for a fund to build a new building for the two consolidated churches, he would resign his place on the Supreme bench to take personal charge of the work and see that it proved successful.

To-night the congregation of the Assembly Church adopted a resolution for union with the New York Avenue Church with provision for the $25,000 to be used for the new church.

CAPT. O'BRIEN UNDER KNIFE.

His Condition Very Serious, but Dr. Phelps Thinks He Will Rally.

Capt. Stephen O'Brien of the Leonard Street Police Station was operated upon yesterday afternoon in St. Vincent's Hospital and, according to the hospital officials, his condition is very precarious.

For two weeks Capt. O'Brien has been suffering severe pains, but kept on duty. His condition was the result of an injury he suffered about twenty years ago.

The operation was performed by Dr. Charles Phelps, who said later:

"The operation, I am sure, will prove successful. Of course the Captain was very weak afterward, but I think that he will rally in a few days. He will, however, be compelled to remain in the hospital for at least three or four weeks."

Capt. O'Brien was on the most recent list for promotion for Inspector. He was made Acting Inspector by ex-Commissioner McAdoo, and through his efforts the present traffic system was put into force.

PEACE TEMPLE PLANS START.

American Designs for Hague Building Sent Out Without Marks.

Vans crowded East Forty-first Street yesterday afternoon to carry away with them what looked like canvases from the architectural firm of Carrere & Hastings, 28 East Forty-first Street.

Each one of the frames, destined with their designs for the building of the Temple of Peace at The Hague, was to be taken to Holland without any mark to show from what country it came, as the award for the Peace Temple is to be given by an international jury.

The competing countries are the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Austria, and Holland. Firms from each of these countries were selected after a contest.

The Rhode Island made 19.01, and the Virginia 19 knots, at their trials a few months ago.

ORDER FROM BENSEL, ESQ.,

To His Dock Department Subordinates to be His "Obedient Servants."

Commissioner Bensel of the Department of Docks and Ferries caused city officials to sit up and take notice yesterday, when they read one of his communications to his subordinates, as published in the dull and dreary columns of The City Record. Here it is:

> All communications to the Commissioner of Docks shall be addressed "J. A. Bensel, Esq., Commissioner of Docks, Sir," and shall conclude "Very respectfully, your obedient servant."

Officials now are wondering what will happen to communications which may be otherwise addressed. A partial explanation of the Commissioner's notion was that he was educated at Oxford, and imbibed the "your obedient servant" clause from a perusal of British State documents, in which it is uniformly used.

WHY HUNTER WASN'T THERE.

Telephoned Revolutionists' Meeting of an Important Domestic Event.

It was after 8 o'clock last night and an audience in Grand Central Palace was growing impatient because the biggest Russian revolutionists' meeting held in the city was not yet begun and the famous Russian revolutionary, Nicholas Tchaykoffsky, had not spoken, when the manager of the meeting, Alexander Alernkoff, was called to the telephone. Robert Hunter, the author of "Poverty," who married the sister of James G. Phelps Stokes, Caroline M. Phelps Stokes, was to have presided at the meeting and had promised to be there. It was he who telephoned to Mr. Alernkoff.

"I can't come to the meeting," said he.

"But," pleaded Mr. Alernkoff, "the meeting is a big one. Tchaykoffsky is here, and the audience is impatient. It is after 8 o'clock already. Please come up."

"But it is impossible," declared Mr. Hunter. "You see—my wife—there's a new Hunter—"

"You don't say," excitedly said Mr. Alernkoff. "When did that happen?"

"Just now," responded Mr. Hunter. "I can't be at the meeting now, of course."

"I see, of course not. I'm sorry. No, I'm glad. Congratulations. Congratulations. Good-bye."

Mr. Alernkoff, in his excitement, forgot to ask Mr. Hunter whether the child was a boy or a girl.

JEROME'S REPLY TO HIS CRITICS

He's No Censor of Morals but a Public Officer.

SEES MORAL OBLIQUITY

In Insurance Cases, but Law Must Guide Him.

GAPS IN THE EVIDENCE

He Can't Jump Them Lightly—Believes He Was Elected to Exercise His Best Judgment, and He Will.

District Attorney William Travers Jerome talked freely with a TIMES reporter last night about his recent actions in regard to the allegations against the insurance Directors, the criticisms which have been passed upon him, and the course he intends to pursue.

Here is what Mr. Jerome said:

"It would be an endless task to take up and discuss the various phases of this insurance question. I am quite as likely as anybody else to make mistakes, but I have at least one advantage over most people, and that is that I know something about the subject with which I am dealing. I shall go on and do the best I know how, believing that those who know me will at least have faith in the integrity of my purpose, and I shall be content with the approbation of my own conscience and of those friends who know enough about the circumstances to know that I have done, am doing, and will do all that I have capacity and power to do.

"Should the Supreme Court see fit to grant my motion for a Grand Jury to sit in the May term of the Supreme Court, Criminal Branch, I shall present to it fully and in detail all the evidence available in regard to the matters developed by the Armstrong Committee and such other matters as I may become apprised of.

"It would be impossible and improper for me at this time to indicate what I believe will be the result of such investigation, because, much as I know about the situation myself, there is much more which I do not know, but which I hope to ascertain.

"I can only say that my advice to such a body, if it assembles, will be for it to strictly obey its oath of office and to follow the criminal code which enjoins upon grand juries not to indict unless in their opinion the evidence would warrant conviction if they were sitting as a petty jury. On the other hand, the probability or improbability of obtaining a conviction at the hands of a petit jury will not interest or influence me in the slightest degree. If the evidence brought out is such as would warrant a petit jury in convicting, my advice to the Grand Jury will be to indict and to place the responsibility of convicting or acquitting where the law places it—upon a petit jury—regardless of what my personal opinion may be as to the probability or improbability of the conviction.

Grand Jury's Duty.

"But I must reiterate that if the evidence is of such a character that the Grand Jury, if sitting as a petit jury, would not convict, I shall advise it that its duty under its oath, and the express and explicit provisions of the criminal code, is not to indict.

"There has been in the whole insurance situation much misconception, the major part of which has been entirely honest and natural, but no small part of which has been willful and dishonest. It is extremely natural that laymen, perceiving that one group of transactions constitute a criminal offense, should infer that all groups of transactions involving the same element of moral obliquity were equally within the criminal law. While it may be that all groups of transactions involving some moral wrong should be within the criminal law, it is not a fact. The hysteria which has led to the denunciation of certain transactions as crimes is met by some at the other extreme by endeavoring to justify the same transactions in the forum of morals. Both positions are equally unsound. No right-minded man can become familiar with the great bulk of things shown by the evidence taken before the Armstrong Committee and for a moment justify them in the field of morals.

"And yet not a few of the things most severely condemned are absolutely not within the range of the criminal law.

As a Man and as a Lawyer.

"In dealing with the situation, I have been placed in a very difficult position. I have been compelled as a lawyer and under my oath of office to deal with problems in an official capacity purely from a technical legal standpoint, while as a man I have felt the bitterest condemnation for the very transactions in which I was unable to detect criminality within the meaning of the law.

"While the Armstrong Committee was in session I did not believe that it was wise to undertake any investigation of the matters from a criminal standpoint. Mr. Hughes came from Europe, and at once entered upon an investigation of a most complex and difficult situation. Had he been given six or eight weeks of time to prepare the matters in the quiet of his office there would have been many things eliminated which were presented to the committee. But by the exigencies of the case he was forced, as it were, to dress and undress in public, and after pursuing many matters to a certain extent he left them and went over to others. It was no part of his duty either to smirch, nor, on the other hand, to vindicate the reputation of individuals. His duty was simply to obtain as far as he was able facts which might inform the mind and conscience of a presumably, at least in law, honest legislative body so that it might enact wise legislation on the subject.

"The consequence has been that many things are assumed to exist which as a matter of fact do not exist, and that many men are guilty of crimes which from the standpoint of the criminal law they have not committed. It is one thing to infer the commission of crimes as one sits quietly in his own office, and quite another thing to prove the commission of the same crimes by legal evidence beyond reasonable doubt. There are many gaps in the chain of evidence which in the daily affairs of life we can easily skip over, inferring that certain things must exist from the very nature of the transactions. But in a court of law these gaps have to be stopped and the chain of evidence is no stronger than its weakest link.

The Evidence of Accomplices.

"Moreover, a rule of law not commonly understood is that no man can be convicted or even indicted upon the testimony of an accomplice uncorroborated by other legal evidence.

"This is not the rule of the common law. This, for instance, is not the rule of law in Missouri to-day. But it is the statute law of the State of New York, and however much we may be inclined to believe the testimony of accomplices, whatever conviction they may bring to our own mind, such testimony alone is insufficient not only for conviction but even for indictment.

"As I studied the insurance situation between intervals of sleep I reached the conclusion that there were a number of transactions which could be grouped together in a general class, and in respect to which it would be found that the question of criminality would depend purely on a question of law.

Political Contributions.

"One such class was the group of contributions for political campaigns. Had we had no authoritative decisions of the courts of this State on the subject of intent in criminal cases it would have been very easy to have presented to the court a creditable and plausible argument on this subject, an argument the tendency of which would have been to show that the making of such contributions constituted the crime of larceny.

"But we have a number of decisions of the court of last resort on the subject of criminal intent, and in view of these decisions it is by no means apparent how such acts can be shown to constitute larceny. My plans had been to obtain from the court an authoritative decision on the subject, binding alike on myself and the community until reversed. Had the court unequivocally informed the Grand Jury that such contributions constituted grand larceny, I should have proceeded at once before the Grand Jury to have indicted a large number of eminent men in this community who, as officers of financial institutions, had contributed the funds of those institutions in their care and custody for the purpose of political campaigns.

"If on the other hand, the court had made it clear that such transactions did not constitute larceny, I should have accepted the decision. But after the best efforts that I could make had left me in a situation in which I could not tell whether the court was of the opinion that such transactions, under the circumstances under which they were made, were or were not larceny, I was compelled to resort to the procedure of habeas corpus and certiorari to get from the Supreme Court such an authoritative decision.

"My Own Feeling Bitter."

"My own feeling in regard to the subject is bitter. I am of the opinion that it is not possible in any way, shape, or manner to justify in the forum of morals the contribution of corporate funds for political purposes. No plea of necessity or of patriotism, in my judgment, can for one moment in the form of morals be entered, and if these contributions do not constitute larceny the law on the subject ought to be immediately changed by the present Legislature by the enactment of a statute so unequivocal in its terms that any officer of any corporation using its funds for such a purpose would be subject to punishment exactly as if he had stolen those funds.

"The shortest way to ascertain what the law on the subject was in the absence of unequivocal instruction from the court to the Grand Jury was by the procedure which I have adopted, because whatever the decision below may be an appeal lies to the Appellate Division, and being an appeal from an order it can be brought up for final determination in the month of April. Because of the unfortunate misunderstanding which has grown up between the court and the Grand Jury and myself on the subject, the plans I had devised were of necessity in a measure changed. I had planned to cast into groups certain transactions, the criminality of which were doubtful, and to obtain a ruling from the court in regard to each of these groups. Each of the groups of transactions was such as was believed by the public at large to be highly criminal, and while in one sense it was no part of my duty as a law officer to consider public opinion, it seems to me that a public officer should, when it is possible, make it plain to the people at large the motives and reasons which guide and control his conduct.

Wanted Decisions.

"And I had hoped by the plans which I had formed to make it perfectly clear to the people at large what acts were criminal and what acts were not, and when I had cleared the ground by judicial decision—eliminating these large groups of transactions which are probably not criminal—to have the public at large informed and then attack the residuum and by an investigation before the Grand Jury ascertain clearly and definitely the facts and whether any, and, if any, what crimes had been committed.

"There never has been for one moment the thought in my mind that the bulk of the transactions condemned by the people generally could be justified from a moral standpoint, but on the other hand I was not a censor of morals in my official capacity. I was an officer sworn to perform my duty under the law as I found it.

"While the Armstrong Committee was in session I did not think it proper to institute in my official capacity any inquiry into the commission of offenses. Had at that time a criminal investigation been started many of the people who made such statements 'on advice of counsel' would have said at once:

"'Why, Mr. Hughes, I am perfectly willing to tell you anything I know. But I don't think I should be asked to speculate or to give hearsay testimony.'

"And many doors of information which were thrown wide open would have been closed.

"It is, however, fair to all connected with this matter to say that in no instance have I sought information from any official of an insurance company about any matter connected with it that I have not met with entire frankness and with, at least, apparent desire to fully apprise me of the real facts.

Praise for Hughes.

"There is one thing that has always to be remembered in considering the work of the Armstrong Committee and its counsel, and that is that it was in no sense a committee sent here to detect crime. It had clear and distinct functions, and the noble self-restraint evinced by its counsel in avoiding cheap plays is something that long after the memory of the committee's work is forgotten will dwell in the recollection of his professional brethren. It was a piece of work performed by the counsel of that committee in an admirable way under difficulties which only a few have appreciated or will understand. The effects of it will be far-reaching. Whatever the criminal law may ultimately be decided to be in regard to many of the transactions, transactions of a similar character will not be repeated in corporate management in this generation.

"It is an astounding thing in this situation that men who notoriously themselves have no character in the community are seeking approbation at the hands of their fellows by striving to ruin in popular estimation the character of men who for many long years have borne honorable names among us, however much we may at the present moment condemn, and properly condemn, them, in view of recent disclosures."

Praise for His Acts.

"There is one thing that from a personal standpoint has been extremely gratifying to me, and that has been the mail that I have received from all parts of the country, from people in all walks of life, from the most lowly to the most eminent, which has shown me clearly the fundamental and essential sanity of the people at large in moments of excitement. One thing that has interested me very much has been the number of blank proxies for life insurance companies that have been sent to me with the request that I use them to cast votes according to my judgment in behalf of the persons sending them.

"A public officer who is worth anything will do what seems to him to be his duty, whether he receives public approbation or not, but the man who tells you he does not care whether he receives praise or approbation is both a fool and a liar. He is a liar because he tells what is not true and he is a fool for thinking you believe him.

"A right-minded, public officer will do his duty whether approved of or not, but the difference between doing your duty as a public officer with public approbation and doing it in the face of public condemnation is the same difference that you will find between the running of a piece of machinery with well-lubricated bearings and one with sanded bearings, and while I suppose I am as indifferent and probably most indifferent than most men to criticism which is not, in my opinion, justified, I lay no claim to being superhuman.

"So it would be more gratifying to me in this difficult and complex situation to be doing my duty with general approbation than with what until within a few days has seemed like general disapprobation.

What He Was Elected to Do.

"I had always supposed that elective officers were chosen by the electors to exercise the best judgment they had. I never have supposed that over 126,000 people in the County of New York voted for me for District Attorney that I might exercise my judgment in this situation according to the direction of any group of newspaper men, however eminent in intellectual attainment and distinguished in personal character. They may sit aloft in tall buildings and lightly jump gaps which a District Attorney, acting under an oath of office, and compelled by the law to proceed upon legal evidence satisfying twelve men beyond all reasonable doubt, could never hope to get across.

"Many well meaning and sincere friends have said: 'Why do you rush into the breach? What business is it of yours? Why not let the Grand Jury assume the responsibility?' I do not think that such friends intended to advise a base course, but I was put in my job by the voters of New York County expressly not to pursue such a course, and, even though they may not approve of the course I have taken, I am but obeying the mandate which they gave me to exercise my judgment and my conscience in the solution of every problem which comes before me officially.

"It is always an easy thing to try to put responsibility on some one else, but to do this is never brave and seldom right.

His Treatment of Perkins.

"Some criticism has been made that in the arrest of Mr. Perkins he was treated with consideration such as should not have been extended to a 'felon.' I have yet to learn that Mr. Perkins becomes a felon until judgment of a competent court declares him to be such. It is said that he was not searched.

"The most elementary knowledge of the procedure in criminal arrests would teach one that the only search that is made occurs in two cases: First, when it is believed that the person arrested may have evidence of the crime about his person, and, secondly, when the arresting officer has reason to believe that the person arrested has on his person weapons which he may use in effecting his escape. The officer arresting Mr. Perkins had no reason to believe that he had evidence about his person showing the commission of a crime, or that he had dangerous weapons which he was likely to use in effecting his escape.

"It is also said that he was not arraigned before a Magistrate. When the Supreme Court of the State of New York issues a writ of habeas corpus directing an officer to produce forthwith the body of a prisoner before the court the officer who would disobey such a writ by arraigning the prisoner first before a Magistrate would face a term of thirty days in jail and a fine of $250 for contempt of court.

"Courtesy was shown to Mr. Perkins. I have yet to learn that it is the theory of our law that public officials shall not show courtesy to all. Courtesy was shown to Mr. Perkins, but is it so pleasant for a man who has always borne a good reputation to be arrested on a criminal charge that it becomes incumbent upon the chief criminal law officer of the county to add to his burden every iota of humiliation that it is possible for him to conceive?

"However, all these things must be as they may. I myself have perfect confidence in the ultimate good judgment of any good American people, even when for sinister motives a desperate attempt is made to mislead them. Nothing could be more amusing to the powers behind the scenes than the ease with which people are misled, for instance, in regard to the campaign contributions made in aid of my canvass for District Attorney last election. One interview with me which called out much editorial comment was entirely written by me—myself—and through a warm and old friendship of a very dear friend who was a newspaper reporter, the copy was furnished to his paper as an interview with me.

"In several of the New York City newspapers, as well as in a number of papers in other cities, was this interview commented upon and exploited as evidence that I had received large contributions from corporations during my campaign.

"In that interview, as reported, the only part that I had taken was to say in reply to inquiries of reporters, 'I am unwilling to make any statement on this subject for publication.'

"There was an old story in the Roman classics about one Scipio, I believe, who, having been summoned before the Roman Senate, would not descend to make answer to his accusers, but standing before that august body he tore in pieces the vouchers which would have confounded his accusers. This may be called pride, but there is more than one man in the world to whom the story appeals forcibly.

Refused Corporation Gifts.

"I may say here, however, for the satisfaction of the friends I may still have that not one dollar of corporate money from any corporation whatever was received in aid of my election, and no inconsiderable sums were returned because it was thought that they did not come from clean hands with honest motives.

"This perhaps may set at peace the uneasiness of mind of that resurrected skirt-dancer and whirling dervish of politics who long since was relegated to political obscurity by an unadmiring public because of his lack of moral worth.

The Metropolitan Case.

Regarding the criticism of his conduct in connection with the Metropolitan Street Railway jury fixing cases, Mr. Jerome said:

"Long before Judge Seabury, as I understand it, had ever heard of Julian, Bagg, or Tillinghast, my office had fully and carefully investigated the whole matter and was confronted with the rule of law to which I have before referred, that there could be no conviction or even indictment on the testimony of accomplices unsupported by other testimony, and that every man in the chain of bribery was an accomplice.

"In that investigation Julian had been repeatedly and carefully questioned as to whether he had any knowledge of his own in regard to this matter, and he had repeatedly stated that he was outside of any such knowledge. When, however, the case came up before Judge Seabury, the same Julian made affidavit that he overheard a conversation in the office of Mr. McCleary—something that he had persistently refused, at all times, to disclose to the District Attorney.

"And it was stated that the proceedings before Judge Seabury were faulty because the District Attorney had neglected to swear the witness Bagg to his statement, when, as a matter of fact, the District Attorney has no power to administer or cause to be administered, an oath.

Why He Left the Court.

"The reason why the District Attorney withdrew from that investigation was because before it had been taken up he had himself made a careful investigation and found that all petty cash vouchers in the Metropolitan Company's affairs were destroyed at the end of the year, a custom which he understands prevails in all large concerns whatever their business may be.

"The District Attorney had himself in person informed Judge Seabury of this fact, and had offered to co-operate with him in every way, and counsel for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company had also given the same information to Judge Seabury.

"But even when in open court counsel for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company offered to put all the books and papers of the company at the disposal of Judge Seabury, the Judge replied by asking for the production of the vouchers which he had been informed had been destroyed. Then it appeared to the District Attorney that that was no longer a forum in which any self-respecting lawyer could consent to remain unless he was compelled to.

"The Metropolitan had in its trial department, as far as I can learn, for a number of years indulged in practices—or at least its investigators had—which deserved the condemnation which they have received, until at last the company got in such bad odor with the courts that it looked about for an active and honest man to take charge of this department, and so conduct it as to regain the confidence of the courts and Judges.

Praise for Quackenbos.

"In this situation it retained Mr. Quackenbos. I am not laboring under the delusion that it pursued this course from altruistic motives. It pursued them, of course, from selfish motives, but it did pursue them, and Mr. Quackenbos came to this city with an honorable name and reputation. He sought to carry out an honest policy, and the first thing he did was to consent to the setting aside of three verdicts in favor of the railway company. In two of the cases he brought affidavits to my office and sought indictments for subornation of perjury for the agents for the company. If a man is moved by such motives, what he received in Judge Seabury's court is surely an illustration of the irony of fate."

JEROME NOW DEMANDS A SPECIAL GRAND JURY

Wants One to Take Up Insurance Matters—in May.

HIRES HUGHES'S CHIEF AIDE

Many Things Need Investigating, Says the District Attorney—Justice Dowling Will Decide To-day.

District Attorney Jerome applied yesterday to Justice Dowling, in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, for a Special Grand Jury to consider insurance matters in May. It was made known that he was enabled to take this step now by the return from a Southern vacation of Matthew C. Fleming, who was the principal assistant of Charles E. Hughes in the Armstrong insurance investigation.

Mr. Fleming has been engaged by Mr. Jerome as his chief aide in the insurance cases. It is understood that he will be appointed an Assistant District Attorney to fill the existing vacancy on Mr. Jerome's staff.

It was pointed out last night that if he obtains a Special Grand Jury, which cannot be convoked until May, Mr. Jerome will postpone action in insurance matters until the appeal growing out of the arrest of George W. Perkins on the charge of stealing $48,702 from the funds of the New York Life Insurance Company and giving it to the Republican National Committee can have been acted on by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

Justice Dowling to Decide To-day.

Before making his application, Mr. Jerome conferred with Justices O'Gorman and Scott, who are scheduled to sit in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court during April and May, respectively, to make sure that it would be proper for him to apply to Justice Dowling. After ascertaining that no other matters but those relating to insurance would be laid before the Special Grand Jury, Justice Dowling took the application under advisement till this morning.

If he grants the District Attorney's request, the Commissioner of Jurors will have twenty days in which to prepare the panel from which the court is to select the jury. This provision of the statute was given by Mr. Jerome yesterday as a reason why he could not proceed with the investigation at once.

After being away from the building the early part of yesterday afternoon Mr. Jerome walked into the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court about 4 o'clock and talked with Justice Dowling in private before making his formal application. In court, having referred to the work done by the Armstrong Committee and the great bulk of the testimony given before it, Mr. Jerome said:

"In the course of the investigation many matters were developed which the learned counsel conducting it could not press to their final conclusions—partly because of lack of time, but more so because, with fine judgment and self-restraint, he kept within the limits of his strict professional duty. This was to ascertain facts enabling the Legislature to legislate properly upon matters affecting the insurance business in this State.

Many Matters Need Investigating.

"But as a result of his work many matters were disclosed which, in my opinion as District Attorney, require investigation at my hand, to make sure whether or not it can be shown by other evidence, coupled with that already adduced, that certain crimes have been committed in this county."

Mr. Jerome said that the ordinary Grand Jury is very busy and that to burden it with the insurance investigation would mean that either its special or its regular work would be inadequately performed. Having quoted the statute vesting in every Supreme Court Justice within the judicial district the power to order a special Grand Jury when, in his opinion, one is needed, Mr. Jerome mentioned that he had obtained from Justices O'Gorman and Scott an assurance that he was acting properly in making the application to the Justice presiding over the present term of the court. Then he added:

"I have decided to ask your Honor that such an order be made, so that in the May term of this court there may be a Grand Jury to investigate fully the matters developed before the Legislative Investigation Committee. I have given it very much care and attention, and would be prepared to proceed earlier, were it not that the law requires that the order should be filed in the County Clerk's office not less than twenty days before the commencement of the term for which the Grand Jury is drawn."

Other Special Grand Juries.

In reply to a question by Justice Dowling as to whether it was usual to apply for Special Grand Juries, Mr. Jerome said that one had been drawn only last January for the consideration of election cases after he and the Attorney General had agreed that such a step was required by the congestion of business. Mr. Jerome pointed out also that the Lexow investigation terminated in the calling of a Special Grand Jury. Justice Dowling said he would confer with the Presiding Justices of the department as well as with Justices Scott and O'Gorman before announcing his decision this morning. Then he asked:

"Do I understand that this Special Grand Jury is desired for the sole purpose of passing on the insurance cases?"

"The form of the order usually made does not specify the particular business," answered the District Attorney. "It is not confined by a proclamation of the Governor, like the Grand Jury drawn for an extraordinary term. It is generally drawn to attend the term and to transact such business as may be before it. But there will be no other business before it except the general insurance matter, and it will be fully occupied by that purpose."

Justice Dowling ascertained that Judge Foster will preside in Part I. of General Sessions—which includes charge of the regular Grand Jury—before he repeated his intention to decide on the matter this morning.

Recorder's Course in Doubt.

There was some speculation heard about the Criminal Courts Building yesterday afternoon as to what will be the attitude of Recorder Goff, who has charge of Part I. of General Sessions during April. He has been credited with an intention to force the insurance investigation as far as it lies in his power to do so. Whether he will think of proceeding after a special Grand Jury had been ordered for that purpose by the Supreme Court nobody was willing to foretell last night.

It has been noted in the recent differences of opinion between Judge O'Sullivan and the District Attorney concerning the criminal character of the insurance contributions to political funds that the Recorder, although not sitting this month, has been in frequent consultation with his colleague in Part I.

Not a word in regard to insurance was said when the regular Grand Jury reported to Judge O'Sullivan as usual about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The existence of this Grand Jury will expire to-day unless the court expressly orders a session for to-morrow.

MUTUAL MAY SUE THEM, TOO.

Gillette and Granniss Are Held Responsible for Vouchers Signed.

The report which the Truesdale Committee submitted to the Board of Trustees of the Mutual Life Insurance Company on Wednesday had, it was learned yesterday, a good deal to do with the retirement of Vice Presidents Gillette and Granniss, who resigned at the meeting at which the report was presented. It criticises severely the extent to which Dr. Gillette and Mr. Grannis appear to have signed vouchers for various items of expense, which, it is asserted, the Trustees knew little or nothing about.

As a result it was intimated yesterday that suits may be brought against one or both of the retiring Vice Presidents, although this particular report is understood to contain no particular recommendation on that point. If these are instituted they will raise the same question that is involved in the McCurdy suits—whether or not the Trustees can put upon the executive officers the responsibility for whatever waste and general wrong-doing there has been in the Mutual.

The McCurdys do not accept this view of the situation, and, inasmuch as all vouchers were passed on by the appropriate committee of the board, it is suggested that the Vice Presidents who resigned "to relieve the situation" will be disposed to think as the McCurdys do about the matter.

Among the immediate causes of the resignations of Dr. Gillette and Mr. Granniss, it is learned, was the practical elimination of them from the conduct of the company's business in the executive reorganization that has now been in progress. Assistant to the President Warren was brought in by Mr. Peabody for the express purpose of aiding in this work, as he has been something of a specialist in such matters and has occupied similar positions in other companies, including several railroad corporations.

It was in the course of Mr. Warren's work that the two Vice Presidents were transferred from the extensive offices which they long occupied on the seventh floor of the Mutual Life Building, to rather cramped quarters on the second floor, and were eventually eliminated from active connection with things. It is understood that one at least of the vacant Vice Presidencies will not be filled. The plans for the readjustment of the duties that Dr. Gillette and Mr. Granniss performed have not been worked out as yet.

First of the Insurance Bills Passes the Assembly Unanimously.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—The first of the insurance bills fixing Nov. 15 as the time for the election of the Directors and Trustees of the mutual life insurance companies of the State and legislating out of office the present incumbents, was passed by the Assembly by unanimous vote to-day.

The bill passed the Senate yesterday. It now goes to the Governor.

The Senate to-day advanced to third reading the bill of Senator Brackett, repealing the famous "Section 56" of the insurance law, under whose provisions no suit for an accounting can be brought by a policy holder against a life insurance company without the consent of the Attorney General.

WANTED HAMILTON INQUIRY.

Resolution by Tompkins Ruled Out of Order by the Speaker.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—A legislative investigation of Andrew Hamilton was unsuccessfully proposed to-day by Tompkins of New York, who offered a resolution to that effect. Speaker Wadsworth would not trust it to anybody, and after reading it ruled that it was not in order; that it was not a privileged resolution, and that it did not treat of any subject before the House.

The majority was rather thrown off its feet by the offering of the resolution. The "new deal" leaders scurried about wondering what to do, though fairly confident that the Speaker would gavel his ruling through if necessary. Tompkins took issue with him, and wanted to know what the Speaker called a privileged resolution, and if that resolution did not treat of a subject now before the House what did.

The Speaker was somewhat disturbed by the bold attempt to inject the subject of Hamilton's methods into the Assembly, and succeeded in preventing any reference to the resolution. Tompkins tried to talk to it on a question of personal privilege, but half the majority stopped him.

STOLE FROM THE MUTUAL.

Sentence Suspended by Judge O'Sullivan on a Clergyman's Son.

Judge O'Sullivan, in General Sessions, to-day suspended sentence on Walter Owen Jones, an assistant in charge of the loan department of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, charged with stealing from the company and altering the books to cover his thefts.

On March 7 Jones received $104 to send to W. L. McAlpine of 401 Court Street, Brooklyn. Instead of doing so he put the cash in his pocket, and to conceal the theft of the money made false entries in the books. The theft was discovered and Jones was indicted for forgery in the third degree. When brought up yesterday for pleading before Judge O'Sullivan the loan clerk admitted taking the money and falsifying the books.

Judge O'Sullivan received a letter from the boy's father, who is an Episcopal clergyman at St. John's, N. B., saying that he had previously been a good boy, but being away from home, in the commission of the theft he had yielded to a momentary impulse.

In suspending sentence Judge O'Sullivan said:

"The money you admit taking did not belong to the officers of the company but to the policy holders, and I want you to make restitution of the amount you pilfered. I am not going to bring disgrace on your family, because your father has devoted the whole of his life to the saving of others, and I believe that if you had been under his influence you would not have committed the indiscretion which you have admitted in court."

GREENFIELD, Mass., March 29.—James W. Mr. Alexander is still in a weakened condition, but he is recovering his strength daily.

COAL MEN BREAK; STRIKE IS ORDERED

road. Leaping to his feet Mr. Parker pointed his finger at Mitchell.

"Yes, and I have seen the time when you, Mr. Mitchell, were glad that I was a railroad official," he said.

"What do you mean?" shouted Mitchell in the midst of uproar.

"I mean that you accepted transportation from me," was the reply.

Mitchell raised his hand above his head, and in a voice trembling with emotion said:

"I deny positively that statement. I defy you to produce evidence. That is an infamous and untruthful statement. I demand that you produce evidence here to prove your assertion or withdraw it. In the presence of these miners who have trusted me for years as their leader, I insist on proof."

Ten minutes of bitter wrangling followed, during which Chairman Traer endeavored to preserve order. Miners all over the hall cried with Mitchell that the charge was untrue. Eventually the transportation matter was explained by W. D. Ryan, Secretary of the Illinois miners and Mitchell's close friend, who said he had solicited it himself without Mitchell's knowledge, and assumed all blame for the action.

Mr. Parker Explains.

At this the hall rang with shouts for Mitchell, and during the noise Mr. Parker offered the explanation that he meant to cast no suspicion on the personal integrity of the miners' leader.

Except for this bit of excitement the last session of the bituminous conference was a gloomy one. The conviction that peace was impossible was entertained by both operators and miners when they took their seats. The miners' convention had met in the morning and voted to stand firm on the demands for an increase in wages. That a strike was inevitable was realized by all. There remained only the formalities of winding up the discussion and taking the test vote.

Finally, Mr. Winder of the operators rose and moved the previous question in answer to President Mitchell's resolution that the miners be granted restoration of the 1903 mining schedule. Chairman Traer instructed Secretary Wilson to call the roll.

A. G. Moorshead, for the Illinois operators, voted "No." He was followed by the Ohio and Indiana operators, each casting a similar vote. For Pennsylvania, Francis L. Robbins voted "Yea." George A. Magoon, for the "independent" Pennsylvania operators, entered a protest in behalf of those interests. Then came the miners. Each State in turn voted "Yea" with Mr. Robbins.

"The motion is lost," announced Secretary Wilson, simply.

That was the end of the peace negotiations. There was an interval while the operators conferred regarding the nature of the adjournment motion. Some favored an adjournment subject to the call of the Chairman. Mr. Winder was steadfast in his contention that the convention should adjourn sine die, and this was agreed to.

F. L. Robbins and other operators representing about one-third of the coal production of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, offered to pay the advance, and urged the miners to accept this offer and continue work in their mines even though the other mines in the four States should be idle. The convention of miners to-morrow will decide whether to permit this or to demand that all miners suspend work until all have received the advance.

John C. Winder, Chairman of the bituminous coal operators, said to-night:

"I regard the situation simply as a disagreement between the operators and their men over business questions. I do not look upon it exactly as a strike. We have adjourned our conference without agreeing upon a new working contract, and as a result a suspension of work will follow. I do not predict that the shut-down of the mines and collieries will be attended with violence. We and our men still are on friendly terms. They are as anxious as ever to protect our property and mines, the preservation and good condition of which are necessary for their own sustenance and welfare.

"No attempt will be made so far as I know to operate the mines with non-union men. We simply will close them down, and while the suspension lasts we expect that our miners will continue to live peaceably in our houses, as they always have done.

"As to the duration of the suspension nobody can prophesy that. I hope it will not last long. I wish to say for the operators that they are willing, and always will be willing, to submit their side of the controversy for arbitration to any fair-minded and authorized tribunal of disinterested men.

"What the public is most interested in is the supply of coal. I presume that the bituminous supply now stored away will last in some cases only sixty days. In other cases it will last four months. Nobody can estimate accurately how severe the want of fuel may become provided the shut-down of the mines continues for a long period."

It is not planned to pay strike benefits at any period of the strike unless the struggle is protracted. During the anthracite strike of 1902, according to the leaders, no strike benefits were paid, and yet the strike was won. In that strike, as in this, it is probable that free stores will be established provided the destitution becomes threatening among the idle men and their families.

It is estimated to-night that a strike of 425,000 miners will affect 3,000,000 persons who are dependent upon mining for their bread. It is usual, however, during mining strikes for strikers to flock to non-union fields or other lines of work. The former tendency is not admitted by officers, but is said to be true.

The Western Pennsylvania question is greater than appears on the surface. If the miners consent to permit Francis L. Robbins to operate his great mining interests near Pittsburg, together with smaller mines in Hocking Valley, Ohio, and Illinois, it means that work will not be stopped in fields producing fully one-third of the tonnage of the States of Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, the combined output of which is 118,000,000 tons annually.

If Western Pennsylvania is allowed to settle on the payment of the advance asked by the miners as proposed by Mr. Robbins, it is possible that the operators in Central Pennsylvania will be compelled to meet the same conditions and follow the suit of their competitors.

Another important phase of the problem is the effect that the closing or operating of Robbins's mines will have on the great mills of the United States Steel Corporation. The Pittsburg Coal Company, of which Mr. Robbins is President, has a contract with the Steel Corporation to supply 8,000,000 tons of coal annually for use in the furnaces. The suspension of work in these mines may mean eventually the closing down of the big steel works and thus forcing into idleness another army of laborers.

Mr. Robbins announced to-night that he will make a strong fight to have the miners accede to his proposal. He maintains that the miners cannot obtain the approval of the public by closing down his mines when he has offered to grant the wages they ask.

Great indecision prevails among the miners as to the best course to pursue.

SEIZING COAL VERY COSTLY.

Only Undertaken by Railroads as a Last Resort.

Manufacturers on several lines of railroads running out of New York were being notified by circular yesterday that, in the event of a coal strike coal consigned to the manufacturers will be confiscated and paid for by the railroads, should necessity demand it. General Coal Agent H. W. Henry of the New York Central said that his road had not issued such a circular.

"There is a law, however," he said, "which permits the confiscation of coal by railroads. It is a United States law, and is aimed to assure the transportation of the United States mails. We have had to confiscate coal during heavy snowstorms, taking it when it was impossible to move trains or snowplows because no other coal could be reached.

"The confiscation of coal is the last resort of a railroad, because the coal taken has to be paid for at the price which obtains, and a bill for damages follows from the manufacturer. We have always satisfactorily settled such claims, but in event of confiscation during a coal strike the cost to the railroads would be very heavy."

Railroad men in New York are already counting on a possible supply of coal from the non-union mines of West Virginia. In event of a strike the price will greatly advance, of course, but the supply from West Virginia is looked forward to with a degree of certainty. The non-union mines making more money for its output can afford to employ miners at higher wages, and there is plenty of negro labor in West Virginia.

It was stated officially on behalf of the anthracite operators yesterday that if the proposed new negotiations with Mitchell extend beyond Monday, when the agreement made under the award of the Anthracite Strike Commission will have expired, the operators will, as a matter of courtesy, continue mining under the old conditions. This will be done on the assumption that no strike will be ordered during the negotiations.

The operators have already refused the demands, but it is thought improbable that a strike will be ordered until Mitchell has used every means to gain some concessions. It is believed that he may try to gain time by extending the negotiations, so as to bring the ordering of a strike as near to the Winter months as possible in case a strike must come. The operators, however, will not allow this, it was stated.

Complaints were made yesterday by the coal dealers that though the operators were taking orders they were very backward in filling them. President Henry Breunich of the Retail Coal Dealers' Association said that the dealers could get no information from the operators to guide them.

A statement was issued yesterday by David Willcox, President of the Delaware & Hudson Company, to show that the increase in the prices of anthracite had not added to the profits of the operators. The increase in price, he says, has been substantially absorbed by the great additions to cost caused by the strike of 1902 and the award later of the Anthracite Strike Commission. He goes into figures, based on the business of the Delaware & Hudson Company, showing the average increase in price to be 46.15 cents per ton. The prosperity of the producers, he says, is due to the increased demand; they have not made more profit on each ton of coal but have sold more coal. Besides, he says, less than half of the business of the anthracite roads consists in carrying coal.

ENGINEER FALK OPPOSES $161,000,000 WATER PLAN

Hints Certain Persons Seek to Create a Water Famine Scare.

THEY'D LIKE TO GET THE JOB

Commission's Engineer Would Tap Esopus Watershed with a 500,000,000 Gallon Aqueduct.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—If the State Water Commission accepts the views of its engineer, Myron S. Falk, it will not give its approval to the New York City Water Commission's plans to spend $161,000,000 in tapping the watersheds in Ulster County for an increased water supply for New York City.

Engineer Falk's report was sent to the Senate to-day in response to a resolution requesting it. The report is an exhaustive review of the water conditions in the several counties from which New York naturally would draw its supplies, particularly in the Counties of Suffolk and Nassau, on Long Island, and in Dutchess and Ulster Counties. Engineer Falk's conclusions are against the proposed extension into Ulster County, a single exception being made in the case of the Esopus watershed.

The commission's estimate of $161,000,000 as the cost of the proposed extension is regarded by the State Water Commission's expert as being far below the real figures. In Mr. Falk's opinion the Ulster County plan would involve an expenditure of many millions over the estimate. He would have the city restricted to the Esopus shed and extensions into Suffolk and Dutchess Counties, with a further extension, if found necessary, that would tap the Ten Mile and Delaware Rivers. The Croton supply, Mr. Falk suggests, should be connected with the Esopus water shed by a 500,000,000-gallon aqueduct. In brief, the engineer's report holds that with such a connection and the proper development of the water supply in Suffolk and Dutchess Counties, the city will be able to provide for all possible needs for many years to come.

In submitting this report to the Senate the State Commission does not intimate whether it will adopt its engineer's advice, but states that it is studying the report with the view of making deduction at an early date.

The action of the State Commission in approving or disapproving the City Commission's plans must depend necessarily on the action of the Legislature with respect to bills now before it removing the legal restrictions that prevent the city from going into Suffolk and Dutchess Counties for any additional water supply. The repeal bills now in the Senate will probably be passed at this session.

The principal recommendations of Mr. Falk are:

First—That every borough of New York City is in need of an additional water supply.

Second—That the proper order in which to acquire additional sources for New York City is: (a) Nassau and Suffolk Counties for Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond particularly, (100,000,000 gallons daily;) (b) Ten Mile River, (150,000,000 gallons daily;) (c) Dutchess County, (260,000,000 gallons daily;) (d) Catskill watershed or the Delaware River.

Third—That the present condition of affairs is such as to require that the city obtain relief by being permitted to acquire the Esopus watershed petitioned for by the Board of Water Supply, but that further relief by the city should be obtained from some sources noted above; the petition for the acquirement of the Rondout, Catskill, and Schoharie watersheds should be denied.

Fourth—That the city be permitted to construct an aqueduct of 500,000,000 gallons capacity from the Ashokan Reservoir to the Croton Valley, and so designed as to permit of simple connection with either the Dutchess County watersheds or with the remaining Catskill watersheds.

Fifth—That the city be permitted to acquire the lands necessary to construct the works needed to store, to deliver, or to purify the water of the joint Croton-Esopus sheds to the boroughs of the city.

Mr. Falk makes the further recommendation that in any future application "it should be imperative for the City of New York to show that it has exhausted its efforts to obtain additional water from Suffolk County, the Ten-mile or the Delaware River. With the existence of the Dutchess County exclusion act the city can make no efforts to obtain water from that county, but it can and should urge the introduction and passage of a bill for its repeal."

In presenting the engineering features relating to the proposed additional water supply for New York, Mr. Falk estimates that the population of the city in 1925 will be 6,300,000, and estimates the present consumption of water in the city at 550,000,000 gallons a day. He quotes the report of Engineer J. Waldo Smith to the Aqueduct Commissioners last year to show that "perhaps the danger of water famine in the City of New York is not so serious as certain persons now interested and favoring new construction work might wish the public to believe." Engineer Smith's report, he says, was prepared to substantiate the claim that additional dams should be constructed in the Croton Valley. Smith's report shows that with proper precautions, even in dry years, the city might be satisfactorily supplied with water until 1912 with its present resources.

Attention is called to the absence of records in Manhattan and the Bronx showing the quantities of water consumed and that there are apparently no meters on the delivery mains supplying those boroughs. Mr. Falk says that "until accurate measurements are taken to determine these deliveries of water, no exact knowledge of the amount of water wasted or consumed in those boroughs can be had."

Mr. Falk says that the Boroughs of Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond require an additional supply, but believes the plans filed will fail to furnish the desired relief. The supply for these boroughs, he says, is obtained mainly from underground sources, and an actual stoppage of the supply is practically impossible, and in times of drought the situation will be less serious than in Manhattan and the Bronx.

Department Store Liquor Sales.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—Assemblyman Harte of Queens introduced a bill to-day providing that no liquor of any kind or in any form shall be sold in department stores. The State Excise Department is prohibited from issuing a liquor tax certificate to any such establishment.

GUARDS THE CONSTITUTION.

Assembly Would Have Changes Effective Only by a Majority Vote.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—By a vote of 93 to 25 the Assembly to-day passed the Hamn resolution providing that constitutional amendments shall not go into effect unless voted for by a majority of those voting for members of the Assembly. Many members took part in the debate. Merritt led against it.

The intrducer, Hamn of Wayne, said constitutional amendments are often adopted which have not received a majority of the votes cast. He believed this wrong in principle and dangerous in practice. Constitutional changes should only become operative when an actual majority of the voters of the State had voted for their adoption.

MARCH 1906

MISSING COMPANY NOT FOUND WITH E. R. THOMAS

He Knows Nothing of Lost $100,000,000 Sugar Concern.

NOR WILL HOLMAN FIND IT

But He'd Have Gone to Sing Sing, He Says, If He'd Pushed Plans of the U. S. Sugar Refining Company.

Further inquiry concerning the lost $100,000,000 United States Sugar Refining Company led yesterday to the unearthing of more strange reports concerning the company's backers and its failure to carry out its plans for the establishment of a National co-operative sugar business.

One of the most interesting reports circulated in Wall Street was that E. R. Thomas and his associates were interested in the promotion of the company. The Thomases have been interested for years in the beet sugar business in New York State, and it was said that part of the scheme was to turn over to the United States Sugar Refining Company the Lyons Beet Sugar Company of Lyons, N. Y., which is controlled by the Thomases.

In some quarters this report was regarded as throwing additional light on the statement made by Holman & Holman, fiscal agents of the United States Sugar Refining Company, in their letters to the subscribers for the company's stock, that an effort was being made by those whom they describe as the "real parties in interest" to capture the money of the subscribers through the leasing of an old beet sugar factory.

Holman & Holman refused yesterday to confirm or deny the report that the beet sugar factory referred to, which they had described as little better than a junk heap, was the factory owned by the Lyons Beet Sugar Company, which is controlled by the Thomases. From another source it was learned that the President of the United States Sugar Refining Company is Frederick Sceigerwald of Lyons, N. Y.

E. R. Thomas said he knew nothing of any plans for the acquisition of the Lyons beet sugar plant by the United States Sugar Refining Company. He had read in THE TIMES the account of the United States Sugar Refining Company's plans and their failure, but he knew absolutely nothing about the company.

Asked whether he was interested in the Lyons beet sugar plant, Mr. Thomas said that he was, but only as a bondholder. He knew of no plan to turn over to the United States Sugar Refining Company the beet sugar plant in which he was interested. He explained, however, that he was not familiar with the affairs of the Lyons company, which were under the direction of O. F. Thomas. O. F. Thomas might have entered into some arrangement to dispose of the Lyons plant to some other company—he did not know about that.

Mr. Thomas did not know, either, whether Frederick Sceigerwald was President of the Lyons Beet Sugar Company. He had heard O. F. Thomas speak of Mr. Sceigerwald, however. Referring to his own interest in the Lyons sugar plant, Mr. Thomas said that he had been a stockholder in the Empire State Sugar Company, which was reorganized into the Lyons Beet Sugar Company, and that in the reorganization he had obtained bonds and preferred stock in the new company for the old bonds.

Holman Still Won't Tell.

W. J. Holman, of the firm that has been acting as a fiscal agent for the $100,000,000 sugar company, persisted yesterday in his refusal to disclose the names of the men to whom he referred as the "real parties in interest." He said that he felt sure that the plans that had been formed to establish the company in business by taking over the beet sugar plant, which in no wise fulfilled the contract entered into with the subscribers to the company's stock, had been frustrated. He thought this had been accomplished by the issuance of the letters which Holman & Holman had sent to the subscribers and the banks which had certified the subscribers' checks given for subscriptions to the stock. He had not the slightest doubt that the United States Sugar Refining people would give back the checks and surrender the subscription contracts.

"If they don't," he said, "they are certainly the most foolish men in the world. The things which we are in a position to reveal would make some of the recent revelations about high finance look very mild indeed. We are already engaged in preparing papers in a suit which will be filed unless those who are now holding these checks and contracts return them to the subscribers.

"We certainly are not going to be parties in any way to a plan to sell stock in a company owning a miserable sugar plant, that does business only 100 days in the year, to people who believed they were subscribing to stock in a National co-operative sugar company that would yield very large profits.

No Sing Sing for Him.

"If we had permitted ourselves to become parties to that scheme, we would have landed in Sing Sing; there is no doubt about that. If we had allowed ourselves to be made tools of, we certainly would have been responsible to those who subscribed to the stock. But we are not to be made anybody's tools."

Letters which passed between Holman & Holman and a lawyer of Rome, N. Y., who acted as attorney for a subscriber to the stock of the United States Sugar Refining Company, throw further light on the return by Holman & Holman of certain subscription checks.

In a letter dated Nov. 11, 1905, and addressed by Ward J. Gagwin, the Rome attorney, to Holman & Holman, Mr. Gagwin said:

> I am informed that you have surrendered checks and canceled agreement with Messrs. Thomas R. Reese, W. W. Jones, and Byron Crego of Westernville and Alonzo Davis of Northwestern. These gentlemen were my clients.
>
> I have since been retained by Mr. W. H. Jones of Northwestern, who desires to make the same disposition of his agreement, No. 2,752.
>
> If you will mail me the checks and agreement which you have I will cancel the same, and if you so desire will return the agreement to you together with the duplicate given to Mr. Jones, which I have.

Holman & Holman's answer said, among other things:

> You would have displayed more of the true spirit of the counseling fraternity, to which I belong, if you had come right out, in a manly way, and explained to your would-be client that he could do as much toward having the agreement canceled as you could, that since he had entered into the contract the best thing he could do, if he did not care to go on with it, was to ask to be released; that you thought, if the company was an honorable one, it would have no hesitancy in complying with his wishes.
> We have had requests of this kind from merchants in this section of the country, none of which have ever been turned down. The company has been in business too long to have the integrity of its dealings questioned. It has not only allowed merchants to withdraw, but paid the interest on the money deposited the merchants to the company's credit, [illegible] though the same was never used by the company.

One of the firms in business near New York City who subscribed to the stock of the proposed hundred-million-dollar sugar company is Hopper & Poelstra of Paterson, N. J. Mr. Hopper of that firm said to a TIMES reporter yesterday that he had received the notice sent out by Holman & Holman and had stopped the payment of the checks which he had given for his subscription to the company's stock, which amounted to five shares. The company's plans, as outlined to him, Mr. Hopper said, called for the delivery of sugar not later than December last.

Lewis W. Campbell, who was President of the company until about six months ago, when he was succeeded by Frederick Sceigerwald, it was said yesterday is a son-in-law of one of the Pillsburys, the flour merchants, of Minneapolis.

GROCERS TOOK THE STOCK.

Lost Company's Shares Were Subscribed To in Utica.

Special to The New York Times.

UTICA, N. Y., March 29.—Ten or twelve grocers doing business in this city are understood to have taken stock in small amounts in the United States Sugar Refining Company.

It is stated that in several of the general stores in Clinton, Waterville, Ilion, Herkimer, Bridgewater, and other outlying towns blocks of the stock were disposed of, and one merchant declares that he has been informed that $25,000 worth of the stock was sold in Norwich.

Some of the country merchants made inquiries of jobbing houses in this city by telephone before they bought, and when they were informed that the commercial reporting agencies knew nothing of the company they declined to buy.

PARKER DECLINES TO SERVE.

Is Unable to Help Investigate the Banking Department.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—Ex-Judge Alton B. Parker has declined to serve on the commission to investigate the State Banking Department. His declination is contained in a letter which he sent to Assemblyman Wainwright, Chairman of the Committee on Banks of the Assembly, where the bill appointing the commission consisting of Judge Parker and Judge Andrews now rests, after having passed the Senate.

It was in the Assembly committee that the resolution originated to have an investigation by a joint committee of the Senate and Assembly similar to the one which investigated the insurance situation. The Senate negatived this proposition and put up the Andrews-Parker bill in its stead.

Judge Parker says that he has tried to communicate with Judge Andrews on the subject, but has been unable to do so from the fact that he understands that Judge Andrews is in Europe, but in any event, the former Democratic candidate for the Presidency says he would be unable to take the post provided for him in the bill.

Judge Parker's decision also places the administration in an embarrassing position. Gov. Higgins said yesterday that he favored the Senate bill naming the two Judges as investigators, and that he had no knowledge that either would decline. He also said that, in his opinion, such an investigation would serve every purpose.

As no such committee as provided for in the bill could make a detailed report to this session of the Legislature, and the Assembly being fortified in its position of hostility to the Senate whitewashing bill, it is not likely that the lower house will pass the bill, and the whole banking investigation will become a thing of the past, so far as this session is concerned.

Gov. Higgins made the following statement to-day concerning Judge Parker's declination:

"I have received no such communication from Judge Parker, but I have no doubt that some other Democrat can be found in whom the people of the State would have equal confidence."

ASSEMBLY FOR A RECOUNT.

Backs Demand for Opening of a Ballot Box in Kings.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—The Assembly to-day by a vote of 100 to 13 authorized the Committee on Privileges and Elections to persist in its demand upon Chairman John R. Voorhis to open the ballot box in the Fifty-fifth Election District of the Seventh Kings Assembly District. The committee, in trying out the merits of the contest brought by T. P. Hyatt, Municipal Ownership candidate, against the sitting member, Michael J. Grady, Dem., thinks it absolutely necessary to have the ballot box in the district named opened. Thus far Voorhis has argued against the right of the committee to order the production and opening of the box.

Chairman Grattan, who offered the resolution which empowered his committee to make a demand upon Chairman Voorhis in the name of the people of the State, declared that inability to have boxes opened would seriously endanger the work of the committee relative to the five or six contests which it must pass upon and report to the House.

Moreland, the Republican leader, thought the Assembly's fundamental rule that it was the judge of its own membership would be seriously jeopardized if it delegated to the courts certain functions that were its own constitutionally. He thought the Grattan resolution helped toward maintaining the dignity of the Assembly.

Local Option Bill Down and Out.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 29.—The Tully-Wainwright Local Option bill got another knockout blow in the Senate Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment to-day when the committee by a vote of 6 to 3 refused to let the matter be reported out. If, after the action of the Assembly Excise Committee yesterday in refusing to let the bill out there by a vote of 8 to 5, the measure needed anything else to kill it in approved style the action of the Senate committee supplied it.

Double Election of Officers.

The stockholders of the Nichols & Langworthy Company at Hope Valley, R. I., have elected these officers: Ernest J. Jochen, President; Willis G. Nichols, Vice President; John Stewart Thompson, Treasurer, and Ernest J. Crandall, Secretary. These with James E. Burnet are the Directors. The New York Safety Steam Power Company, which is controlled by the Nichols & Langworthy Machine Company, elected Ernest J. Jochen, President; John Stewart Thomson, Treasurer, and J. M. W. Shepherd, Secretary.

Worcester Fire Chief a Learner.

Deputy Chief Avery of the Fire Department of Worcester, Mass., will enter the School of Instruction of the Fire Department in this city to-day, and take the ordinary instruction given to the probationary members of the department. Later he will be assigned to a downtown company.

ODELL COMES TO TOWN AND HITS PARSONS HARD

Ignores County President in Planning New Apportionment.

DISTRICT LEADERS WITH HIM

22 Out of 36 Assemble at State Chairman's Conference—Unfriendly Act, Says Parsons.

Chairman Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., of the Republican State Committee came into New York yesterday, and took the Republican County Committee away from President Herbert Parsons. Ignoring Parsons, Odell got twenty-two of the thirty-six district leaders into a conference at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and mapped out a Senate and Assembly apportionment plan of his own.

Congressman Parsons frankly declared that neither he nor William C. Wilson of the Twenty-seventh District, one of his right-hand men, had been invited to the Odell conference. He characterized the conference as an unfriendly act. From friends of Odell it was learned that the new Odell apportionment would cut Parsons away from his present Twenty-fifth District, and would either put him in with Wilson, so that one or the other would have to give up the leadership of the district, or else would put him in with the present Twentieth District, which is strong for Tammany.

Odell's coming was known in advance, for the twenty-two who participated in the conference were at the hotel before 3 o'clock. They were in session behind closed doors until 6 o'clock, when Chairman Odell departed for Newburg. Those present were William Germain, Louis J. Hoeninger, Joseph Levinson, Richard C. Van Cott, William Halpin, John P. Windolph, George Wanmaker, Samuel Koenig, Lemuel E. Quigg, who came on a proxy from Theodore P. Gilman; Charles K. Lexow, Smith Pine, Jastrow Alexander, Frank Raymond, William H. Ten Eyck, E. H. Healey, Michael Hines, James E. March, Joseph Hackett, Jacob Newstead, James F. Pegnan, Isaac Newman, and Moses McKee, who came from a sickbed to attend.

The conferrees tore to shreds the tentative Senate and Assembly apportionment which President Parsons had been working on for weeks. They declared that the committee of seven, appointed by Parsons a few days ago to go over his plan and report it to the County Committee and the Legislature, was a Parsons committee under the Chairmanship of Parsons's man Wilson, and would stand by the Parsons plan.

The colored map which Parsons and his friends has prepared to show the new Senate and Assembly districts as they had arranged them was declared to have been framed for the express purpose of putting several of the present leaders together in districts so that several would have to retire.

Entirely new lines were therefore mapped out. Maps will be prepared on these lines within the next few days and then will be submitted to the County Committee and the Legislature for adoption as against the Parsons plan.

When the conference was over Chairman Odell declined to talk. Lemuel E. Quigg, who took an important part in the conference, went over matters in some detail, declaring, with a wink, that no offense was intended toward Parsons by leaving him out of consideration.

"The fact of the matter is," declared Quigg, "that Parsons and his friends prepared a map that aroused the apprehension of the present district leaders, who saw their control going from them. They thought they saw an intent to injure them by putting two or three Odell leaders in a single district and making it impossible thereby for all to retain a leadership.

"By our plan there will be two absolutely certain Senate districts in Manhattan and the Bronx, and a third district that would be Republican under anything like normal conditions. Assembly districts have been changed some. The present thirteen districts in the lower part of the city, below Fourteenth Street, on the east side, and Twenty-eighth Street on the west side, may be made into nine, because of the falling off of the vote. The number will be made up by adding new districts uptown. Every present district leader will be protected in his district as far as possible."

From another source, however, it was learned that Parsons' own district is more than likely to be taken from him by the new apportionment. Parsons lives at 112 East Thirty-fifth Street, which is in the northeast corner of the Twenty-fifth District. The district is bounded by Thirty-sixth Street on the north, and Lexington Avenue on the east. By adding the two blocks down to Thirty-fourth Street to the present Twenty-seventh District Parsons and Wilson would clash in a strong Republican district, and one or the other would have to retire.

Or by extending the present Twentieth District, on the east, a block further west from Lexington to Park and Fourth Avenues, Parsons would be thrown into that Tammany stronghold to battle with the present Republican leader there.

Congressman Parsons was at the Republican County Committee headquarters in almost solitary state while the conference was on at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

"It certainly is an unfriendly act," he said. "I have been working early and late for weeks on a tentative apportionment, and have prepared a map showing the proposed district lines. Neither Wilson nor I was invited to this conference. Our own deliberations were entirely open and above board, while this conference is in secret behind closed doors."

Quigg, later on, resented Parsons' idea that a slight had been intended.

"The holding of the conference without Parsons," he said, "was not intended as a slight. It was not intended to hurt Parsons or to advance Odell. It was not for the glorification of any one. We went over a matter that only concerned district leaders and we met for our own protection."

ODELL AND DUNN "MAKE UP."

State Chairman and Man He Supplanted Have a Long Talk.

Republicans around the State Committee headquarters, in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, were surprised yesterday to see Chairman Odell and Col. George W. Dunn, whom he ousted from the Chairmanship to take command himself, greet one another cordially, shake hands, and then enter a private room for an extended talk.

Col. Dunn was on hand early at headquarters. His appearance caused surprise, but it was nothing to that shown when Odell came in and, after a handshake, led his predecessor into a private conference. At the end of the talk both men said it had no political significance.

"No significance whatever," said Chairman Odell.

"But it has been understood that you two men were not on speaking terms," was suggested.

"Nonsense," said Odell. "We always speak, and I see the Colonel frequently when I am here."

SAMUEL A. WOOD HONORED.

A Loving Cup for the Dean of the Ship News Reporters.

Samuel Americus Wood, who has recorded the coming and going of the ships from New York for twenty years, and whose fame as a ship news reporter is surpassed only by his renown as a weather prophet and writer of unparagraphed verse, was honored by the other ship news reporters last night. They lured him to the Ship News Office at the Battery, sang and spoke their praises of him, and presented to him a loving cup.

Mr. Wood is 50 years old and, in point of service, is one of the oldest of New York's reporters. Thus it was that the fifty or sixty ship news reporters, past and present, who gathered to greet him were only a small part of the army who know him.

L. A. Southworth of The World led up to the loving cup by hazarding the guess that if Mr. Wood had not seen the Half Moon sail up the Hudson he certainly had been at the launching of the old Peruvian bark Calisaya, with her renowned cargo of knotholes. There was no doubt, he said, that Mr. Wood had first reported the wreck of the no less famous steamship Lactea with her cargo of nursing bottles in the Buttermilk Channel. There were some who remembered how Mr. Wood, following the custom of all "cub" reporters, had searched hard but in vain in Stanton Street or some other street for the elusive shipment of sacred cows that had just come in.

Mr. Wood's renown as the historian of the good ship Snigg and Capt. Wygg, his fame as the accurate guesser of the ship news tables that appear in New York's newspapers, and his other many works for his employer, The Sun, were not neglected. Mr. Wood has recently been transferred to general reportorial work, and his old comrades' grief over losing his assistance on the ship news tables was told in this verse of several that Mr. Southworth read:

> For twenty Winters, twenty Summers,
> Did Sam make up a list
> For all the other bummers,
> Oh! how he will be missed!

Mr. Wood made a short speech of thanks. The festivities began at 9 o'clock and were still going on early this morning.

THOUGHT SHE'D WED TITLE.

Mrs. Farnham Has Husband Arrested on Learning of His Deceit.

On a charge of abandonment, preferred by his wife, Francis L. Farnham, an advertising solicitor of 126 West Ninety-sixth Street, was arraigned in the West Side Court yesterday. Mrs. Farnham, who is about twenty years old, told the court that her marriage had been brought about through deceit on the part of her husband.

Farnham, she said, married her in October, 1905, and said he was heir to an estate and title in England. Later he showed her a cable purporting to be from his mother at Leicester, England, asking him to come home at once.

The young wife declared that her husband never went to England, but that he wrote her a letter, dated from Leicester, blaming her for writing to him, as it caused his mother to change her will. The wife subsequently found that her husband had never left New York.

Consistent Wisdom

No one exercising ordinary caution in business affairs leaves his property uninsured against fire, even for a single day, although at the very worst it could be only a partial loss—fire couldn't destroy the land.

A flaw in the title can cause the total loss of both building and land, and may happen as well as a fire.

No prudent man assumes his own fire risk. Then why the title risk?

FOUND GEMS ON FERRYBOAT.

Newsboy Picked Up Diamond Necklace Lost by New Jersey Girl.

Richard Fuller, a newsboy of 301 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, found a diamond necklace yesterday afternoon on a ferryboat bound to New York from Jersey City. He kept the matter to himself, and at the door of the jewelry store of Bernard Steinfeldt, 504 Sixth Avenue, met Harry Ableson, a student of 73 East 118th Street. The student bought the necklace of the boy for $5, and then went into the jewelry store to ask what it was worth.

Mr. Steinfeldt told Ableson that the necklace was worth at least $500. Upon being informed that it had been bought of a messenger boy who had found it, Mr. Steinfeldt advised that all parties go to the Tenderloin Police Station and tell about the matter.

There they met William E. Robinson of the Jersey City detective force, who had been sent over after Miss A. Hill of Lincoln Park, Jersey City, had telephoned to the Chief of Police about her loss on the ferryboat.

Miss Hill appeared later and identified the necklace. She was told to see the New York City Property Clerk to-day.

34 FAMILIES EVICTED.

Places They Left Badly Damaged—Struck Against Rent Increase.

Just before noon yesterday thirty-four more of the rebellious families in the large apartment houses at 90 to 100 Cook Street, Williamsburg, who went on strike a month ago against an increase of rent and held their apartments against the new landlords, were dispossessed by City Marshal Wagner and fifteen assistants.

More than one thousand people watched the evictions. It took five hours to put out all the families. The police were out in force and there was no trouble.

In nearly all the rooms occupied by the tenants great damage had been done. New wall paper had been destroyed, gas fixtures and globes had been smashed, and the plumbing tampered with. This makes fifty-two families evicted within a week. More are to be dispossessed.

HEPBURN BILL FRIENDS NOW FOR COURT REVIEW

Opponents of Original Measure Practically Have Won Fight.

AN AMENDMENT PREPARED

Provides for Appeal Against Commerce Commission's Decision — Spooner Amendment Kept Back.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The opposition to the Hepburn bill has practically won its fight. The fact that while debate lags and has become irksome, no agreement can be reached as to the day for a vote, speaks loudly as to what is taking place.

Every Senator knows that Senator Spooner has prepared with great pains an amendment that he and many others believe will solve the difficult problem, but he does not move a hand to place it before the Senate and the country. His plan for the adjustment of rate questions has been alluded to over and over, and a time has come when the proposition would be caught up with almost unanimous satisfaction, but the Wisconsin Senator nevertheless and, notwithstanding keeps it back and listens diligently to every little argument that is adduced on either side of the Chamber. This is all in the play.

The opponents of the Hepburn bill have all along expected that its friends would sooner or later be forced to admit that their bill was not in shape to get a majority vote. That time having come, another expectation has been that they would attempt to make it more acceptable by amending it. When their amendment has been advanced and discussed, the psychological moment will arrive to bring out the Spooner amendment, and the real battle over the remedy for the rate evil will begin.

To-day it was learned that the friends of the Hepburn bill had framed their amendment, and that in a few days it would be introduced. Whether it will be brought in by a Democratic Senator or by Senator Dolliver has not been decided.

The amendment provides that either party to a controversy before the Inter-State Commerce Commission may at any time bring a suit in equity against the commission as a defendant in the Circuit Court of the United States for the district in which the principal operating office of the party plaintiff is situated, to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend an order as to rates by the commission.

The ground for this injunction may be either that the commission exceeded its authority or that its order would deprive the plaintiff of a right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. No other ground may be assigned for such an injunction. The court is required to proceed to hear and determine the matter in controversy speedily and without formal pleadings and proceedings applicable to ordinary suits in equity, upon such short notice to the commission as it may deem reasonable. Notice of the application for injunction must be served upon the President or any member of the commission.

For the purposes of such a hearing, the court is to be held to be always in session. The case is to have precedence over all others of a different character, and in every way expedited, both in the hearing and the decision. With the plaintiff's application for an injunction there shall be filed a copy of the decision and order of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in the case. Certified copies of the testimony or any part of it may be filed by either party. If on hearing it shall appear that the commission exceeded its jurisdiction, or that the enforcement of the order or any part of it does or would violate any constitutional right of the plaintiff, power is given to the court to enjoin, set aside, or suspend the commission's order, in whole or in part.

No temporary restraining order or interlocutory decree or injunction shall be granted by the court setting aside or affecting any rate charge or rule or regulation which has been published by the carrier and which is in effect in obedience to the order of the commission, nor shall any order of the commission be at any time suspended temporarily during the pendency of the proceeding in court, except upon reasonable notice to the commission, and opportunity to be heard. The amendment gives the commission the right to file a cross bill in such a cause to enforce an order called in question, and power is given to the court to hear and determine it, and to bring in all such parties as may be deemed necessary to a complete and final decision.

The territorial jurisdiction of the court for such a purpose shall be co-extensive with the boundaries of the United States. In all such cases an appeal shall lie only to the United States Supreme Court, and must be taken within thirty days from the entry of notice. In the United States Supreme Court, precedence is given to the case for hearing and determination over all others of a different kind.

The defense on such appeals is to be conducted under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, and the costs and expenses paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the Federal courts. The commission may, however, have special counsel employed, and may pay such counsel out of its own funds.

The friends of the Hepburn bill think that with this amendment they will be able to save the day. They have submitted the amendment to the President and it meets with his approval. In the prohibition of interlocutory decrees without notice they believe they have used the best feature of the Bailey amendment, and at the same time avoided the objectionable provisions of the many other amendments along the same line. Senator Cullom said to-day as he came from the White House that he expected the bill would be voted on in a fortnight, and that a mild court-review amendment would be passed. Other Senators, however, predict that the debate will run on for a month, and that a vote will not be reached before May 1.

NEW JEWISH INSTITUTION.

Plans for Protectory and Aid Society's Buildings at Hawthorne, N. Y.

Plans have been completed by Architects Jacobs & Heidelberg for the new buildings of the Jewish Protectory and Aid Society, to be erected, at a cost of $500,000, at Hawthorne, N. Y., thirty miles from the city, on the Harlem Division of the New York Central.

There will be ten separate buildings. The administration building, dining hall, Superintendent's home, and power house will be built of brick and stone, while six cottages will be of frame and stucco construction. The administration building, four stories high, will contain reception rooms and the Superintendent's office, besides a large auditorium on the second floor and a gymnasium in the basement.

The largest building of all will be the dining hall, the basement of which is divided into a laundry, bakeshop, storage and servants' dining rooms, butcher's shop, and safe-deposit vaults.

Attorney General Julius M. Mayer is President of the Jewish Protectory and Aid Society. Its Vice Presidents are Henry Solomon and Mortimer L. Schiff and its Secretary Jesse I. Straus

MEMBERS' CHILDREN FAVORED

Complaint of Discrimination Against Museum Free Lectures.

A citizen who tried unsuccessfully to carry his two children into a public lecture at the Museum of Natural History Tuesday night complains because a distinction is made in favor of the children of members of the Museum Association. He is Dr. J. F. Terriberry of 120 West Seventy-third Street, and he went to Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, Supervisor of Lectures for the Board of Education, and registered a protest. Dr. Leipziger told him he would look into the matter.

The Department of Education, through its Lecture Bureau, gives a series of public lectures at the Museum, at Seventy-seventh Street and Central Park West, using a hall which the Museum authorities lend free of charge. On the bulletin announcing the lectures are the words, "School Children Not Admitted." That is the Department of Education's rule and not the Museum's.

Dr. Terriberry carried his two girls to hear Azel Hull Fish talk about "The Land of Lewis and Clark" Tuesday night. Robert G. Welgh, a teacher in the public schools, saw the three about to enter the lecture hall and told the physician that the girls could not go in. Two minutes later, Dr. Terriberry said yesterday, he saw a man walk in with a child older than his own.

"I thought it was very peculiar," said Dr. Terriberry yesterday, "that no move should be made to stop that child, when mine could not get in. So I went to the man who had stopped me and asked him why it was. He told me that the girl admitted was a child of a member of the Museum Association. I made the man give me his name and determined to go to the bottom of the matter and have the discrimination explained.

"Dr. Leipziger received me very courteously at the Board of Education Building. He gave me to understand that certain concessions had to be made to the members.'

Dr. Leipziger told a TIMES reporter yesterday that he had not yet had time to look into the matter, and that the Museum authorities were the proper persons to talk to about such a matter. At the Museum Director Bumpus's assistant said:

"The rule excluding children from the lectures is made by the Board of Education, but we cannot exclude members with membership cards from attending any lecture that may take place. A good deal more than half the money required to run the Museum comes from private sources, not from the city, and it would not be possible ever to exclude members of the association or members of their families. That other children are not admitted is not our rule, but that of the Board of Education."

MRS. POILLON ARRESTED.

Mrs. Katherine Poillon, in settlement of whose breach of promise suit against W. Gould Brokaw somebody got $17,500, was arrested yesterday morning at the Hotel Barstow, 17 West Twenty-seventh Street, with her sister Charlotte, on warrants issued by Magistrate Steinert, in the Jefferson Market Court.

The sisters were charged with being "public nuisances," and an additional charge of assault was preferred against Charlotte Poillon by a negro elevator boy in the Hotel Barstow, who said that because he refused to take the sisters up to the twelfth floor Wednesday night he was punched in the face.

Paul Krotel, Assistant District Attorney, who lives at the Hotel Barstow, appeared to prosecute the cases. Ex-Assistant District Attorney Goldsmith appeared for the two women.

Charlotte Poillon was held in $300 bail for trial in Special Sessions on the assault charge. Both women were held in $500 bail for a hearing to-day on the nuisance charge. They were paroled, to give bail, which they did in the afternoon.

The manager of the Hotel Barstow has been trying various means to induce the Poillon sisters to reside elsewhere, but they have declined to move. Among other measures, the management told the elevator boy not to carry the sisters in his car. When he carried out his orders Wednesday night there was a row that woke many of the guests.

Charlotte served papers yesterday on officers of the company in control of the Hotel Barstow in a suit for damages.

"We have been persecuted in an unmerciful manner by these people," said Mrs. Katherine Poillon.

Justice Delehanty of the City Court appointed Isaac B. Brennan receiver yesterday in the case of Mrs. Katherine Poillon, from whom a department store is trying to exact payment of a judgment for $800. The next hearing in supplementary proceedings will be held on April 10.

BREWERY TRUST PLANS.

Heinze Is Said to be After Big Paterson Plants.

Special to The New York Times

PATERSON, March 29.—It is reported that the Paterson Consolidated Brewing and Malting Company, a concern including all the breweries here and valued at $8,000,000, is to be part of the prospective combination of New York and New Jersey breweries under the direction of F. Augustus Heinze. The deal was discussed at a meeting of stockholders of the Eagle Brewing Company, Sixty-eighth Street and East River, New York City, yesterday.

It is said that ex-Mayor Hinchliffe is the medium through which negotiations with the local concerns have been carried on. He could not be seen to-day.

FOR A NEW RIVERSIDE PARK.

Movement Started to Buy Land Near Grant's Tomb.

A movement was inaugurated yesterday by members of several civic and patriotic societies to have the land lying between 116th and 122d Streets and Riverside Drive and Claremont Avenue acquired by the city and made a part of Riverside Park. A memorial, signed by a score of representatives, was sent to the Board of Estimate, setting forth reasons why the city should take this step.

Among the reasons advanced is the fact that the building of this park will also be of great advantage to the institutions in the vicinity and those who benefit through them.

The memorial was signed by many men prominent in the business and professional life of the city.

ROOSEVELT ANGERED OVER SHOTGUN LETTER

Writes President of Sportsmen's League He Misquoted Him.

FALSE IMPRESSION GIVEN

Facts Brought Out in Hearing on Bill to Stop Use of Automatic Guns for Slaughtering Game.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—President Roosevelt figured largely in the House Committee on Territories to-day during a hearing on the Lacey bill, prohibiting the use of all kinds of automatic shotguns in the Territories in the interest of the protection of game. Each side to the controversy endeavored to claim the President as its champion. The result was finally an effort to expunge the whole reference to the President from the hearings, but this the committee refused.

This record will therefore contain, first, a prepared article by President G. O. Shields of the League of American Sportsmen, which puts the President squarely on record in favor of the campaign against repeating guns. Then, when the opposition, representing the manufacturers of small arms, intimated that the President had repudiated this statement, Mr. Shields admitted the President had refused to be placed in quotation marks, but admitted holding the views attributed to him. To substantiate this, he read the following letter, signed by the President, under date of Jan. 22, 1906:

(Personal.)

My Dear Shields: I am sorry to say that I must ask you under no circumstances to put me in quotation marks; for though you give the sense of what I said, you in no case give the exact language used, so do not try to quote me in the first person, or to use quotation marks. You can state that my views are substantially as you have quoted them, but don't actually quote them.

Sincerely yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

When this letter was read, Attorney Bovee, representing the manufacturers of the guns in question, declared that this letter did not tell the whole story, and that Mr. Shields had quoted the President, notwithstanding the warning. Mr. Shields interjected that he had not, but that the statement sent to the papers by him had been "edited" by several papers and the President's views put in quotation marks.

"Well, listen to this letter," said Mr. Bovee, as he proceeded to read another and later letter from the President to Mr. Shields, as follows:'

White House, Feb. 19, 1906.

Sir: It appears that you have purported to give an extended interview with me in quotation marks, putting my expressions in the first person, so as to make me responsible for both thought and language. This is inexcusable on your part. At the time you called upon me and I talked over informally with you the question of the preservation of game, and of wild life generally in its various aspects, I told you explicitly that while you could state that while I was in hearty general accord with your efforts, you were not to try to quote my language, and subsequently I wrote to you repeating this. As a matter of fact, in what appears to be these quotations, you in no case gave the exact language that I used. But pretending thus to give it, and by what you omit as well as what you insert, which I had not said, you convey, on certain points, an entirely false impression, and you leave me no alternative but to explicitly repudiate your statement, which I hereby do. Had you been content to say that you gave the general sense of what I said you would have done what you were authorized to do. But when you attempt to give my exact words you not only do what I explicitly told you you should not do, but you used language which I explicitly told you was in no case accurate. Not one single sentence you quote is as I said it. Some of the sentences are sheer inventions, others are inventions in part, and some of the things I said are omitted.

It is unnecessary to characterize such conduct on your part.

Yours, &c.,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

After the reading of this letter, Representative Cole of Ohio, a member of the committee, remarked to Mr. Shields: "Do you think the President would trust himself in the woods without a repeating rifle?"

Mr. Shields answered that he thought he would. The President, he said, was a thorough sportsman.

An argument why the restriction contemplated in the bill should not be made was made by Mr. Bovee. The committee laid the bill on the table, thus making future action improbable.

TESTS TO AID PATRICK.

Experiments Will Be Made on the Bodies of Two Paupers.

In support of the contention of Albert T. Patrick that William M. Rice died of natural causes, and that the post-mortem changes resulted from embalming fluid instead of chloroform, the bodies of an elderly man and woman are to be experimented on. The subjects are patients who died in the Metropolitan Hospital on Blackwell's Island without friends or relatives to bury them.

After the injection of embalming fluid autopsies will be made to learn the effect on the organs in the chest and abdominal cavities.

Patrick is seeking a new trial and hopes that the results of the experiment will furnish evidence upon which to base it.

JUSTICES MUST ROTATE.

Appellate Division Fixes Duties of Municipal Court Officials.

Justices Scott, Giegerich, and Greenbaum decided in the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court yesterday that the law is constitutional which provides that Justices of the Municipal District Courts must rotate through the various courts in the different boroughs. Two of the Justices of the Municipal Courts, Wauhope Lynn and William F. Moore, have refused to go to courts outside of the districts in which they were elected, since Jan. 1 last. A bill for the repeal of the existing law is in the hands of the Judiciary Committees of the Legislature.

The Appellate Term handed down its decision as the result of an appeal from a decision rendered by Justice Leon Sanders in the Fourth District Court. He belongs to the Thirteenth District. The appellant questioned the jurisdiction of Justice Sanders outside of the district in which he was elected.

GIRLS NEED ATHLETICS.

Contributions Asked for Training in the Public Schools.

Officers of the Girls' Branch of the Public Schools Athletic League of this city have issued an appeal to women for contributions to help promote the physical well-being of girls in the public schools. The letter is in part as follows:

> The physical development of the girls in our public schools is of such prime importance that we are most anxious to make it possible before any more girls graduate. The girls cannot meet the expense involved, nor can the city until this movement has at least passed the experimental stage.

A pamphlet descriptive of the aims of the league accompanies the letter.

It costs $1,000 to become a founder of the league, $500 to be a donor, $250 to be a patron, $100 to be a life member, and $10 to be a member. Checks should be made payable to Mrs. I. N. Phelps Stokes, Treasurer.

Mrs. Catharine S. Leverich is President of the league. Mrs. James Speyer, Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., and Miss Margaret L. Chanler comprise the Membership Committee.

DISAPPEARING FAMILY.

Father Departed Twelve Years Ago—Son Now Follows Him.

Patrick O'Connor, who for twenty-five years kept a news stand and bookshop at 503 Washington Street, Hoboken, walked out of there at 9 o'clock on the night of March 23, 1894, and has not been heard of since.

About the same time last Friday night, just twelve years later, John O'Connor, son of Patrick, left the home which he occupied with two sisters, at 529 Willow Avenue, Hoboken. Every effort has been made to find some trace of him, but without avail. The police of Hoboken, Jersey City, Newark, New York, and Philadelphia have been notified to look for him, and a close search has been made of the hospitals and morgues of these cities in case his dead body should be found.

The son had many traits in common with his father. He was of a studious disposition, fond of books, and was not dissipated.

"I cannot bring myself to believe that my brother willfully left us,' said Katherine O'Connor, one of his sisters, last night, "and as he had but little money there is no reason for believing that he has met with foul play. He had few friends, and those among intellectual people."

Young O'Connor was employed as a draughtsman in the office of Richard Berger, an architect at 309 Broadway, this city. He received but a small salary and turned the largest part of it over to his sisters. Mr. Berger says that the missing man was industrious and had no bad habits.

"My brother frequently spoke of my father's disappearance," Miss O'Connor explained. "And this may have had some effect in inducing him to leave home. My own opinion is that he overstudied. He worked over architectural drawings until late every night, and when I tried to get him to go to bed, telling him he would ruin his health, he simply smiled at me and told me not to worry.

"Ever since father's disappearance we have tried to the extent of our means to find him. Not one word have we had of him. Now my sister Hannah and myself are afraid that John has gone the same way."

The last person to whom the young man talked after leaving home was Father O'Neill of the Church of Our Lady of Grace, Willow Avenue and Fourth Street, Hoboken. Father O'Neill says that he seemed to be laboring under a great strain and was unable to concentrate his mind on any subject.

GOSLIN'S ACCOMPLICE TELLS.

Dunn Makes a Confession and His Lawyer Withdraws.

When Charles M. Dunn, who is indicted with Alfred R. Goslin on a charge of swindling the Western Gold Mining Company out of $29,500 worth of stock, and separately on a charge of stealing a 100-share certificate of the United States Steel Corporation, was about to be examined in the West Side Court yesterday Assistant District Attorney Lockwood announced that the prisoner had made a statement. This statement concerned his connection with Goslin and the swindles perpetrated by him.

Dunn's confession will be made public to-day. Lawyer Hymes, counsel for Dunn, was permitted by the court to withdraw from the case after learning of his client's confession.

Lawyer Lippman, who furnished bail for Goslin, and who acts as his counsel, too, told the court that he knew nothing whatever about the whereabouts of his client. Magistrate Wahle declared the $1,000 bail of Goslin forfeited.

Christo Cosmides, the Greenwich Street fruit dealer arrested last Wednesday on a charge of being implicated with Dunn and Goslin in the theft of the Steel certificate, was held by Magistrate Wahle in $12,000 bail for examination to-day.

Bodleian Library Acquires a Shakespeare Folio It Sold in 1664.

LONDON, March 29.—Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian High Commissioner, has come to the assistance of the Bodleian Library of Oxford University with a donation of $2,500 to complete the total sum which was necessary to obtain a first folio of Shakespeare, for which an American collector offered $15,000.

The folio was presented to the Bodleian Library in 1624, but was sold in 1664, and since that time had been in a private collection. An American collector recently offered $15,000 to the present owner of the folio, whose name is not known. The owner, however, gave the Bodleian Library the opportunity to recover the folio for the same amount. His offer held good until March 30.

SOUTH AFRICA ENRAGED AGAINST HOME MINISTRY

Natal Cabinet Quits—Meetings of Protest Called.

REBELS' EXECUTION STOPPED

Colonial Department Interfered to Prevent Carrying Out of Sentence on Twelve Natives.

PIETERMARITZBURG, March 29.—The interference of the Colonial Office in London with matters which the Natal Government considers to be outside the Imperial Government's jurisdiction led to-day to the resignation of the Ministry headed by Charles John Smythe.

The Ministry had confirmed the death sentence imposed on twelve natives who took part in the murder of policemen in the recent uprising in this colony. Winston Churchill, Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, cabled to Premier Smythe ordering the suspension of the executions pending the Home Government's consideration of the sentences.

The Premier curtly refused to obey the order, whereupon the Governor, Sir Henry McCullum, under letters patent postponed the executions.

Thereupon the Ministry immediately resigned.

DURBAN, March 29.—The official statement announcing the resignation of the Natal Cabinet points out that the court-martial which imposed the death sentence on twelve natives who took part in the murder of policemen in the recent uprising was composed of five militia officers; that the prisoners were legally represented; that the sentences were confirmed by the Government, and that the Colonial Office was notified, whereupon the Earl of Elgin, Secretary for the Colonies, telegraphed, instructing the Governor to postpone the executions. The statement concludes:

"In view of the importance of the maintenance of the authority of the Government at the present critical juncture, and the constitutional question involved by the interference of the Secretary of State with the decision of the Executive Council, which is responsible to the colony, the Ministers have been compelled instantly to resign. At the request of the Governor, however, they are retaining office pending further communication with Lord Elgin."

LONDON, Friday, March 30.—The new Government is finding continual trouble in its dealings with South Africa. By interfering to delay the execution of twelve natives the imperial authorities have evoked an admittedly grave and delicate crisis which will require the most careful handling.

Dispatches from the South African colonies show that the colonists are boiling with indignation and calling meetings to protest against a procedure which they regard as being calculated to endanger the safety of the whole white population. Flame has been added to the fire by the apparently unjustified injection of Under Colonial Secretary Churchill's name into the affair, for which Lord Elgin, the Colonial Secretary, assumes full responsibility.

The Conservative papers are loud in denunciation of the Government's action.

At the adjournment of Parliament at midnight questions were put in both houses on the Natal crisis. In the House of Lords Lord Elgin confirmed the report of the suspension of the executions, but said he had no further information to impart. He added that there was no possible intention of interfering with the self-government of the colony, but that the execution of twelve men under sentence by a court-martial was a serious matter.

In the House of Commons Winston Churchill said the Government was in full sympathy with Natal in its time of anxiety, and did not apprehend that any serious or constitutional issue would be raised.

Practically the whole of British South Africa is now in a condition of exasperation owing to actions of the new Liberal Ministry.

In the Transvaal there is great resentment owing to the attitude of the Campbell-Bannerman Government regarding Chinese labor; in Cape Colony and elsewhere indignation is expressed on account of the resolution passed by the House of Commons a week ago which amounted practically to censure of Lord Milner, and now the Natal Government has resigned as a result of what it considers the unwarranted interference of the Imperial Government in colonial affairs.

The natives who have been sentenced to death were convicted of the murder of six policemen and of taking up arms against the King. The native outbreak occurred early in February, and became so threatening that martial law was declared. Order was only restored after a punitive expedition of 400 men, with artillery, had been dispatched to the scene of the trouble.

The English critics of the Natal Government assert that it brought the insurrection on itself by its imposition of a poll tax on the natives. The Natalians, on the other hand, assert that the movement was an indication of a serious situation, due primarily to the so-called Ethiopian Church and the cry of "Africa for the Africans."

Natal has been a Crown colony since 1856.

SEIZED IN VENEZUELA.

Citizen of the United States Complains of Ill-Treatment.

Jose Siverio of 321 Hudson Street, Hoboken, N. J., a native of Venezuela, but for many years an American citizen, in a charge filed with the State Department, asserts that he was arrested recently immediately after landing at La Guayra, Venezuela, and after being held a prisoner in the prison at that place for eight days, he was sent back to America. While in prison Siverio claims that he was compelled to suffer great hardship.

His health was endangered by being forced to live in the old prison, Siverio asserts, and before he was imprisoned his passport, citizenship papers, and other papers and his baggage were taken from him by the officials of the Venezuelan Government, who believed him to be an emissary of the revolutionists. He was shipped back to America on the same steamer on which he arrived.

Upon his arrival in New York he proceeded to the office of the Collector of the Port, where he explained his troubles, and yesterday the sworn statement made by Siverio regarding the incident was forwarded to the State Department by Collector Stranahan.

THE ALGECIRAS AFTERMATH.

French Bitterness Toward Germany—France's Prestige Increased.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

PARIS, March 29.—Yesterday's news from Algeciras has made astonishingly little impression in Paris. There are no signs outside Algeciras telegrams of any better feeling toward Germany for what the French positively refuse to regard as concessions.

Without exaggeration it may fairly be said that it will take a generation of different behavior on the part of Germany toward France to efface the deep-rooted ill-feeling caused by the Moroccan affair.

It would, indeed, be extraordinary, too, if France were not conscious of the vast improvement, due to the conference, in her position in the world. At Algeciras France made many friends and drew closer to those she had already. Germany scandalized Europe as well as the United States by the cynical fashion in which she set at naught the elementary usages of diplomatic courtesy.

Another consequence of the conference, and by no means the least important, is Russia's resumption of an active foreign policy, which Germany evidently did not expect would take place so soon. By a stroke of policy which meets with unanimous approval outside Germany Russia has reminded the world that European equilibrium has not undergone quite such a fundamental change as was supposed.

The Franco-Russian alliance, complemented by the Anglo-French entente, may yet prove sufficient for the maintenance of the peace of Europe. At all events, in Paris great hopes are founded on the future of this two-fold combination, from which, of course, Germany has nothing to fear so long as her foreign policy is consistent with peace.

ALGECIRAS, March 29.—The plenary sitting of the Conference on Moroccan Reforms to-day discussed customs tariffs and public works, and agreed regarding a number of details, the remainder going over until Saturday.

The delegates conferred privately relative to the police and bank questions, in order to reach absolute unanimity on those subjects before they come up in the conference.

FIRST RUSSIAN ELECTIONS.

Twelve Conservatives Chosen for the Council of the Empire.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 29.—The first actual elections to the Russian Parliament were held to-day, when twelve members of the Council of the Empire were chosen by a congress composed of representatives of associations of trade and industry throughout European Russia. There was no speechmaking. The members chosen are all well-known men of affairs and of high standing in their respective communities. They are all Conservatives.

Ex-Minister of Commerce Timiriazeff, who presided over the congress, was unanimously elected as one of the delegation to the Council of the Empire, and he undoubtedly is destined to be the leader of the Liberals in the Upper Chamber.

BOYS TRY TO ROB A BANK.

Clerk Saves a Kharkoff Institution—Policeman Mortally Wounded.

KHARKOFF, March 29.—Even more daring than the robbery of the Crédit Mutuel Bank at Moscow recently was the attempt made in broad daylight to-day to rob the Volga Komma Bank by several college boys and technological students.

The youthful desperados quietly walked into the bank with customers of the institution, drew revolvers, and ordered everybody to hold up his hands. Most of the employes fled in panic, but one cool-headed clerk attracted the attention of guards outside, who immediately barred the entrances to the bank.

The students, finding themselves trapped, smashed the windows, jumped out to the street, and attempted to escape under cover of revolver fire. One policeman was mortally wounded. Four of the would-be robbers were overpowered and captured.

Russian Hint in Connection with the Bering Tunnel Plan.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 29.—Baron Loicq de Lobel has altered so as to meet the wishes of the National Defense Committee his Bering Strait tunnel and Siberian Railway project.

Unofficial intimations are given that Russia would be glad to have the concession accompanied by an American loan. The decision of the commission is still in suspense.

Servian Regicides to be Retired.

BELGRADE, March 29.—The leaders of the regicides will shortly be placed on the retired list, thus paving the way for the resumption of diplomatic relations with Great Britain. The most prominent will be debarred from wearing the army uniform. As a sop to the regicides, some thirty of their most active opponents will also be retired.

Danish Line Buys the Rotterdam.

COPENHAGEN, March 29.—The United Steamship Company of Copenhagen (Scandinavian-American Line) has purchased the Holland-America Line's steamer Rotterdam for the service between Copenhagen and New York. She will be renamed the Tietjen.

WOMAN HIGHWAYMAN CAUGHT

Held Up Four Men and Obtained $500—Hides Her Identity.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 29.—A woman bandit had her fling at Cass Lake, Minn., last night, and was captured to-day. She held up four men, and her plunder aggregated about $500. One of her victims parted with a roll of $200 while covered by a big revolver in the hands of the masked woman. Two others enriched her to the extent of $100 each. It is not known how much the fourth victim contributed.

All the hold-ups took place in the street about midnight. When the woman, who refused to give her name, was arrested more than $500 and a revolver were found in her possession. She is well-dressed and about 25 years old.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Mechanical Society of the City College is to hold a meeting this evening at 8 o'clock at the college.

The steamer City of Macon of the Ocean Steamship Company (Savannah Line) started for Savannah yesterday equipped with the De Forest system of wireless telegraphy.

Owing to the unsafe condition of the Morrisania Police Court, it has been temporarily closed, and its business has been transferred to the Eighth District Court in Westchester.

Navigation on the Hudson River being now open, the Troy Line's steamers City of Troy and Saratoga, after being thoroughly overhauled, will run between New York and Troy, leaving their pier, foot of West Tenth Street, at 6 o'clock every evening.

Sentence of Berthe Claiche for the killing of Emil Gendron was deferred yesterday because District Attorney Jerome is still investigating the "white slave" traffic.

It came out yesterday that Mrs. Emily Bloodgood, who was taken from the Hoffman Arms to Bellevue Hospital on Wednesday night after dining with her son, H. L. Bloodgood of the Racquet and Tennis Club, was hysterical from the pain an ulcerated tooth gave her. The statement that she was suffering from opium poisoning was denied at the house.

GOT GREEN GOODS MEN WITH THE GREEN GOODS

Both Crooks Fought, but the Detective Sergeant Won.

STRATEGY THAT SUCCEEDED

Fake Telegrams Lured the Green Goods Men Into a Trap Laid by the Police.

Some months ago the country was flooded with green goods literature, written in French and directed to French residents—principally those engaged in small businesses. One of the men who got this literature was Louis Marceau, a saloonkeeper, of 1,228 Indiana Avenue, Chicago. Marceau communicated with the postal authorities, and Post Office Inspector Boyle of the New York District was informed.

Boyle told Inspector McLaughlin, who put Detective Sergeant Rheume on the case. Rheume, who speaks French, mapped out a plan of campaign.

It was planned that Marceau should telegraph the New Yorkers with bogus money for sale that he was coming on, and should send a second telegram from Buffalo. The telegrams were duly sent, the second saying that he would arrive at the Grand Central Station at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon and take a room at the Ashland House, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street.

Rheume, in disguise, met the train up the road and came in with it. He went to the Ashland House and registered as Marceau. He had hardly been in his room half an hour when there was a rap at his door. When he opened it he recognized his caller as Johnny Tucker, a pickpocket, who has been lined up at Headquarters morning after morning. Tucker did not recognize him and started in to play the part of host. He took the supposed stranger to Brooklyn and finally landed him at 250 Navy Street, where he was introduced to a third man.

The third man said that he was ready to transact the business which had brought the supposed Chicagoan to New York. Rheume started to talk French. The third man excused himself and said that he had rather converse in English. Rheume acquiesced. The third man showed a package containing $1,000 in real money and a number of bogus packages which only boasted good bills on the outside. Then Rheume drew a revolver and declared himself.

The third man, when he saw the police badge, threw the $1,000 in real money at Rheume, with a significant wink. Rheume gathered in the money but shook his head. Then both men tackled him. In the struggle the third man was shot in the head, the bullet inflicting a glancing wound. Other tenants ran in to see what the trouble was, and Rheume, who by this time had his men lined up against the wall, sent for the police.

Policemen O'Malley and Whitman of the Adams Street Station responded, and Tucker and the man with the package were taken to Headquarters in Manhattan. There the third man gave his name as George Parker. He said he was 48 years old, a broker, and lived at 134 Sands Street, Brooklyn. No less than $1,669 was found in his possession.

Tucker was much chagrined when Detective Sergeant Rheume reminded him of the number of times they had seen each other.

Painter Killed in the Subway.

Frank Meer, a painter, employed by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, in painting the Subway pillars and uprights, was struck last night by a south-bound express, just above the Eighteenth Street Station. His skull was fractured and a right rib broken. He died later in Bellevue Hospital. Downtown express traffic was delayed twenty minutes.

Using Black and White

Colortype illustrations show buyers who cannot see the actual goods just what the goods look like, and, if they are attractive, make them want to possess them.

A lot of firms who are not using Colortype illustrations are missing the opportunity for increased profit that Colortype illustrations would bring them.

TO BROADEN BRIBERY QUEST.

Gov. Stokes Will Urge a Thorough Legislative Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, March 29.—The demand for an investigation of the charge of soliciting bribes to kill bills affecting pawnbrokers, made against Senators Shirm of Ocean and Carlens of Hunterdon, will be broadened into a requisition for an inquiry into other charges of legislative corruption.

Senator Colby and some others are preparing to introduce a resolution of that sort into the Senate when it gets together for work again. Gov. Stokes will urge the present investigation, and a shaking-up is looked for.

When asked to name the man who had given to him for introduction the two pawnbrokers' bills over which the charges arose, Senator Martens said he could not remember. He has since admitted that he received them from Fred Kissam, described in Krimke's affidavit as the lobbyist who introduced the accused Senators to the member of the State Pawnbrokers' Association.

Senator Hillery, the Republican leader in the Senate, says that the first business to be taken up next Monday evening will be a resolution for an investigation.

An examination of the Senate record to-day shows that one of the two bills that figure in the incident had been pushed through the Senate yesterday afternoon an hour before the story of Krimke's affidavit became known here.

Frederick Kissam, in Jersey City, yesterday denied that he had said anything about money to defeat the pawnbrokers' bills. He said that Krimke's charges, so far as they affected him, were false.

Crops Damaged and Live Stock Drowned in Alabama.

Special to The New York Times.

MOBILE, Ala., March 29.—Reports received here tell of the serious conditions existing along the Alabama River, due to the overflow. For a hundred miles lowlands are under water from two to six feet, and crops are damaged. The State Commissioner of Agriculture estimates the loss to the cotton crop by rain at 50 per cent.

Rain is again falling over the upper watershed, and the river continues to rise. Carcasses of cattle and other livestock by the hundred are strewn over the inundated district.

Fatally Crushed by Senate Elevator.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Mrs. Mary C. Wallace of Denver was fatally injured in the public elevator in the Senate wing of the Capitol to-day by attempting to leave the car while it was in motion. Her chest was badly crushed. She died in the Casualty Hospital this evening. A coroner's inquest will be held.

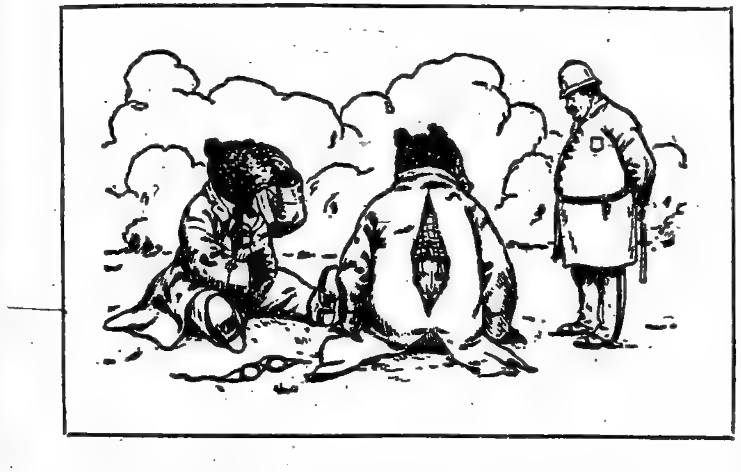
Wholesome Fun for Old and Young

THE AUTO RIDE OF Teddy-B and Teddy-G NEXT SUNDAY



The Bears were shown the works inside,
And how to steer and how to ride,
And what to do to climb a hill,
And how to start or stop at will,
And the horn to blow and the way to back
When there's danger forward on the track.
TEDDY—G said he would chauffeur be,
And run the car like sixty-three;
While TEDDY—B said folks would find
Him following pretty close behind.

THE STORY

The Roosevelt Bears start out from Boston to Lexington and Concord in an automobile. They see the grave of Longfellow at Mount Auburn, study American history at Lexington, and have an interesting hour at Concord. The fun begins when they start for home. Their auto breaks down, and when they get it started again they are unable to regulate the speed and it heads for Boston at a pace that breaks all records. The two pictures in this announcement show a little of what happened. Get THE NEW YORK TIMES next Sunday. The automobile pictures are alone worth the price.

The bears read history for an hour
In the Hancock House and Belfry Tower.
On monuments and tablets here
They learned the stories of Paul Revere,
And Captain Parker and his patriots brave
Who tried to make King George behave.
Then off again on lively run
To see the home of Emerson.

"Do you know the law?" the policeman said;
But TEDDY—G just shook his head;
While TEDDY—B said "We may be green;
But the thing to fine is this old machine."
They argued points to prove their case
And told the officer face to face
That this ride of theirs was a record run
And they didn't like to be pinched for fun.
But all their talk was of no avail;
The were taken off to Boston jail
And given a cell and locked up tight
And told to stay there for the night.

M'NUTT, MASTER CROOK, IS CONVICTED AT LAST

Jury Takes Ten Minutes to Convict Him of Mining Swindle.

HE MAY GET TEN YEARS

Many Times Arrested, This Is His First Conviction in a Long Career of Varied Crookedness.

Nemesis overtook William H. McNutt in the Court of General Sessions yesterday, when, for the first time in his career as wire tapper, confidence man, and manipulator of bogus mining stocks, McNutt was found guilty by a jury. He was charged with swindling John Whyatt, a saloon keeper, of 360 Lenox Avenue, out of $3,500 by selling him worthless shares in the Central Idaho Gold Mining Company.

It took the jurors ten minutes to convict. Their action was influenced principally by a letter written by McNutt to the executors of a man whom he had driven to a premature death by robbing him of nearly $100,000 and smirching his good name by associating it with a scheme for plundering the unsophisticated. McNutt was remanded until to-day for sentence. When he is brought before Judge Foster, Assistant District Attorney Train will review his career, with the intention of persuading the court to inflict the maximum sentence of ten years. These are the main facts that Mr. Train will place before the court:

Beginning as a "fake" wire tapper and branching out into stock swindling, McNutt has managed to keep the New York police—as well as that of many other cities—interested in his operations ever since March, 1892, when he was arrested on account of a wire-tapping game and photographed for the Rogues' Gallery. Before and after that date he has been arrested scores of times, generally as a "suspicious person."

His biggest and most notorious exploit was the floating of the Central Idaho Gold mining Company, a "two-million-dollar" corporation, organized by McNutt after he had invested a few hundred dollars in some worthless mining property at Rocky Bar, Idaho, which a Scotch company had vainly tried to develop. It was incorporated in West Virginia, with Dr. E. Patterson Hayes, a New York dentist, as President. The subsequent operations of McNutt in his effort to get money out of the public by manipulation of the stock of this concern reached a tragic climax with the death of David H. Barnett, owner of the New York Saddlery Company, at Newark, N. J., who was persuaded by McNutt to succeed Hayes as President and to invest $100,000 in the stock.

Barnett was brought so completely under the influence of the swindler that it seemed to his friends that he was hypnotized. His death was attribtuted by his friends to the discovery of the fraud practiced on him and to his shame at having permitted himself to be duped.

The death of Barnett led to the final downfall of McNutt. The swindler, emboldened by many successes and long immunity, wrote an impudent letter to the executors of the Barnett estate—Judge Ten Eyck of the New Jersey Court of Common Pleas and Thomas Pruitt of Newark—telling them in cynical phrases that the stock of the Central Idaho Company, sold to Barnett, was totally worthless, as the property of the concern had been sold at auction at a bargain price.

This letter was written on Feb. 5, last year. A month later John H. Whyatt, the complainant in the case just decided by the jury, was persuaded by McNutt and his fellow-conspirators to give $3,500 for a block of the Idaho stock, on the ground that it was worth $1.25 a share, and that McNutt and John W. Gates were fighting for control of the company.

The original letter was lost, but McNutt had committed the mistake of keeping a copy of it in his letter book, and this book fell into the hands of the District Attorney.

In 1902 McNutt used the Idaho stock to swindle Willard T. Block, Secretary of the Grant Land Association of Chicago, out of $13,000 by a triangular game identical in almost every detail to the one employed to ensnare Whyatt.

When he had played the Idaho property for all it was worth, McNutt reorganized the company under the name of the Okobojo Company, another "$2,000,000" corporation, after having bought in the assets of the former concern at auction for a few dollars. When victims of the Idaho swindle clamored for their money, he offered them a share of the $5 Okobojo stock in exchange for five shares of the defunct corporation. Most of them took the bait, and thus exempted McNutt from criminal prosecution.

No sooner had the Okobojo scheme been worked to its limit than McNutt effected a second reorganization under the name of the Elmore Mines, Consolidated. For this latest concern he persuaded Eugene Jerome to act as President, ex-Coroner O'Gorman as Secretary, and Daniel Nason as counsel. Before floating its stock he had joined the property of the Gluck Mining Company to that of the Idaho and Okobojo Companies.

Ex-Coroner O'Gorman was one of the two witnesses put on the stand in defense of McNutt, and he testified to the defendant's excellent reputation "for truth, honesty, and integrity."

McNutt has generally been credited with having been the backer of the late Gussie McKee, known as the "poolroom queen." He has always boasted of his "pull" and his close friendship with leading politicians. In his confiscated letter book were found communications from some of the best-known men in this country, including two United States Senators.

EAST SIDE CHARITY TO MOVE.

German Poliklinik Purchases German Hospital and Dispensary Building.

The German Poliklinik, an institution for the free medical treatment of the sick poor, located for the past fifteen years at 78 and 80 Seventh Street, will soon move into the building at 137 Second Avenue, erected by Mrs. Anna Offendorfer, and presented by her to the German Hospital and Dispensary Society, about thirty years ago.

The German Poliklinik, founded in 1883, is unique among the medical charities of New York, in that its Board of Trustees is composed almost entirely of physicians. The dispensary was originally located in a private house, at 411 Sixth Street, to meet the crying demand for such an institution for the free treatment of the sick poor of the neighborhood, regardless of creed, race, or color.

CALLS NURSES OVERTRAINED.

Dr. Thompson Suggests Changes in Their Course of Study.

More trained nurses than could find seats in Hosack Hall listened to opinions and criticisms on the present-day training of nurses at the Academy of Medicine, 17 West Forty-third Street, last night. Five papers were read, followed by a general discussion of the subject. Dr. W. Gilman Thompson spoke on "The Overtrained Nurse."

He said that physicians connected with institutions having training schools should insist on representation in their boards of school management not merely in an advisory, but a governmental, capacity. The curriculum of every training school, he said, should be submitted for approval to physicians associated with the government of the school. He suggested that nurses should be required to work for two years for a diploma of graduation, and should then undergo subsequent training for a year or more, entitling them to an additional certificate. Hospitals, he argued, should admit for six months of training attendants who could handle less serious cases at a small expense to the patient. He thought, also, that provision should be made for the studying of nursing of private patients prior to graduation.

"The primary responsibility for the present system of nurses' training," said Dr. Thompson, "belongs to the members of the medical profession, who, if they would devote as much time to the training school curriculum and the relationship of the nurses' work to that of the house staff as they devote to their medical duties, would soon produce ideal results in the system, which, despite its shortcomings, has been of great benefit ever since it was established."

George P. Ludlam, Superintendent of the New York Hospital, talked on "The Organization and Control of Training Schools"; Miss Mary A. Samuels, Superintendent of the Roosevelt Hospital nurses, on "What Nurses Should Be Taught"; Dr. A. A. Smith on "The Trained Nurse and Medicine," and Dr. Robert Abbe on "The Trained Nurse and Surgery." There was general discussion by Drs. W. P. Northrup, Walter B. James, Henry P. Loomis, and others.

PERIL IN CENTRAL'S WIRES.

The Road Can't String Them Overhead, Says Commissioner Ellison.

Serious trouble is in store for the New York Central Railroad in carrying out its plans to electrify the line from the Grand Central Station to Peekskill unless Commissioner Ellison of the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity recedes from the position he has taken regarding the placing of the 11,000-volt high-power wires along the line.

Commissioner Ellison announced yesterday that he had declined to grant the road a permit to place these wires overhead and was insisting that they be placed in conduits running alongside the tracks. The road has ordered hundreds of heavy steel poles to be placed along its tracks and has caused hundreds of pits to be dug and concreted, so that they would be ready for the poles when they arrive. They will be useless under the present ruling for that part of the road between the Grand Central Statiton and the city line. Said Commissioner Ellison:

"The public rides over the road, even if it is excluded from walking along the right of way. Therefore the public is entitled to protection, and it would be in serious danger if the wires were placed overhead. The falling of a single one of those heavy voltage wires would cause serious damage, and possibly great loss of life.

"In the Bronx, the road in many cases crosses thoroughfares at grade between Mott Haven and Spuyten Duyvil. It is too bad to knock out the entire plans of the Central people, but I feel that the people must be protected, and I do not think they would be protected if this permit were granted by me."

The attorneys for the New York Central may begin mandamus proceedings against the Commissioner.

ESTATE GREW SEVENFOLD.

Goshen Banker Gives an Account of His Stewardship.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, March 29.—George W. Murray, President of a Goshen bank, to-day presented to the court here the final accounting in the estate of John V. Beam, a former resident of Pompton, this county, who died about fifteen years ago.

When Mr. Beam died he left property valued at $100,000, half of it personal property and the remainder real estate in West Street, New York City; in Buffalo, and in Pompton. In the accounting to-day the property was shown to have increased to the value of $700,000.

CORPORAL TANNER STIRRED.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 29.—"If the Republican Party continues to slap at the Grand Army men, as it has been doing recently, I would not be surprised to see the next House Democratic," is the statement made by Corp. Tanner, Commander in Chief of the G. A. R., in discussing the fight led by Chairman Tawney of the House Committee on Appropriations, to have all civil employes removed from Government service who have reached the age of 70 in 1913.

"I am making this fight," said Corp. Tanner, "for all veterans. This is a reunited country. This bill would hurt hundreds of Confederate veterans in office as well as Union men."

NEGRO THIEF GETS A YEAR.

Sadel, While on Parole, Committed Robberies Amounting to $6,000.

Leslie Sadel, the negro who, while out of parole from Sing Sing, stole an express wagon and horse and two trunks containing $5,000 worth of jewelry, and who also sneaked into John F. Carroll's house in the daytime and carried off $1,000 worth of clothes and jewelry, was sentenced to a year in the penitentiary by Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions yesterday.

Before sentence could be pronounced, Sadel made the unusual request for a private talk with Judge O'Sullivan. The Judge ordered the prisoner sent up to him and talked with him on the bench. When the interview was ended, Sadel returned smiling to his place in front of the bar. He was still smiling when he listened to the sentence.

Bingham Hopes for 2,000 More Men.

Alderman Davies, Chairman of the Aldermanic Finance Committee, called at Police Headquarters yesterday and had a long talk with Commissioner Bingham. Later the Commissioner said he was well pleased as a result of the visit, and felt as if many of the requests made by him would be granted, notably money for 2,000 more patrolmen.

PRIZEFIGHT PILGRIMS JOURNEYED TO NO FIGHT

And Their $800 Has Vanished—So, Also, Has "Kid" Betts.

BUT THEY FOUND THE RING

The Fighters Were at Orangeburg, Too, but "No Money, No Fight," Said They.

Several hundred followers of the prize ring from the region of Forty-second Street and Broadway spent Wednesday night tramping over the cornfields around Orangeburg, N. Y., looking for a prizefight that didn't come off.

According to a man who "didn't go," the fight was arranged by "Kid" Betts, who earned this pugilistic title because he was young at the game of fighting. He, with a Neapolitan youth named Vincent, appeared a few days ago in a rendezvous frequented by followers of the fighters at Forty-second Street and Broadway and went about whispering.

The fight was to be between "Kid" Schumacher and "Kid" Murphy, and tickets were to be had by "none but the initiated." The price was at first 50 cents, and went up to $3 as the demand increased and the supply lessened. About 600 tickets were sold, and between $700 and $800 was realized by the promoters.

Following the instructions of "Kid" Betts, the sporting men, full of enthusiasm and things, met at the West Shore station in Weehawken, where a special train awaited them. "Kid" Betts was there as evidence of good faith and traveled with the train until it reached Orangeburg, which is near Nyack. Here the promoter of the fight asked the sporting men to keep their seats, as carriages would appear presently and save walking in the mud.

Betts and the Neapolitan youth then departed into the dismal night to find the carriages. They did not reappear. When the special became chilly about 10 P. M. the fight seekers decided to try to trail the missing "Kid."

The way was long, the mud was deep, and the roadway was infirm and cold. It led through cornfields, wagon tracks, dripping woods, and all under a sickly moon and in an icy breeze. But the sporting men arrived at length at a barn where there was a wooden floor and a piece of string encircling a few posts.

The delegation sat down and waited. The prize fighters turned up, but they wouldn't fight until they saw the money. They did not seem as annoyed as the spectators about the delay. "Kid" Betts did not turn up, nor did the Neapolitan youth who had been with him. A search party which was sent out returned at midnight with wet feet and without "Kid" Betts.

At midnight the sporting men yielded to a suggestion that the price of the fight be reconstructed with the aid of a hat. Over $40 was raised, but it didn't produce any fight. On the contrary, it appeared to produce the absence of the fighters.

The delegation returned to New York, sadder and, it is to be hoped, wiser. George Considine was asked yesterday if he had been of the party. He denied it fluently. Asked where "Kid" Betts was, he said, with fine reserve:

"He is gone away from here."

BERRY LEADS FOR SENATOR.

Both He and Gov. Davis Claim a Victory in State Primaries.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 29.—Incomplete returns from a majority of the seventy-five counties in the Democratic State primary yesterday show a lead of 2,000 for Senator James H. Berry over Gov. Jefferson Davis in the contest for the United States Senatorship.

Additional returns are awaited with great interest, as both sides are claiming a victory. Heavy rains continued throughout the State to-day and retarded the collection of returns in the country precincts. The final figures for the nomination will probably show a narrow margin for the winner. The nomination of the State ticket headed by John S. Little for Governor is assured.

SEAL FLEET'S RECORD CATCH.

Will Probably Exceed 400,000 Skins, the Greatest in Forty Years.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., March 29.—The sealing steamer Diana, with 24,000 sealskins in her hold, and the Vanguard, with 22,000, arrived here to-night.

Both steamers report that the remaining ships of the sealing fleet are continuing the large catches heretofore announced, conservative estimates placing the number of seals already taken at 350,000—the largest catch of the past forty years.

It is believed that the 400,000 mark will have been passed before the fishing season ends next month.

Benj. R. Vaughn Sued for Divorce.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 29.—Mrs. Margaret Vaughn has begun suit against her husband, Benjamin R. Vaughn, for absolute divorce and the custody of their son, on the ground of non-support. Until she went to New York two weeks ago Mrs. Vaughn had resided with her parents. Vaughn has been in New York arranging to go into the banking business. It is not expected that the divorce suit will be contested.

Gen. P. F. Wanser was yesterday reappointed Postmaster of Jersey City for a third term. He is an organization Republican, and was first appointed by President McKinley in 1898.

MINEOLA, L. I., March 29.—Surrogate Edgar Jackson to-day approved the report of Appraiser Lewis of the transfer tax on the estate of Edward R. Ladew of Glen Cove, the society and horse man, who died on Aug. 30 last. He leaves an estate of $2,120,798.69, of which the widow, Louise Berry Wall Ladew, receives $714,683.98 and the two children, Harvey S. and Elsie W. Ladew, each $703,057.38.

Irving Bacheller's new novel has all the freshness of his first great success—"EBEN HOLDEN." Some of the maxims in his diary ought to be posted in every man's hat. He is a droll, amusing and heroic figure. Equally irresistible are:

BOY BEHEADED BY A CAR.

Louis Glick Killed in Madison Avenue—Crowd Threatens Motorman.

A northbound Madison Avenue car ran over and killed a little boy between 102d and 103d Streets at 8 o'clock last night. Early this morning Herman Glick, a builder, of 1,495 Madison Avenue, identified the lad as his son, Louis Glick, 5 years old.

When Peter Robling, the motorman, who lives at 105 East Eighty-fourth Street, stopped the car he called Roundsman Hoffman of the East 104th Street Station. It was found that the boy's head had been cut off.

A crowd gathered quickly and threatened the motorman. The police had difficulty in getting him away in safety.

The avenue is poorly lighted where the accident happened, and Robling said he did not see the boy until the car was upon him.

Rat Army Stampedes Workmen.

Workmen who began yesterday to tear out the cellars of four razed buildings at First and Erie Streets, Jersey City, where a theatre is to be erected, were obliged to suspend operations by an army of rats which ran out of nooks and corners and dashed wildly about the place. The workmen fled to the street. All the fox terriers in the neighborhood were sent for, and it took them an hour to clear the cellars of rats.

THE SENATORS FROM NEW YORK.

Is there any reason, in politics or in expediency, why the great State of New York should not be as well and as ably represented in the Senate of the United States as Wisconsin and Pennsylvania? It is humiliating, but it is true, that for fifty years New York has sent to Washington no Senator capable of illuminating a public question and of aiding the National legislators to form their conclusions and the people their opinions, by the delivery of such speeches as during the past week have been delivered in the Senate by Mr. SPOONER of Wisconsin and Mr. KNOX of Pennsylvania.

We note as exceptions to this ruling and confession the names of WILLIAM M. EVARTS and of DAVID B. HILL. Of Mr. EVARTS's eminence and capacity as a constitutional lawyer there need be no question. But it is certainly true that by his service in the Senate and the part he took in debate, Mr. EVARTS would not enhance, he would not even sustain, the great reputation he had gained at the bar. Mr. HILL, whose activity in politics has somewhat detracted from the reputation he has gained and deserves as a lawyer, surprised both his friends and his enemies by the ability he exhibited in the performance of his duties as United States Senator. But as an expounder of constitutional principles and as an advocate and critic of public policies we should hardly compare Mr. HILL with Mr. SPOONER or Mr. KNOX.

The labor and the learning which the Senators from Wisconsin and from Pennsylvania devoted to the preparation of their speeches upon the Rate bill would in the case of a private client be moderately compensated by a fee in each case of $100,000. We must add, too, that some days ago Senator FORAKER of Ohio delivered upon the rate question a speech remarkable for the force and clearness of its constitutional expositions. It is a matter of no great public moment, and to be noted only in passing, that their immediate reward is to be denounced as "traitors" by conscienceless writers of the ten-cent yellow variety, and to be designated even upon the floor of the Senate as the agents of the railways. That is annoying, it is indecent, but after all it is not of serious importance. From the foundation of the Government no man in that body has with deeper conviction or with more sincere and loyal devotion to the public welfare proclaimed the honest opinions of his mind than Senator SPOONER and Senator KNOX, when they pointed out the unsound and unconstitutional provisions of the Hepburn bill as it passed the House.

But that is not the question here raised. The term for which the present Senators of New York were elected expire, respectively, in 1909 and 1911. Circumstances and conditions upon which it is needless to dwell, but which are within the knowledge of all men, make it probable that, before these terms expire successors to the New York Senators will be sent to Washington. Is it inevitable, is it necessary that the mean ambitions of small men, the supposed interests of party, shall control New York's choice of Senators to succeed Mr. PLATT and Mr. DEPEW? New York is the greatest State in the Union. Small Senators ill become her. They cannot fitly represent her people, her standing, her interests. Is it not time to discard the almost unbroken half-century tradition of inferiority in that great Council Chamber?

CONSULAR SCANDALS.

It seems safe to say that the confidential report of Mr. PEIRCE, late Third Assistant Secretary of State, of his inspection of Consulates in the East ought not to have been made public. It is calculated to give acute pain not only to the officials directly concerned, but to many innocent third parties. The proper use of it was to employ it in the discipline or discharge of the offenders. If the Congressional "backer" of one of the offenders there appeared at the department, demanding to know why his "man" had been degraded or discharged, it would have been proper to show him confidentially the confidential evidence on which the departmental action had been based.

The publication of the whole report or of any part of it looks like wanton cruelty. But the cruelty is not that of the department, but that of the House of Representatives, which demanded the publication. Necessarily the evidence is for the most part hearsay. That does not in the least invalidate it. General repute is an excellent criterion of the usefulness of a Consul, and the usefulness is destroyed of a Consul who has become disreputable. Secretary ROOT is thoroughly warranted in saying that the report shows the necessity of provision for a regular and systematic instead of an occasional and casual inspection of Consulates. He refrains from drawing another equally obvious moral, and that is that no system of appointment and promotion could well yield worse results than are sometimes yielded by the system of Congressional "pull" or push.

Evidently the disclosures of the report, painful as they are, will greatly strengthen the President in refusing to make, under that influence, appointments of the propriety of which he himself is not thoroughly satisfied.

ARMY MARRIAGES.

Sounding again the note sounded several months ago by Gen. CORBIN, Secretary TAFT has declared to the Military Committee of the Senate that "young Lieutenants should not burden themselves with wives on the present pay." Gen. CORBIN made himself the target of many unpleasant jeers from the wives, and perhaps still more from the fiancées, of "young Lieutenants." In communications to the press and otherwise these ladies contrasted the comparative cost and the comparative return in happiness of a bride on the one hand and mess bills and poker on the other.

In the cold light of mature reason the General and the Secretary are in the right. A "young Lieutenant" without other means than his pay is burdening himself when he marries a girl with no money of her own. The couple will be much embarrassed when they encounter socially civilians of their own kind as regards tastes and education, but of more money. Their best refuge is some remote post where there are no civilians, where the army people are all poor together, and extreme frugality is enforced upon everybody. In such a society there are doubtless as "good times" as in more expensive civilian circles. But the two circles should not intersect.

In the German Army, of which the pay is less than half our own, a bachelor subaltern is not allowed to marry, we believe, unless he can show to the satisfaction of his superiors that either he or the prospective bride has "private means." Gen. CORBIN, it seems, indicated some such regulation as proper in our own army. Hence those jeers. But it is certainly worth the attention of Congress that the present rate of pay of the army puts a pressure on a young officer who has to live on his pay to quit the army if he wishes to marry, no matter how much he may prefer the army, and no matter how much he may be or promise to be of "an ornament to the service." Meanwhile Secretary TAFT can do something of his own motion to relieve the state of things which he deplores. He can, for example, modify those preposterous and outrageous regulations of his own department which make it imperative that an officer shall spend three or four times as much on his clothes as a civilian is compelled to do.

MR. BRYAN UPON SOCIALISM.

There have been many indications in the last few years that Mr. WILLIAM J. BRYAN is rebuilding his reputation. We find solid evidence of the fact in an article upon "Individualism versus Socialism" which Mr. BRYAN contributes to The Century Magazine for April. It is an article that any candid and conservative critic of the theories of Socialism would be willing to sign, an article that would enhance the reputation of any writer from that point of view whose utterances have recently come under our notice. The subject is one upon which well-ordered minds often go astray. It is one that, involving as it does the strife of class with class, frequently begets extravagance of statement and want of charity toward opponents and intolerance of opinions that may be very sincerely held. Mr. BRYAN neither deceives himself nor does he seek in the least degree to mislead his readers. His attitude is wholly fair. He examines the questions at issue with a judicial mind. His exposition is lucid, his arguments temperate, his conclusions will find wide acceptance.

We should suppose that many men young and old, who, yielding to the tendency of the times and helped along by a flood of half-reasoned talk and writing, have found themselves inclined to accept the doctrines of Socialism, would be set right by Mr. BRYAN's brief and convincing examination of the Socialistic demand for the abolishment of competition. For the purposes of his discussion Mr. BRYAN says that "individualism will be defined as the private ownership of the means of production and distribution, where competition is possible, leaving to public ownership those means of production and distribution in which competition is practically impossible; and Socialism will be defined as the collective ownership through the State of all the means of production and distribution." This means, as one Socialist puts it, "the common ownership" of natural resources and the common operation of all industries for the public good." It has always seemed to us that the fundamental error of Socialism was the assumption that the establishment of "co-operative association" would in some way change the nature of man, that when the Socialistic Republic was established all its citizens would by some magic transformation become virtuous, unselfish, and love their brothers as themselves. Mr. BRYAN lays bare this fallacy of the reasoning of the Socialists in the paragraph quoted below:

> The Government, whether it leans toward individualism or toward Socialism, must be administered by human beings, and its administration will reflect the weaknesses and imperfections of those who control it. BANCROFT declares that the expression of the universal conscience in history is the nearest approach to the voice of GOD, and he is right in paying this tribute to the wisdom of the masses; and yet we cannot overlook the fact that this universal conscience must find Governmental expression through frail human beings who yield to the temptation to serve their own interests at the expense of their fellows. Will Socialism purge the individual of selfishness or bring a nearer approach to justice?

He sees clearly, as everybody sees, that the Socialists have been helped beyond measure by abuses of individual privilege:

> At present private monopoly is putting upon individualism an undeserved odium, and it behooves the individualist to address himself energetically to this problem in order that the advantages of competition may be restored to industry.

He awards to Socialists the credit of assisting in the correction of these abuses. Undoubtedly an examination of false remedies helps us to find the true remedy. Of the existence of evils growing out of individualism there is no question. The Socialists would cure them by overturning the established order of society; for some of the most influential among them look beyond the common ownership of resources, of production, to the general redistribution of wealth already produced. Mr. BRYAN's remedies are more reasonable, saner, safer. He would correct, not destroy. That is what any man in his senses would do if his health or his household were endangered.

Mr. BRYAN's article is not only timely, but it has a very high degree of usefulness because it comes from him. He is influential, he has the confidence of a very large part of the voting population. His wise counsels will serve as a potent counteractive to the appeals which Socialism and the shallow and ill-trained writers who are aiding and abetting Socialism are now making to the American people.

"ROBBING THE POOR."

In this week's Judge Mike says to Pat, "The rich live by robbing the poor." And Pat, like a good Yankee, replies by the question, "Phwere do th' poor git all th' money they are robbed of?" 'Tis a good jest enough, and possibly one of those where more is meant than meets the eye. With Judge's permission we will consider it seriously, for it is not at all a jest that the poor think they are being robbed because they do not get rich as quick as some others. This of course refers to the poor as a class, for some poor get rich as quick as anybody. There is no doubt, for instance, that SCHWAB and CARNEGIE and EDISON and thousands more both started humbly and "arrived" as swiftly as any poor man could desire. But individual exceptions only prove the rule that the poor as a class think—and are encouraged by some in thinking—that they are robbed because they do not get rich faster.

At Indianapolis Mr. MITCHELL set up a distinct claim by the miners to part of their employers' profits:

> The American people are going to ask, and insist upon knowing, why the operators cannot pay an advance of 8 cents a ton. And we are going to ask you why you can now charge the American people an advance of $1 per ton and not be able to pay us an advance of 8 cents a ton.

But why should employers increase wages because they are able to increase them? That is not the way of the world, and ought not to be. Employers must pay for labor the market rate—and not seldom more than the market rate—whether they can afford to or not, and sometimes go into bankruptcy because of the fact. The coal operators now say that they cannot continue their business if their labor costs cannot be checked. And as a general proposition unless the cost of production can be kept down the term of present prosperity is limited. When costs rise so that goods cannot be consumed, dull times are at hand. Whenever plants cannot sell their product not alone do wages fall. The value of the plant decreases in proportion to the check to consumption, and the liquidation is not in millions of wages, but in billions of investments.

We think Mr. MITCHELL mistakes public sentiment, which is better reflected in Judge's shrewd jest than in his Indianapolis speech. We think people are more concerned about the price of coal than about the rate of pay for mining. It would be different if the people supposed that the miners were being underpaid. But the contrary opinion prevails, for miners were never more prosperous. If their jobs are so ill-paid that they do not care to keep them, there is no demand that they shall labor for less than they can earn otherwise. But if they, as heretofore, club those willing to take the jobs for the same pay, the public will think the Labor Trust is in the same class with the Coal Trust. Thus far the operators have the better of the argument, chiefly because Mr. MITCHELL has allowed his side to go almost unstated. The public mind is open, and the miners' side will be heard, but it is important to the miners before it is too late to make sure that there is any such public demand for an increase in the miners' pay that consumers would be willing to pay more for coal to bring it about. We doubt that consumers will again stand being exploited by a combination of trusts.

A BULL IN THE RATE SHOP.

President McGOWAN, the Aldermen's expert upon the inter-State commerce law, has been answered by the Pennsylvania Railway as to why it is impracticable to accept, as part of the consideration for the Connecting Railway franchise, a clause forbidding discrimination against freight consigned to New York. Expressed more freely than in Mr. REA's reply, the reason is that railways running to other ports threaten to reduce their rates below whatever rates are charged to New York unless there is an agreement regarding rates to all ports. The result is that rates are higher to all ports than they might be if all railways were to enter into cut-throat and bankrupting competition. There is a third choice—an identical rate might be charged from the interior to all ports. In that case the bulk of export traffic would come to New York as naturally as water runs down hill. The prevention of this is the object of the discrimination to which Mr. McGOWAN objected.

The only one of these schemes which has been proved in practice injurious to everybody is that of unrestrained and piratical competition, each port underbidding every other. The present system of equalizing conditions by allowing ports other than New York to charge an agreed lower rate, in order to attract some business to themselves, is certainly prejudicial to New York, if nothing else be considered. But there is so much else to be considered that the Inter-State Commerce Commission has approved the existing system, which Mr. McGOWAN apparently wished to disturb. We are not concerned to prevent freight from coming to New York, but we wish to point out to ports competing with New York that the danger which threatens them if this result is reached as the result of Federal rate regulation may be realized sooner as the result of bull-in-the-china-shop methods of disturbing railway rates. It is their trade, not the trade of New York, which is imperiled as the result of abolition of differentials, whether by the franchise negotiations or by Congressional action.

Senator ALDRICH, in this week's debate, stated in the Senate that this differential question was more important than the rate or judicial review question, over which all interested in the subject are confused. And other Senators were unable to agree whether or not the pending bill gave the Inter-State Commerce Commission jurisdiction over the matter. If Mr. McGOWAN does not mind, most people would prefer that this subject should be settled by others than by the Aldermen. The topic is important enough to be decided independently upon its own merits by a higher jurisdiction than the Aldermen's, and not by indirection in a clause in a franchise contract.

Public welfare would be subserved by a "compromise" which would give Mr. McGOWAN the form of victory and allow the Pennsylvania to have its contract unhampered by inappropriate restrictions.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Laughter Over Grave Evils.

Others than the correspondent whose letter we printed yesterday have been moved to serious thought by the fact that a current play which shows the United States Senate as controlled by a conscienceless and ruthless "captain of industry" should be accepted as true by the public that sees it and yet be provocative of laughter instead of horror, alarm, and humiliation. Our correspondent reached as explanation of this phenomenon the rather despairing theory that a general mad rush for wealth has blunted most sensibilities and left people unable to understand that such a situation as that revealed in "The Lion and the Mouse" is tragical rather than comic. There is some excuse, perhaps, for holding that theory, but excuse is not enough, and, whatever the laughter excited by this play may mean, it doesn't mean anything new—doesn't prove that the present is different from or worse than the past. The attempted correction of grave social evils by presenting them in a ridiculous light in books or on the stage has been familiar for not a few centuries. The greatest of writers have done it again and again, in all countries where there have been great writers, and that their work, when of this order, has always been received with amusement need be really regretted only by the oversensitive. The evils do have their laughable side and recognition of it is often the very best means of putting an end to them. As for this particular play, perhaps our correspondent is wrong in assuming that the spectators admit its accuracy. The Senate has had its scandals, big and little, and nobody thinks that all its members now are creditable to the country or to the States that send them there, and yet—and yet—well, deep down in our hearts we know that the captains of industry do not control all of the Senate all of the time, and that, everything considered, it is a protection rather than a peril to our liberties and our institutions. The country, as a matter of fact, is not going to the bow-wows, it is not deteriorating from any Golden Age, and, while it is not obviously progressing toward one, it does get a little better and wiser and decenter with each of the years that pass. People can still laugh at the humors of political degradation and of financial brigandage, and it is well that they can. If they could only weep and tremble it would be a confession of helplessness and despair. Neither exists to-day.

Results of Sterilization.

We notice with apprehension that while Dr. SLICER is rejoicing over the prospective sterilization of race track betting, the men who know most about that highly interesting amusement express themselves as quite at a loss for an explanation as to how the harmlessness of the game is to be attained. They evidently think that the more it is changed the more it will be the same thing. There are at least a few chances that the bookmakers are right. They have given the subject longer and closer study than Dr. SLICER has bestowed upon it, and they are evidently of the opinion that when their profession has been really sterilized, its practice will no longer be worth their while. Incidentally, no laments are heard from the often-mentioned "poolroom interests." They, too, seem to think that the only important reform about to be effected is that relating to the allotments to the county fairs. The change there is ponderable and measurable—to be counted in dollars and cents. It is consoling, amid so much uncertainty, to have something about which there can be no doubt. The farmer and the rural politician have secured their price, and therefore they are happy.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — Senator Allee and Representative Burton of Delaware went to the White House to-day to urge the President to help them to get the new big battleship that Congress is to put on the naval programme this year named after their State. The President received the suggestion smilingly, but did not commit himself to its support.

When Allee returned to the Senate he told Senator Dolliver about his errand.

"And you are willing to take all the risk of having a battleship named after your State?" asked Dolliver in surprise.

"Yes, of course; why not?" said Allee.

"Well, Allee," drawled Dolliver, "I think you are acting rashly for your constituents. That battleship will be as big as your State, and your people will get confused by seeing the name on the ship and go to bed there as often as on dry land."

Representative Boutell of Illinois called at the White House this morning to present to the President Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Casper, from his district.

"I am proud to say of Mrs. Casper," said Mr. Boutell, "that she is the mother of fourteen children."

The President took Mrs. Casper's two hands in his own and said:

"I am delighted to meet you, Mrs. Casper. You are the best American in the room. Besides you look young enough to be your own daughter."

Mrs. Casper smiled.

By opposing the further continuance of the mint at New Orleans yesterday Representative Southard of Ohio drew down on his head the torrential wrath of John Wesley Gaines. With clenched fists, shaken defiantly at the Ohio man, and angry words rolling out of his mouth like the Mississippi in flood, Gaines denounced the "sectional" attempt to destroy an industry of the South.

"The gentleman has been Chairman of the Committee on Coinage for nine years," he shouted, "and not once has he dared to bring in a bill destroying this mint. But now he takes advantage of an opportunity in an appropriation bill. What else could be expected from a man who has declared himself in favor of foisting upon the people of this country the metric system that would plunge our business men into untold millions of financial misery?"

Representative Cassal of Pennsylvania received a remarkably delicate compliment from his colleagues to-day—so delicate that it almost escapes the naked eye. The Pennsylvanians held a caucus for the purpose of electing one of their number to the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee. Gen. Bingham, the dean of the delegation, took the floor and made a speech, the purport whereof was that the Congressional Committee was of no good on earth. He said it was a worthless piece of political machinery, and a hindrance rather than a help both to the National Committee and the various State committees. In all the time he had been in public life it had never done any good, and had always been a nuisance.

The members listened with approval to this exposition of the functions of the Congressional Committee, and then enthusiastically elected Mr. Cassal to the honor of membership in it.

THE AMERICAN WOMAN.

Her Wit, Her Wealth, and Her Jewels Discussed by Mrs. Craigie.

On the evening of March 5 Mrs. Craigie, (John Oliver Hobbes,) the novelist, lectured on "The American Woman" before the National Liberal Club in London. She is the first woman who has ever addressed this club. According to the report in The London Express she spoke as follows:

"Well-bred people are well bred everywhere; vulgar people are vulgar everywhere, and everywhere there is an idle, foolish set who seem more foolish and more idle than they are in reality.

"But there are fewer idle persons in New York and Chicago than in any other capital in the world. Nearly every man has his occupation. Idleness is unpopular in the United States, and no man, however rich, would gladly retire from work. He dies, as a rule, of overwork and overworry.

"The worship of wealth is still carried to an excessive pitch, but the discerning may see a revulsion of feeling. Ostentatious wealth is being laughed out of fashion.

"Beyond question, an amazing number of women wearing beautiful dresses and magnificent jewels are to be seen in New York, but one reason why they are not seen in London is the vast size of our metropolis, and the number of places where wealthy, or temporarily wealthy, people may congregate.

"This characteristic of the American women, who spend more on clothes and jewels than any women in the world, is the more surprising when the Puritan origin of many Americans is remembered.

"The temperament of the American people is of a past age. Their faces and features belong to another period. They suggest the Old Masters. I saw people constantly who might have been the originals of portraits by Rembrandt or Jan Steen, girls with types of countenances associated with the French before the Revolution, with the same combination of delicacy and vivacity and frailty. Among modern Europeans these types are very rare.

"Perhaps the most interesting of the products of America is its women. While they take little or no interest in political affairs, while they seldom, if ever, show the least interest in the business or professional work of their male relatives, they show extraordinary activity in club life, in organizations of every description—philanthropic, social, and educational.

"America, the combination of so many races, has produced a woman having something in common with all races, and which still remains something which can only be defined as American.

"The American woman makes an excellent wife and a devoted mother, but to a great extent her intellectual and social life is not at all closely associated with that of her husband. And the American men really seem to encourage this.

"They spend money on their wives and daughters, but on the tacit understanding that the wives and daughters shall ask no questions, and, above all, offer no advice.

"The prospects of art and literature in America seem more than considerable. American painters are working out by degrees a style of painting which is as much American as Japanese art is Japanese.

"In literature Americans seem uninfluenced by English sentimentality or French psychology. They do not like the 'thinking' parts of novels—they want something to happen or somebody to do something.

"In a slow, determined, dogged way they seem to be working out a National literature.

"I see in America a reincarnation of old Europe in a younger, more energetic people, reliving the past in a state of liberty unknown to us even in the present day," said Mrs. Craigie in conclusion. "They combine the temperament of the past with all the advantages of the present."

DEFENSE OF TRINITY.

Direct Issue Taken with Statements of a Critic of the Church.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of this date I read a letter signed by one "Quiller." A more unjust, unfair, and absolutely misleading epistle it has never been my lot to see. About the money matters of Trinity I have no knowledge, and so for that good reason I do not say a word. About the work of Trinity Parish I do know a good deal, and that knowledge is in flat contradiction to "Quiller's" statements when he seeks to make out that taken altogether Trinity parish has at all services a minister for each fifteen persons present at each service. I say it is so misleading as to be past belief that it could be made if we did not know it has been made.

Why did "Quiller" leave out St. Agnes's Chapel, one of the most influential in New York? I have on a Sunday morning spoken in it, when every seat was full; few places of worship are as well attended all the time. I have been at Trinity Chapel when it was full on a Sunday afternoon. I have at 12 o'clock at night preached in St. Paul's Chapel to more than 300 men who were engaged on newspapers, and special services had been arranged so they might have an opportunity of Lenten worship. I have seen on week days, within two weeks of this time, Trinity Church nearly full of people, persons of all sorts and conditions. And I have preached in Trinity Church on a week day at 12:15 noon when not only every seat was full, but the aisles and the area at the back were filled with men, and at no one of these services were there more than three clergy taking part in the service—usually two.

In presence of facts like these what becomes of the one minister to fifteen of a congregation statement? On a Sunday Trinity Church and St. Paul's Chapel usually will not, from their geographical location, have as large congregations as large churches in residence districts. But when we add the week day services, regular and special, they reach a vast number of persons in every year, and those persons are from nearly all walks of life, from every State in the Republic, and from many foreign lands.

These are facts no man can controvert with success. Simple justice demands that they be told to the people who read "Quiller's" letter, and I take it, Mr. Editor, they are all your not only very numerous, but influential, readers. I feel bound to send you this in fairness to men assailed by "Quiller."

SUBWAY VENTILATION.

The Question Too Serious to be Disposed Of by Sarcasm.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A rejoinder to C. A. Reed's letter in THE TIMES of March 28 is hardly necessary, his sarcasm is so disingenuous and so evidently used to cover his retreat, like the inky ejection of the cuttlefish. Of course, he knows as well as I, or any other intelligent person, that the words "foul" and "pure" have been used by both in the sense accepted by the Dictionary and by common usage. I am content to leave to the public the object lesson in the difference between the care and accuracy of science—which means simply knowledge—and the "dogmatism of ignorance," or worse, the disingenuous appeal to ignorance or carelessness, which suggests a style of cross-examination used by certain would-be "smart" lawyers.

There is a more serious side to this matter, however—the consideration of which is my only excuse for noticing the letter of C. A. Reed at all. Here in New York's Subway, the first of many subways, great numbers of people are massed together under conditions that make ventilation difficult; complaint has been made; the proper body, the Rapid Transit Commission, has employed a recognized authority to make an exhaustive examination of all the sanitary conditions of the Subway; that authority, after admirably carrying out the examination, has made a report, which is given to the public; the report establishes incontrovertibly the fact that the ventilation is so good that the air is better than in most other places where so many people are massed together; the same report points out directions in which reform is needed; it behooves all good citizens to use all possible influence toward bringing about these reforms. Under these conditions, it is almost a civic crime to make assertions or implications that are false and tend to obscure the real issues.

COSENTINO AS A SCULPTOR.

Said to be Well Known in Italy and in This Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a subscriber to your paper, permit me to say a few words in behalf of Prof. Oronzo Cosentino, the sculptor, in reply to the lengthy article in this morning's TIMES.

I am glad to say that Prof. Cosentino is unquestionably one of the best sculptors and bust makers in the world; his finished work and the medals given him in "Italy" are ample proof, and speak more eloquently than any words I can utter in his behalf; if any one questions this, let him or her go to Cosentino's studio for the proof, at 1,931 Broadway.

Prof. Cosentino was ill, and owing to unforeseen circumstances he found himself here in New York, a stranger speaking a foreign tongue and temporarily without money or acquaintances. Rather than starve or ask for assistance, he worked for a short time for ridiculously low pay, and, as you see, without being given credit for his genius.

It is not the "Crippled Boy" who is looking for advertising, not by any means. The shoe fits the other foot. The great, fair-minded American public cannot be hoodwinked in this way.

Mr. Caruso recently gave Cosentino six sittings, and the bust of Caruso is now being cast in bronze in Brooklyn; Mr. Caruso has said that Cosentino's work is superior to any he has ever had done in any part of the world—does this look as if Cosentino were an amateur or a day laborer?

Look at the bronze bust of Capt. Goddard, made for a Republican club of this city, and the bronze bust of John Wanamaker, made in "Italy" by Cosentino and now in Philadelphia.

Mr. Nicoll.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Nicoll needed a rebuke, and I thank you for so fairly (as usual) showing him the error of his ways—and words. That part of the editorial where you pointed out the weakness of his argument when he gave Mr. Bryan the benefit of the doubt, and accepted, without question, all he heard concerning Mr. Hearst, should make him think before he speaks again for a cause which will suffer from his lack of wisdom. I hope none of your readers omitted reading that editorial.

WHOSE AMBASSADOR?

The Representative of the President or of the Whole People?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am an Englishman about to become a citizen of this country, and when I made my declaration of intention to be a naturalized American I foreswore allegiance to King Edward VII.

A news item in this morning's issue of THE TIMES, however, sorely perplexes me. Secretary of State Root in his dispatch to the Austrian Foreign Office says:

"I have the honor to advise your Excellency that the President has been pleased to terminate at once and without any such delay as would be incidental to the transmission of a letter of recall by mail the authority of his Ambassador, Mr. Storer, to represent him."

What I want to know is, Do United States Ambassadors represent the American people or President Theodore Roosevelt? It seems to me that this assumption of power is contrary to the spirit of this Republic.

Dreadnought and Constitution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with no little amusement the account in the columns of your valued issue of the 28th inst. relative to the proposed building by the United States of a battleship to eclipse in size and efficiency H. M. S. Dreadnought; you say the Constitution is to be the most powerful battleship afloat, but surely that can only be in your imagination, for what do you think Great Britain will be doing during the five years that it takes this country to build a war vessel. Even admitting, for argument's sake, that the United States could duplicate the Dreadnought, it is only reasonable to suppose that with her indisputable pre-eminence in shipbuilding Great Britain will in five years have made vast improvements in the Dreadnought class; therefore naval experts in this country must do considerable scratching and hustling before they can class themselves in the enviable position of Access to Grant's Tomb.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is to me a matter of great regret that access to Gen. Grant's Tomb should be as difficult as it is. Both from the Subway station at Broadway and 116th Street and at Manhattan Street, (which is about equivalent to 128th Street,) it is a difficult and laborious task for any visitor to reach the tomb. The distance between these two stations is considerable, and, besides, there is involved from either point a steep and laborious climb to reach the tomb. If a station were located about midway between the two it would be near the tomb, do away with the tiresome ascent of the hill, and render the trip there far more pleasant and agreeable to the many thousands who desire to make the visit.

What Can American Women Do?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In connection with the discussion anent domestic life in America which is being carried on in your columns, I should like to ask a few questions.

How many women in America—that is, born in America—know how to Toast a piece of bacon—

Broil a piece of meat—
Mix a crust of pie—
Bake a tea biscuit—
Make a cup of coffee—and do these things as they ought to be done?

We bring up our young women as if they were all going to marry Lords or millionaires, or at least get nice fat jobs as typewriters at $25 or $30 a week. Oh, we are the wise people!

A Suggested Parallel.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In yesterday's TIMES you say editorially "In Europe we must go back to the days of Louis XI. and Charles the Bold to find a parallel for the shameless treachery of the Pulajanes." But in our own history we need only go back to the days of Funston and Aguinaldo. That capture was made under almost exactly the similar circumstances.

Bad Men Treed.

From The Sacramento Bee.

There being no jail at this place, and the Deputy Sheriffs being unable to compel immediate departure of unwelcome persons, they have resorted to the extremity of handcuffing them with their arms about cedar trees.

Every day this week a trip down the gulch showed several bad men with their arms wrapped affectionately about tall cedars, where they were allowed to remain until the punishment equaled their offense.

FOR THE NEW LIBRARY.

Our public library façade, of long inscriptions full,
Concerning which the erudite are in each other's wool,
Should be adorned with mottoes brief, replete with common sense,
Reflecting work of long-haired chaps of thoughtfulness intense.

We want a motto in the which our civic pride may show
Like "Urbis non Carnegis"—something pertinent, you know.
Or "Takum, Homo, Readum" might upon the door appear—
That is not only Latin, but it's absolutely clear.

Or, if a phrase so classical too grimly learned looks,
Why not adorn the portal with the modest statement "Books"?
And as a balm to reading folk who otherwise might flee,
Append, in deathless marble script, a reassuring "Free."

TWAIN AND CHOATE TALK AT MEETING FOR BLIND

Humorist Sightless Once—in a Vast German Inn.

HIT AT GHOST, BROKE MIRROR

Mr. Choate Urges Liberal Contributions, Mr. Gilder Writes a Poem and Helen Keller a Letter.

A new poem by Richard Watson Gilder, a striking letter from Helen Keller, an appeal for funds by Joseph H. Choate, and a funny story by Mark Twain made up the programme of the meeting held in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria last night by the New York State Association for Promoting the Interests of the Blind.

The new Gilder poem was printed on the programmes. Here it is:

"Pity the Blind!" Yes, pity those Whom day and night inclose
In equal dark; to whom the sun's keen flame
And pitchy night-time are the same.

But pity most the blind
Who cannot see
That to be kind
Is life's felicity.

Mr. Clemens presided over the meeting and told the story of when he was hopelessly blind for a space of about two hours.

"I have a mass of statistics here," he said to the large audience filling the boxes and seats on the ballroom floor, "but I am afraid of them because I was never able to do much with that rugged study, mathematics. I can only figure on the multiplication table up to seven times nine, which is—84. I can't even figure on the name of the society, it is so long. I would write it out for you to take home with you, but I can't spell it, and Andrew Carnegie is somewhere down in Virginia. This association needs $15,000, and we may be able to collect it here. There is no graft in it or I would not be presiding.

"I know what it is to be blind. I was blind once. It occurred after an excursion from Heidelberg to a mediaeval town about twenty miles away. The Rev. Joe Twitchell of Hartford was with me. He is still living. I always like a minister with me on an excursion. He makes a fine lightning rod for such excursions as the one we made. We went up by rail, and circumstances were such as to bring us back on a raft.

"In this ancient town, which had not altered a building or put up a new one in 1,500 years, we had a room for the night which was as large as the beds were small. We had to sleep on our sides in the beds. Twitchell's bed was way down south in that room and mine was furthest north. I couldn't sleep after the light was put out, and finally decided to leave the room and go into the square and sit on the edge of a tinkling fountain.

"Off in the southwest of that room a mouse got busy, and I threw something at it. It pleased the mouse, and it kept on making a noise. I couldn't stand it with the other occasional noises in the room. The darkness of that room lay in great cakes. I got out of bed and clawed around in an endeavor to accumulate my clothes. I got most of the things in the room in a pile, save one sock. I began to hunt that sock. On hands and knees I crawled for three hours.

"I might have concluded that the sock was in the wash and saved myself some adventures, but I did not think of that. I remembered distinctly that there were six chairs and a table in that room before I went to bed, but I butted thirty-six chairs and enough tables to fill the dining room of the Waldorf.

"Finally I decided to stand up in what clothes I had on me. I saw a shadowy form and I had no intention of letting any ghost bite me without a struggle. I took one of the thirty-six chairs and smashed it. It was a mirror. Then I reflected.

"I got back on my hands and knees and traveled a few more miles of this Oklahoma of a bedroom. Finally I reached a wall, and stood up again. I felt a shelf. I was delighted. It was the first encouragement I had received. I was then certain that I had not passed the city limits.

"On the shelf was a pitcher of water. I groped for it and it fell. It fell on Joe Twitchell's face. It nearly drowned Twitchell, but it brought me the glad relief of company. When he struck a match I got back to bed.

"I have never found the sock, but the hours of darkness I experienced in the explorations in that room were not empty hours. They served their purpose. The Rev. Joe Twitchell had longer legs than I, and we both wore pedometers on that trip. As I walk in my sleep, I always wore mine to bed with me. When I got up in the morning I found that I had gained sixteen miles on Twitchell. Again, my reflecting after the mirror incident made me remember to tell the landlord that Twitchell had broken it."

Mr. Clemens introduced Mr. Choate, saying that for the forty-seven years he had known him familiarly he had known him as the handsomest man America had ever produced, and he believed he would hold the belt for forty-five years more.

"If I could say the word that would elevate him still higher in the esteem of his people," said Mr. Clemens, "I would say it now, however untruthful it might be."

Mr. Choate said that the Chairman of the meeting had not acted squarely. He and the other speakers had been told just what to say in their speeches, but Mark Twain had rambled off to Nuremberg in his remarks.

"Mr. Clemens and I," he said, "have seen enough money eaten, drunk, and danced away in this room to put the society on its feet. Put your names to the slips on the programme for the contributions. Get enthusiastic about those slips, but do not get hysterical. There has been much said about hysterical attitudes in the last few days, and I don't know whether it would be creditable for you to get hysterical."

In her letter of regret at not being able to attend the meeting Miss Keller wrote:

"Of late our periodicals have been filled with depressing revelations of great social evils. Querulous critics have pointed to every flaw in our civic structure. You once told me you were a pessimist, Mr. Clemens; but great men are usually mistaken about themselves. You are an optimist. If you were not you would not preside at this meeting. For it is an answer to pessimism. It proclaims that the heart and the wisdom of a great city are devoted to the good of mankind; that in this, the busiest city in the world, no cry of distress goes up but receives a compassionate and generous answer."

ROOSEVELT FAMILY CRUISE.

President's Wife and Children to Visit Cuba and Porto Rico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President, and their children, Miss Ethel, Archibald, and Quentin, with the children's governess, Marie Drolet, and Mrs. Roosevelt's maid, left here this morning by rail for Fernandina, Fla. There they will go aboard the Government yacht Mayflower to cruise for the next two weeks in West Indian waters.

The trip is not in any way official, and no official notification will be sent anywhere that Mrs. Roosevelt is in the vicinity. She will, however, touch at Havana and Porto Rico, but will go ashore with the children incognito under the escort of the American Minister.

Mrs. Roosevelt is taking this trip particularly for her health, although she usually takes a cruise at this season with the children, who are especially fond of the water. They will return here for Easter.

METCALFE SUES 27 MANAGERS

Critic Asks $270,000 Damages for Being Barred from Their Theatres.

James S. Metcalfe, through Spencer, Ordway & Wierum, his attorneys, served summonses yesterday on twenty-seven theatrical managers, making them defendants in a suit for $270,000 damages—a matter of $10,000 apiece.

The managers named in the suit are Marc Klaw, Abraham L. Erlanger, Oscar Hammerstein, Daniel Frohman, Charles Burnham, Joseph K. Brooks, Heinrich Conried, James H. Curtin, Martin Dickson, Frank McKee, J. Wesley Rosenquest, Edward A. Braden, Joseph L. Springer, Leo Teller, William C. Watson, Percy Williams, Walter C. Jordan, Alfred Hayman, George J. Kraus, Edward D. Stair, William T. Keogh, Alex Lichenstein, Antonio Pastor, Henry B. Harris, Albert Hayman, Henry W. Savage, and Charles Frohman.

Mr. Metcalfe, who is the dramatic critic of Life, figures that he has suffered to the extent of $270,000 in consequence of a "confederation and conspiracy" of these managers to keep him out of their theatres. This confederation and conspiracy was entered into, according to the complaint, in January, 1905, and since that time the complainant has been barred from the places of amusement controlled by the defendants, despite the fact that he presented himself at their doors with his wife and offered tickets regularly purchased.

Mr. Metcalfe sets forth "that the acts of the defendant were meant to bring, and did bring, plaintiff into disrepute with the members of his calling and with his employers and all persons requiring his services as a dramatic editor, writer, and critic, and to prevent, and did prevent, him from prosecuting his calling and earning his livelihood, and said acts were also meant to, and did, hold the plaintiff up to contempt, hatred, scorn, and ridicule, and to deprive, and did deprive, him of friendly intercourse and society, and to impute, and did impute, disgraceful or dishonorable conduct, and to characterize, and did characterize, him as an objectionable person."

He adds "that in consequence of said acts and confederation and conspiracy the plaintiff has been put to great expense in the purchase of tickets of admission to theatres and places of amusement, where the tickets were not accepted at the doors, and in the hiring of conveyances to and from the theatres and places of amusement, and has suffered great damage and loss in his business and occupation, and has been greatly damaged in his character and reputation and credit, and has suffered, by reason of the facts aforesaid, damages to the sum of $270,000."

DELUGE OF $500 DOGS.

Geister Has Busy Day Because of Mistake in an Advertisement.

With pups in front of him, pups to the right of him, pups to the left of him, the proprietor of Geister's Gansevoort Market restaurant stood behind the cigar counter yesterday, a sadly perplexed and very angry man, refusing sundry demands to redeem the pups at $500 per.

Geister's dilemma was due to an advertisement in a morning paper offering a $500 reward for the return of his fox terrier Roy. Geister is fond of the dog, who has accompanied him to his restaurant at 3 A. M. every day, but not to the extent of being willing to mortgage his property to be reunited with Roy. Roy disappeared a couple of days ago, and the owner, in writing the advertisement, made the reward $500, instead of $5.00, as he meant to.

When the first battalion of fox terrier pups descended on the restaurant Mr. Geister repudiated his offer, and then there was a scene, which was repeated with every new arrival. Mr. Geister said last evening that he had no idea there were so many fox terrier pups in New York as were taken to his place yesterday.

HELPING BIDE-A-WEE HOME.

Friends of Luckless Dogs and Cats Play for Their Benefit.

A successful entertainment was given in Carnegie Lyceum before a large audience last night for the benefit of the Bide-a-Wee Home for Animals, at 145 West Thirty-eighth Street, where poor little beggar cats and homeless dogs are taken in and cared for until they are so fit and fine that they are welcomed in the most exclusive circles of feline and canine society.

Miss Grace Levy, who arranged the entertainment, obtained the services of the New York University Glee Club Quartet and several well-known amateur performers who contributed to a pleasing programme.

"Ingomar," adapted to one act, was followed by another one-act piece entitled "Place Aux Dames; or, The Ladies Speak," and a farce called "A Pair of Lunatics."

The Bide-a-Wee Home, which is supported by voluntary contributions, aims to spread the gospel of humanity toward dumb creatures by practical examples. It was started by Mrs. Harry Ulysses Kibbe on $100, and has done good work, amounting to very many times that sum.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The disturbance over the West Gulf Wednesday night has recurved to the northeast, and to-night overlies the East Gulf States and Tennessee. It has increased somewhat in energy and caused general rains.

Rains in the East Gulf States have been light, in the Ohio Valley and Tennessee mostly heavy.

Temperatures are high for the season in the Northwest and relatively low in Eastern Texas and the Lower Mississippi Valley.

Temperatures are lower in Louisiana and Mississippi than in the Dakotas and Nebraska, an anomaly that does not often present itself. For Saturday generally fair weather is probable, except along the lower lakes and in Northern New England, where rain or snow is indicated.

Lower temperatures are indicated for the East Gulf Coast and South Atlantic States Friday, but it will be warmer in those districts Saturday, and a general rise in temperature is probable throughout the Mississippi Valley, the upper lake region, and the Ohio Valley.

Winds along the New England Coast will be fresh and variable, becoming easterly; Middle Atlantic Coast, fresh southeast; South Atlantic Coast, fresh south, shifting to west; East Gulf Coast, fresh west; West Gulf Coast, fresh northwest, diminishing.

Steamers departing Friday for European ports will have fresh and variable winds and occasional showers to the Grand Banks.

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 42; for the corresponding date last year it was 60; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 39.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 38; at 8 P. M. it was 45; maximum temperature, 49 degrees at 2 P. M.; minimum, 35 degrees at 6 A. M.; humidity, 74 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 61 per cent. at 8 P. M.

ARMS TO FREE RUSSIA, TCHAYKOFFSKY'S APPEAL

Revolutionist Speaks to Cheering Audience of 3,000.

SAYS THE BATTLE IS NEAR

Mark Twain Writes That He Hopes Czars and Grand Dukes Will Soon Become Scarce.

"Tovarishzy!"

When Nicholas Tchaykoffsky, hailed by his countrymen here as the father of the revolutionary movement in Russia, spoke this word last night in Grand Central Palace 3,000 men and women rose to their feet, waved their hats, and cheered madly for three minutes. The word means "Comrades!" It is the watchword of the revolutionists. The spirit of revolution possessed the mass meeting called to greet the Russian patriot now visiting New York.

Fight is what he wants, and arms to fight with. He told the audience so last night and, by their cheers, they promised to do their part in supplying the sinews of war.

Robert Hunter was to have presided at the meeting, but the birth of a child to his wife kept him away. The audience cheered loudly when Paul Kaplan, who took the chair, told why Mr. Hunter wasn't there. Mark Twain could not attend because he had already accepted an invitation to another meeting, but he sent this letter:

> Dear Mr. Tchaykoffsky: I thank you for the honor of the invitation, but I am not able to accept it because Thursday evening I shall be presiding at a meeting whose object is to find remuneration for certain classes of our blind who would gladly support themselves if they had the opportunity.
>
> My sympathies are with the Russian revolution, of course. It goes without saying. I hope it will succeed, and now that I have talked with you I take heart to believe it will. Government by falsified promises, by lies, by trickery, and by the butcher knife, for the aggrandizement of a single family of drones and its idle and vicious kin has been borne quite long enough in Russia, I should think. And it is to be hoped that the roused nation, now rising in its strength, will presently put an end to it and set up the republic in its place. Some of us, even the whiteheaded, may live to see the blessed day when the Czar and Grand Dukes will be as scarce there as I trust they are in heaven. Most sincerely yours,
>
> MARK TWAIN.

Mr. Tchaykoffsky made an impassioned appeal for help to inaugurate a real revolution and overturn the Czar and all his allies.

"There are only two main forces in Russia to-day," he said, "and they are autocracy and democracy. There can be no compromise between them. The split is obliged to come on these lines—autocracy and democracy. It will be a fight to the end.

"The two sides can never understand each other. The autocracy regards our democracy as an outrage. And we know that we must remain slaves or fight as men. All means are good, so long as they are honest.

"In every regiment of infantry two or three hundred of the soldiers are friends of freedom and democracy. The autocracy's power rests only on the bayonets of a few privileged regiments of guards. Outside of these few regiments there are thousands of soldiers with us. But soldiers, to move as an effective machine, must have leaders, and very few of the officers are with us.

"The Russian officers are the very scum of the country. They are trained to do the dirty work of their masters at St. Petersburg. They are murderers of the worst kind—they murder not only the body, but the mind and soul as well. The moral responsibility on these officers is becoming heavier every day, and soon the climax of the moral burden will become too heavy. Already we have read that forty officers gave up their commissions and left the country.

"Theft of arms by the soldiers is becoming more and more frequent. They steal the arms from the storehouses and deliver them over to revolutionists. I use the word 'steal' in the ordinary sense—they do not really steal them, for they give them to their rightful owners, to the nation.

"We must join that sympathizing part of the army—and fight! We must have the will to fight to the end, and with that spirit our force will be unconquerable! Now is the time to organize and perfect the methods of the struggle. We must hurry and get rid of that idea that a revolution conquers with folded arms. It does not. [Cheers.] It conquers only by blood.

"The Russian Government is now trying to wipe out with blood the best spirit of the people. It is because the autocrats see that they will be finally overwhelmed by the movement that they fear it. They know that the present inaction is only a lull in the storm. What has happened in the past—terrible as it was—was only child's play to what lies before us in Russia. As enemies of tyranny, all parties the members of which are democrats at heart will forget their petty differences and join together in the war for liberty.

"I come here as the accredited representative of the Socialist Revolutionary Party in Russia, but, broadly speaking, I come to plead the cause of the young, the new Russia. The new birth has already come—it is an event of the past. The last link that connected the Czar with the Russian people is broken. It was broken when 1,500 workmen were slain in the streets of St. Petersburg in January of last year.

"Now 30,000,000 people are united by the spirit of revolution. Can such a movement as that be crushed?"

Cries of "No!" were the replies to this question.

The vigorous old revolutionist spoke first in English and then he changed to Russian. His first word, "Tovarishzy!" was the signal for the wildest outburst of the evening.

At the entrance of the Grand Central Palace agents of the anarchists in New York were busy distributing cards announcing a memorial to John Most on Sunday.

MERRILLON HEIRS TO FIGHT.

Do Not Wish J. C. Smith to Administer Their Mother's Estate.

Acting for the legatees under the will of Mrs. Cornelia Stewart Merrillon, who died at Pau, France, a year ago, leaving an estate valued at $2,000,000 to her husband, Joseph, and their three children, Frederic R. Coudert filed objections with Surrogate Jackson, at Mineola, L. I., yesterday, against the granting of letters testamentary to James Clinch Smith, who was made an executor under the will. The question whether Mr. Smith should be permitted to qualify will be argued before the Surrogate on April 11.

The objections are based on allegations concerning the administration by Smith of the estate of his mother, Sarah M. Smith, which was left to him and his sisters. They are supported by an affidavit from Lorenzo Semple, a member of the law firm of Coudert Brothers, who says that Roswell W. Keene called on him as counsel for Smith to say that his client was willing to withdraw as executor at the request of Mr. Merrillon, then in France, if he were paid $20,000. Later Smith himself, according to the affidavit, reduced his demand to $15,000. After communicating with Mr. Merrillon, Semple says that he offered to pay that sum, but Smith raised his demand to $20,000 again, adding, still later a demand for $1,500 extra for counsel fees. This demand Mr. Semple rejected.

An interesting autograph of John Burroughs was in the private library of the late Samuel C. Cobb, once Mayor of Boston, sold at auction by the Anderson Company yesterday. It was in a first edition of "The Poets of Transcendentalism," edited by George W. Cooke. Burroughs's autograph is signed to his poem "Waiting," which is included in the collection, and there is also in his handwriting the following unpublished stanza:

Yon floweret nodding in the wind
Is ready plighted to the bee;
And maiden, why that look unkind?
For lo! thy lover seeketh thee.

The book was sold for $25.50 to "Vermont."

IF STAMPS DON'T STICK, THE WEATHER'S AT FAULT

Postal Official Says Our Climate Has Gone Wrong This Winter.

IT TAKES AWAY THE "STICK"

Government Has Summer and Winter Stamps, but No Variety Self-Adjusting to Heat or Cold.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—If your stamps don't stick, don't blame the Post Office Department; blame the Weather Bureau. It is not the mucilage that is responsible, but the peculiar atmospheric conditions prevalent this Winter and Spring. The man who has frayed the edge of his tongue against the back of a small red stamp can find no solace from the Government until Chief Moore supplies a better brand of climate in place of the cheap, and possibly second-hand, variety in which he has been dealing.

At least, such is the opinion of Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden, and he is the man who sells you your stamps. In addition to the weather conditions, however, one cause of trouble is that some persons use Summer stamps instead of Winter stamps. The Post Office Department issues two styles, and the Summer stamp is not likely to stick when used out of season.

Mr. Madden was informed to-day that the stickless stamp issue was engrossing New York, and in proof thereof the letters on the subject printed in to-day's NEW YORK TIMES were shown him.

"Yes," he said, "we have been getting an unusual number of complaints lately. There are always some, but just now there are many. Every complaint that had to be referred to us was investigated and found to be incorrect.

"For instance, we had a complaint from a business man in New York. We sent an agent to investigate and found that in his establishment a man had been in the habit of wetting the stamps by taking a big sponge and drawing it across the back of the sheet of stamps, wiping the mucilage completely off.

"Still while every complaint we have run down has turned out to be without sufficient foundation, there must be something wrong, or we wouldn't get so many. The gum is exactly the same as was used last year, when there were practically no complaints, so the fault can't be there. We are continually trying to improve the quality of the gum. We have been getting the processes of foreign Governments to see if we could find any suggestions or improvements on our own. We get the highest quality.

"My opinion is that there is something in the atmospheric conditions which causes this. There is no other way of accounting for it, in my mind. We have had very peculiar weather, and there must be something in it which takes the 'stick' out of the gum.

"We have two kinds of gum, hard and soft, one kind for Winter and one for Summer. The Summer gum doesn't work well in Winter, and it may be that some of these people have been using stamps that were issued last Summer. We try to prevent that by not selling Summer stamps in Winter time, but sometimes people save them up."

"The atmospheric conditions must be worse in New York than elsewhere," said the inquirer, "for the complaints I have here are all dated New York and I haven't noticed anything wrong with the stamps I buy in Washington."

"Well, I have," said Mr. Madden. "I got a stamp to-day that wouldn't stick. But now that you mention it, most of the complaints have come from New York. Perhaps the atmospheric conditions are more pronounced there than elsewhere."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Mrs. Colin Campbell (Miss Nancy Leiter) and her husband, Lieut. Col. Campbell, have left Washington to visit Joseph Leiter and others in Chicago. They are to return to Washington on April 7, and are booked to sail from New York on April 10 for their English home.

⁂

The engagement has been announced in Washington of Miss Ethelbert Washburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Jay Washburn, to Herbert Mifflin Hall, son of the late Thomas Mifflin Hall of Philadelphia.

⁂

Mrs. Alfred Bishop Mason has gone to the Chatsworth Club to remain until the end of April.

⁂

The annual invitation concert of the Symphony Club will be given to-morrow evening in Mendelssohn Hall. On the programme is Bach's concerto in E, and in this number the orchestra will be conducted by Walter Damrosch, with David Mannes—the regular conductor of the club—as the soloist. Miss Mary Callender is the President of this club, and its members are largely society women and girls, including Mrs. Trenor Park, Mrs. George C. Clark, Mrs. Morgan Goetchius, Miss Glady's Rice, Miss Katharine Barney, and others.

⁂

Mrs. Alexander Brown and her daughter, Miss Harriet Brown, of Baltimore, are in town, stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria.

⁂

The Easter dance of the University Cotillions will take place on April 17 at Sherry's, the committee in charge being Princeton, Yale, Columbia, and Harvard college boys.

⁂

Mrs. George G. Frelinghuysen will give a small dance on April 16 at Sherry's for her débutante daughter, Miss Matilda Frelinghuysen, who was to have made her formal début in the early Winter at a large reception. The death of a relative, however, postponed the reception indefinitely, and the dance will be given instead.

⁂

Keith Donaldson, on April 15, will give a dinner in the Winter Garden at Delmonico's to his ushers and to intimate friends. He is to marry Miss Evelyn Hunter in April.

⁂

The Boys' Club will give a second performance this evening at the Berkeley Lyceum of "The Mikado." The first performance took place last night. The proceeds are to go to the club, which is fostered and officered by well-known men.

Any manufacturer with imagination can sit down with a copy of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL and note how carefully its contents are adapted to a certain class of the American woman. He can make a few inquiries and find out in just what estimation THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL is held. He can then realize that his advertisement in the columns of the one copy which he can follow into the home is carefully considered by the purchasing agent in that home, and he can then multiply that result by the millions of homes which THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL reaches every month. If that manufacturer sells a food, he can realize that the purchasing agent buys not only for her own mouth, but for the other mouths she has to feed, the average number of which is five to a household. Also, if he sells a food, he should remember that the food is eaten not only yesterday and to-day, but also to-morrow, and that if the people in that household like it he has a chance to continue selling it to these five million mouths every day in the year; but he should not forget that people need a constant reminder, and that the one advertisement that carries the food into the home should be repeated, so that it may not by any chance be supplanted by another food which another manufacturer calls to their attention a month later.

This is the whole principle of advertising—the right copy in the right medium, reaching the right people, and then continued persistence.

MEN BARRED.

Only Male Person at "Ladies' Matinee" of "Happyland" Was Aged 10.

The much-heralded "ladies' matinée" of "Happyland" was given at the Casino yesterday afternoon, and the promises were pretty well lived up to—perhaps a little better than was expected, for both the press agent and the house manager were barred out when they tried to pass the "lady doorkeeper." According to reports, the only male person inside was Harry Wright, a boy of 10, who once played a girl's part with De Wolf Hopper in "Wang." Mr. Hopper is said to have made an unusually brilliant speech, which unfortunately was cut short by the untimely fall of the curtain.

BOSTON PLAYERS WIN RACQUET CHAMPIONSHIP

Fearing and Scott Successfully Defend the Title.

HARD SEVEN-GAME MATCH

New York Team Outplayed in Best Contest of Tourney and Lost Four Games to Three.

George R. Fearing and Hugh D. Scott of the Boston Tennis and Racquet Club successfully defended the title of doubles racquet champions of the United States by defeating Lawrence Waterbury and Charles E. Sands of the New York Racquet and Tennis Club yesterday four games to three by the following scores: 15—9, 5—15, 16—5, 11—15, 9—15, 15—7, 15—0. The match, which was played on the court of the New York Racquet and Tennis Club, formed a fitting climax to the best racquet tournament ever played in this city. In anticipation of a close contest both galleries were filled long before Referee George H. Brooke called "play." Long and well-sustained rallies, sensational plays, difficult and puzzling service, and swift, sure, and telling strokes were witnessed, and better racquets would be well-nigh impossible. It was the only match in the tournament which required the full set of seven games to decide, and the Boston pair won because of unquestioned superiority.

Before the match began Fearing and Scott ruled 2 to 1 favorites. Both teams had won their way into the final round by sober merit, and in nearly every instance the victories of each were comparatively easy. The Boston players, on form, were entitled to more consideration than the New York team, and for a time it looked very much as though Waterbury and Sands would win out. At the end of the fifth game they led by three games to two, but after this they seemed to go to pieces, while the Boston players changed their style of play and husbanded all their reserve forces for the final games.

Waterbury started the service, but was put out by his partner, who lacked his usual judgment. Fearing added four aces before giving way to the New York team, who tallied three aces. The visitors kept the lead they secured in the early part of the game, and won by 15—9. Waterbury found his service in the second game, and, with Sands, played all around his opponents. The addition of six aces by Waterbury in the second hand appeared to upset the Boston champions. In the fourth hand a brilliant rally brought forth long applause from the big galleries. It was the best display of the tournament. Waterbury scored four aces on service and one on a miss, and evened the score. The third game was nip and tuck up to the fifth hand, when Sands put both his partner and himself out by bad strokes, and Scott ran out the game through placing and misses by his opponents. Waterbury and Sands captured the fourth game and made the games 2—all. Scott opened with three aces, and Waterbury followed with nine, to which Sands added four, making a total of thirteen for the hand. The visitors made a game fight, but the lead was too much to be overcome. Waterbury and Sands kept up their good work in the fifth game. The champions led at the end of the third hand by 8 to 3, but a plucky uphill fight won for the New York team.

In the sixth game Scott was used for service, and the change proved the undoing of Waterbury and Sands. The first hand found the New Yorkers leading by one ace. Scott ran eleven aces by brilliant service, and Fearing added two more. The necessary point was secured by Scott in the third hand.

With the score 3—all Scott continued his hand and duplicated his playing of the preceding hand, scoring eleven aces. The New York pair failed to score, and Scott and Fearing ran the four points in the second hand, winning the championship. The score:

Athletic Meet of School 77.

All indications point to an interesting and successful athletic meet of Public School 77, Manhattan, which will be held to-morrow night at the Eighth Regiment Armory. The events for elementary schools have filled beyond expectations, more than 500 ambitious young athletes having entered. Two special features on the programme are the two-mile bicycle handicap race, in which are entered Cameron, Nerent, Barczik, Vander Dries, and Jacobs, and the 440-yard handicap regimental contest, in which thirty-two entries have been received, among them E. Spitzer and F. Riley.

Two basket ball games are scheduled, one between the teams of Public School 6, and Public School 18, and the other between the fives of the East Side Branch of the Y. M. C. A. and the Harlem Branch of the Y. M. C. A.

"PROS" MAY RUN IN ENGLAND.

Decision Against Sheppard by A. A. U. Will Decide a Certain Plan.

Under the surface of the inquiry as to the amateur or professional status of Melvin W. Sheppard is revealed the intention to take a team of American professional athletes abroad this year. This fact was made known Wednesday night at the meeting of the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, held at the Wyandotte Club. William H. Greene of the Star Athletic Club, who has become familiar with professional athletes because of his attendance at many of their games in a semi-official capacity for the Registration Committee, declared that only the passing of judgment upon Sheppard as a professional was all that was needed to have the plan take definite form.

The leading organizer of the plan from what Greene had to say upon the subject was "Bobby" Hallen, the professional runner, who positively identified Sheppard as the athlete who defeated him at the Caledonian games of Labor Day, 1904. Hallen won second place in the races.

With all the interest created by the American amateur athletes competing at Athens, Greece, in the Olympic championships, it seems that the time is ripe for a conquest of professionals in England and Ireland. With a good lot of men the opportunities for winning a "pot of money" appear particularly rosy.

There would be less chance than ever of the Americans being beaten by the best English and Irish professionals at the long distances if Sheppard was on the team.

The placing of Sheppard in the professional class would enable him to start his professional career in a pronounced way. It is only fair to Sheppard to say that he has as yet learned nothing of the scheme, and it is uncertain that he will consent to go abroad even if the decision as to his amateur standing, for which he is fighting, goes against him. The plan that Hallen has worked out is, however, a most attractive one for professionals. Several have been apprised of the scheme and have readily fallen in with it. Among those who are mentioned as probable members of the team are Peter Hegelman, the six-day runner; Gallagher, "Spotty" Clifford, and Tod, long-distance runners of from one to five miles; W. F. Paul of Trenton, N. J., who is said to resemble Sheppard, and a number of others.

With such a team of runners Hallen believes that the successful outcome of the venture would be assured as the value of the money prizes that they would win would alone pay more than the expenses attached to the trip. Until a decision is rendered by the Registration Committee nothing further will be done by those interested in regard to the proposed venture.

GIANTS KEPT INDOORS.

Will Leave Memphis To-night and Go to Louisville for Two Games.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 29.—Prospects point to the Giants remaining perfectly quiet during the remaining forty-eight hours of their visit to Memphis. Rain which started before dawn to-day continued in such volume that the most optimistic members of the team admit that they will be lucky to take advantage of even a run over the streets to-morrow. The team leaves for Louisville early to-morrow evening to fill a two days' engagement with the Louisville Club of the American Association.

No uniforms were donned to-day. The wet weather also interfered with the Chicago Americans and the Memphians. Cold, coupled with rain, ran the athletes indoors during the better part of the day. The pushball, which is six feet in diameter, has been tapped of its hot air and laid away, probably until another training siege starts. The medicine balls have been kept handy, so that in the event the Louisville fields are too wet for games or practice with baseballs the players can take advantage of a sunny sky nevertheless, and exercise with the medicine balls. McGraw is pleased at results of his experiment, it being conceded that valuable work was had with the big balls when baseball was impossible.

Manager McGraw to-day refused to place a waiver on George Rohe, a third baseman, whom Manager Jones of the Chicago Americans wants to return to New Orleans, from where Rohe graduated. Those in position to know, however, do not believe that McGraw's intentions are to displace Devlin should he decide to pay the price for Rohe.

COLUMBIA SHELL DAMAGED.

Second Crew While Racing Drives Boat on Shoal, Splitting It Badly.

Columbia's second 'Varsity crew in coming back over the Harlem course on Wednesday ran on a shoal and smashed the shell Justus Cowles, in which they were rowing. The first and second crews had gone up the river to the two-mile mark, and after turning around started in a race for the boathouse. Winslow, coxswain of the second 'Varsity, had the inner course, with Spence, coxswain of the first 'Varsity, pushing him hard. Winslow had his place safe, however, but kept close to shore. The men were rowing at a good clip, and the tide being low, drove the shell on a shoal, splitting it the whole length.

The oarsmen were quickly out of the boat and, wading through the icy water up to their waists, pulled the shell ashore. Goodwin arrived a minute later and had the shell taken back to quarters. While other members of the rowing association scraped up all of the rowboats available the drenched oarsmen gathered about the fire in Highbridge Station of the New York Central Railroad and waited for the relief to come.

The crews have been out every day since Tuesday, and are getting along well enough to satisfy the coach. Yesterday afternoon the second 'Varsity was split into fours, and will row that way, in all probability, for the remainder of the season. The boating of the fours is:

First Four—Bow, Updike; 2, M. Miller; 3, Braun; stroke, W. Miller.

Second Four—Bow, Norris; 2, Taylor; 3, Haight; stroke, Mackenzie.

GOOD REPORT OF P. S. A. L.

Great Schoolboy Organization Yearbook Shows Splendid Progress.

Ably demonstrating the achievements of the Public Schools Athletic League in interesting the boys and girls of the city in exercise for their physical benefit, the valuable trophies offered, and the splendid progress of the organization, the annual Year Book, issued yesterday, shows that schoolboy athletics has come to stay. The lack of adequate fields upon which to hold competitions forms an important part of the book, as indicated in the report of James E. Sullivan. In his report the President of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union says: "Your Games Committee strongly urges the acquiring of grounds on Manhattan Island, Staten Island, and Long Island for the purpose of allowing the schoolboys to play and exercise, these grounds to be for the schoolboys and for them only. If the authorities cannot be impressed with the idea of providing breathing spots for the youngsters that are now attending school, then it is the duty of the league to institute an education that will convince those that are interested in the future development of our race to provide enough money whereby at certain hours of the day school children can find place to play under proper supervision. If the league had enough money we could perhaps hire the grounds of several athletic clubs that are situated on Manhattan Island."

Among the addresses in the book is that of the President of the League Gen. George W. Wingate. He says: "We are fortunate in having been able to entirely avoid that difficulty which has been so manifest in many of our colleges and High Schools, the disagreement between those interested in athletics and the Principals and teaching force. Our relation with the schools is perfectly harmonious. We have also laid down the rule that every competitor for the badge, or for any of the games, must be certified by his Principal to be up to the average in his studies and deportment."

The report of Treasurer S. R. Guggenheim shows that during the first year, from all sources, the total receipts of money were $9,710.39, while the total disbursements to Dec. 20, 1904, were $5,120.84.

Davis Won Pool Match.

In a one-sided pool contest L. Davis, the scratch man, with 125 balls, last night defeated C. Jackson, handicapped at 90 balls, by the score of 125 balls to 44. The match was a continuation of the handicap tournament at the Broadway Billiard Academy, Sixty-fifth Street and Broadway. Davis was in excellent stroke, his playing of combinations being the feature of the match. His best effort in sending the balls into the pockets yielded a run of 33, which is the highest of the tournament. No scratches were recorded against him. Jackson's best run was 10 balls, and three scratches were recorded against him. Phil Daly, Jr., 85 balls, and E. Knowles, 100 balls, will meet in the match scheduled for to-night.

GAMECOCK IN THE LEAD IN A THRILLING FINISH

Wins Best Steeplechase Ever Run at Benning.

RIDERS URGED ON BY CROWD

Four Favorites In Front on Heavy Track — Much-Touted D'Arkle Beaten.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—Five thousand persons braved the elements at Benning this afternoon and were rewarded by witnessing the best racing of the Washington Jockey Club's Spring meeting. The feature of the card, of course, was the fifth running of the Chevy Chase Pink Coat Steeplechase for qualified hunters owned by members of the Chevy Chase Hunt or by members of recognized hunts in Virginia. The event developed into the best steeplechase ever run over the course.

The four starters were well matched. In the first two miles there were at no time as many lengths between the leader and the last horse as there were horses in the race. During the greater part of the distance, Gamecock, always the favorite, and Dunseverrick ran as if coupled in harness, taking the jumps together, and leading the other two by a length or two. The closeness of the race aroused intense enthusiasm.

As the horses flashed past the grandstand on the last round of the course, the thousands of spectators rose and cheered encouragement to the riders. When the horses had cleared the last hedge safely and settled down for their run on the flat, it became evident that the race was between Gamecock and Dunseverrick. As they straightened out in the stretch, both riders began to ride with hands and heels. It was a thrilling finish. Both horses were ridden out, but Gamecock justified the confidence of his backers by getting past the wire three-quarters of a length in the lead. With a rider of less judgment Gamecock would have been beaten by Dunseverrick, for Mr. Kerr rode a masterful race on the latter. The result was popular with the talent, as Mr. Kerr's mount was as heavily played for the place as the favorite was to win.

It was a good day for the crowd, as four favorites, one second choice, and a third choice won the six races. The track was heavy, and under the circumstances the time in all the events except the last was good.

The disappointment of the day was the poor showing of D'Arkle in the first race. Although strongly touted, the horse failed to show any speed. The race went to Right and True at the longest odds of the afternoon. Al Powell, Sterling, Cannonball, and Nonsense took the other events handily, although Nonsense was challenged gamely in the last by Zany. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; five and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Evans,) 6 to 5 and out, won; Dunseverrick, Warrenton Hunt, 142, (Mr. Dion Kerr,) 5 to 1 and 6 to 5, second; Oleroso, Cameron Hunt Club, 142, (Mr. Smith,) 4 to 1 and even, third. Time—5:28. FOXHALL KEENE'S HORSE OUT.

Will Not Run In Grand National Steeplechase at Liverpool To-day.

LONDON, March 29.—With Foxhall P. Keene's Prophet III. not running there will be no American horse competing in the Grand National Steeplechase at Liverpool to-morrow. American sportsmen, however, are interested in the fate of Phil May, who is running for "Mr. Cotton," the assumed name of J. T. Gwathmey of the New York Cotton Exchange. Mr. Gwathmey bought Phil May for $4,500. The horse is now in splendid form and is expected to make a showing. Owens, the American jockey, who has been in France, is here to ride Phil May.

Thomas Clyde, who is well known in America, will run Dathi. He unfortunately lost the services of Jockey O'Brien, who met with an accident to-day. Birch will take O'Brien's place in the saddle. The favorite is John M. P., which has not been beaten this season.

YACHTSMEN IN SESSION.

Sound Association Elects Officers—Bergen Beach Y. C. Dates.

The Yacht Racing Association of Long Island Sound at the meeting at the Hotel Astor last evening elected its officers for the ensuing year, adopted its schedule of racing dates, passed upon and accepted the new code of racing rules recommended by the Atlantic Coast Conference of American Yacht Clubs, and transacted various other details of its work of preparation for the racing season. The racing rules occupied by far the larger part of the evening's work, and various additions were made to them to govern the peculiar conditions existing on the Sound not applicable to the general clubs and not covered by the rules. The racing schedule and election provoked little discussion.

The election resulted in the choice of Oliver E. Cromwell of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian as Chairman, of Charles P. Tower of the Riverside Yacht Club as Secretary, of Edward B. MacClellan of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club as Treasurer, of Frank Bowne Jones of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, H. de Berkeley Parsons of the American Yacht Club, George P. Granbery of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, and Frederick A. Hill of the Stamford Yacht Club as an Executive Committee.

The racing dates are:

May 26, New Rochelle Yacht Club; 30, Indian Harbor Yacht Club, Bridgeport Yacht Club, and Harlem Yacht Club.

June 2, Knickerbocker Yacht Club; 9, Manhasset Bay Yacht Club; 16, Larchmont Yacht Club; 23, Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club; 30, New Rochelle Yacht Club.

July 3, American Yacht Club; 4, Larchmont Yacht Club and Hartford Yacht Club; 7, New Rochelle Yacht Club ocean race and Riverside Yacht Club; 21, Larchmont Yacht Club and Hartford Yacht Club; 23, 25, 26, 27, and 28, Larchmont Yacht Club.

Aug. 4, Corinthian Yacht Club of Stamford and Horseshoe Harbor Yacht Club; 11, Huguenot Yacht Club, Bridgeport Yacht Club, and Harlem River Yacht Club long-distance race; 18, Stamford Yacht Club and Hartford Yacht Club, and Manhasset Bay cruising race; 25, American Yacht Club and Northport Yacht Club.

Sept. 1, Indian Harbor Yacht Club and Hartford Yacht Club; 8, Norwalk Yacht Club, Larchmont Yacht Club, and Sachem's Head Yacht Club; 8, Larchmont Yacht Club and Manhasset Bay Yacht Club; 15, Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club; 22, American Yacht Club.

The flag officers of the Bergen Beach Yacht Club tendered a dinner to the club at the Hotel Gerard last evening, which fifty members of the club attended. The newly elected officers for the year were all present.

The racing schedule of the club prepared for the coming season was announced by the Regatta Committee. It includes six race days for all boats eligible in the Jamaica Bay Yacht Racing Association. These are: June 10—Starting at 10 A. M., club race; June 16—Ladies' open race, starting at 3:30 P. M.; July 29—Commodore's race, starting at 12:30 P. M.; Aug. 11—Ladies' race, starting at 2 P. M.; Aug. 26—Open race, starting at 11:30 A. M., and Sept. 23—Open race, starting at 10:30 A. M.

The classification adopted was also arranged as follows: Class A—Sloops, 20 to 25 feet; Class B—Sloops under 20 feet; Class C—Cabin catboats; Class D—Open catboats, 20 feet and over; Class E—Open catboats under 20 feet; Class F—Launches over 22 feet; Class G—Launches, 22 feet and under; Class H—Yawls; Class K—Dories.

The officers named for the year are: Commodore—George C. Sutton of the sloop Shawna; Vice Commodore—John Still of the sloop Onward; Rear Commodore—George H. Hopper of the sloop Fanelle; Secretary—Fitch Eagle; Treasurer—E. A. Chapman. Chairman of the Regatta Committee—C. P. Tickell; Entertainment Committee—E. W. Brown.

The executive meeting of the Columbia Yacht Club officials to arrange for the coming season was held at the clubhouse last evening and arrangements made for an active year of racing. An open power boat regatta will be held on the Hudson some time in June, the date to be fixed by the Regatta Committee, probably for the first week. The club will be represented in the various other power-boat regattas, at Indian Harbor on July 4, and at Manhasset Bay on May 30, as well as in the cruise of the American Power Boat Association in August, and in the races for the Gold Challenge Cup at the Chippewa Yacht Club at Thousand Islands. The details of these plans will be arranged by the Regatta Committee. The club anticipates a very successful year, with an enlarged membership and a materially increased enrollment.

MIMOSA UNLIKELY TO RACE.

Crack 33-Footers May Not Take the Water at All.

One of the best known racers on the Sound after a season's racing will, in all probability, not be put overboard this year because she is too fast for her class and can't get racing. Trenor L. Park's Mimosa III., according to present indications, will not take the water. The effort of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club to change the conditions of its cup race to the twenty-seven foot class and the declaration of the old thirty-three footers that they will not race with Mimosa III. but will enter the new handicap class is probably the reason. T. M. T. Raborg's Mimosa I. and Victor I. Cumnock's Nike are the only two that are said to be willing to race the champion and neither of these is anxious.

The absence of Mimosa III. from the racing will be generally regretted by yachtsmen who declare it to be a great shame that the fastest boat in her class and in every way an admirable craft should thus be frozen out of racing because of her superiority. "It is simply the effect of changing from one measurement rule to the other," said a prominent yacht designer yesterday. "One new boat in each class is bound to be the first and alone for a year or two until some one builds to give her a race. Plans are drawn for a 33-footer that would give Mimosa III. all she could care for. There are still two men who may build and do so."

Trenor L. Park has given an order for a boat to race in the Sonder Klass for the Roosevelt Cup. It is said she is of Gardner's design. Commodore Park was one of those who was interested in the German-American race from the outset when the 30-footers were originally to race. His new boat is 32 feet in length, beam, and draught in aggregate according to the conditions.

CURE'S FINE BILLIARDS.

Frenchman Easily Outplays Daly at Eighteen-Inch Balk-Line.

Louis Cure, the French billiardist, played yesterday against Maurice Daly at the latter's academy at a speed that the American could not even approach. Cure won both the afternoon and evening matches by wide margins. The first by 300 points to 78, and the second by 400 points to 214. His averages for the eighteen-inch balk line method, with two counts allowed in balk, were respectively 23 and 36 4-11.

In the afternoon Cure opened from the bank for lead with a run of 104 carroms. Four innings later he manipulated the ivory globes for a run of 83, all of which were gathered by close play. The most productive cue work of the Frenchman was developed in the evening contest. His good work began on his second turn at the table, which netted him 54. He followed with good sized runs up to his tenth inning, in which he delicately wove the balls back and forth along the end rail for a total of 134 carroms. His position play was remarkably good, and he used his cue with an easy, pleasing stroke. The summary:

AFTERNOON GAME.

Cure—104 0 0 8 83 8 0 0 15 35 44 6 2. Total—300 points; average, 23; high runs, 104, 83, 44.

Daly—2 0 0 5 9 28 28 0 2 0 1 3 0. Total—78 points; average, 6; high run, 28.

EVENING GAME.

Cure—0 54 1 83 40 89 5 32 134 0 12. Total—400 points; average, 36 4-11; high runs, 134, 89, 54.

Daly—0 2 9 2 10 2 81 0 47 24 34. Total—214 points; average, 19 5-11; high runs, 81, 47, 34.

Sutton to Play "Tom" Gallagher.

Billiardist George Sutton, who has just arrived from Paris for the international championship tournament at eighteen-inch balk line, two counts in balk, has arranged to play a match with Thomas J. Gallagher. The contest will begin this afternoon in Willie Hoppe's academy, 56 West Thirtieth Street, with a block of 500 points at this method of play. A total of 3,000 points will be played, continuing in afternoon and evening sessions. Hoppe will not begin his practice for the tournament, for which he has entered, until next week.

Americans Stopped by a Flood.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 29.—Rain which fell last evening and this morning flooded the diamond, and again was the game between the Greater New Yorks and the Birminghams declared off. This afternoon, however, the sun shone, and the prospects are that there will be a fairly dry diamond for to-morrow afternoon's contest.

Griffith gave his men exercise this morning with a push ball. This caused great amusement and is an excellent exercise. Griffith will pitch in to-morrow's game.

AUTOISTS FAVOR CANADA FOR TOURING CONTEST

Roads North of Great Lakes Better Than in This Country.

BRITISH TRADE RIVALRY

Emissaries Sent to London to Secure Cars for Montreal and Toronto Exhibits Next Month.

There seems to be little doubt at the present time that the original plan of the Glidden Cup Commission will be adhered to and that a section of Canada will be included in the coming tour to be conducted for the trophy by the American Automobile Association. One point that will undoubtedly have some influence in determining the final action of the new Touring Committee when the Chairman, Paul Deming, calls a meeting will be the industrial rivalry for the Canadian automobile trade between the American and the English manufacturers. Thus far the Americans have had practically all of the business, but a strong effort is being made to arouse the attention of English manufacturers to the possibilities of Canada as a profitable field for motor cars. Representatives have been in London securing entries of English cars for the two big automobile shows that will be held next month in Toronto and Montreal, the Toronto show coming first, from April 9 to 14, and the Montreal show from April 21 to 28.

Owing to the efforts of some of the managers of the Montreal show to give preference to English cars, the dozen or more agents of American cars in that city have formed a rival organization and threaten to hold a separate show. On this basis, it is not believed that the exhibit would be satisfactory to the Canadians, and, notwithstanding the fact that ten or a dozen English manufacturers have consented to send cars over for the exhibits, a friendlier spirit of rivalry will undoubtedly prevail, and the cars from both countries are likely to be shown together.

"One reason why American cars have been so popular in Canada," said an automobile agent yesterday who has toured through the greater part of the Dominion, "is because they are serviceable and low priced. The English manufacturers, as a rule, do not make small, low-priced cars. Canada has not a large number of wealthy citizens to create a market for high-priced machines. Where the roads are good the smaller cars are preferable. One American manufacturer in Detroit has established a big business with his small cars by building a factory across the border, and he makes exactly the same cars there as are made on American soil, and by saving the duty of 33 1-3 per cent. he is able to sell his machines practically as cheap in Montreal as in New York. I know that there has been a feeling among Canadians that English cars ought to be more popular. It is a matter, however, that remains strictly with the purchaser. The English manufacturers are not able to turn out enough cars for their home market, and as long as they can dispose of all they make at home I do not think they will try very hard for the Canadian trade."

The total value of motor cars imported into Canada last year was a trifle less than $500,000.

"We are selling more cars in Mexico," said another American manufacturer who has established agencies in Canada. "There is more wealth in Mexico than across the border, and the residents of Mexico City have ordered a large number of high-priced cars during the past year. There is no duty on automobiles in Mexico, and that makes considerable difference."

"I don't want to appear un-American," added another automobilist, who has taken his motor car nearly everywhere it could be forced to go in Canada, "but when it comes to the condition of roads the Canadian roads north of the great lakes are infinitely better than the American roads south of the lakes. The Glidden tour contestants will find more agreeable traveling from Detroit through Canadian territory than they will on American soil to Buffalo. I hope that Canada will be included in the tour, for it will do a great deal to disprove the assertion that there are few good roads across the border. Incidentally, it may have some influence in stirring the Western automobilists to the necessity of more effective work for good roads in their own localities."

Automobile Notes of Interest.

With the addition of a few new contests to the automobile racing programme prepared for the Atlantic City beach races on April 25, 26, and 27, there are now 26 events. Three will be record trials, 6 for racing machines, 12 for stock touring cars, and [illegible] to prove [illegible] cars. Among the latter will be a quarter-mile run on the high gear, for which a cup is offered for making the slowest time. Entries close with Alfred Reeves, 29 West Forty-second Street, on April 20.

The Welch Motor Car Company will open its new salesroom in this city at Broadway and Sixty-second Street to-morrow. Burgoyne Hamilton, the local manager, has received a number of fine cars from the Detroit and Pontiac factories, Michigan.

The Automobile Club of America has secured a lease for the floor above the rooms now occupied at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street from May 1 until the new clubhouse at West Fifty-fourth Street is ready for occupancy. The latter will probably not be ready until early next Winter.

E. Russell Thomas, who has owned several fast foreign automobiles, has recently purchased his first American-made car, a 50 horse power Thomas of the 1906 model. He has also added to his foreign cars by purchasing a new Mercedes.

E. V. Hartford, President of the Hartford Suspension Company, said yesterday that many users of motor cars were showing great interest in the new double-piston system as incorporated in the Gobron-Brillie car. Rigolly, a well-known French racing autoist, has ordered a set of Hartford suspensions to be fitted to the car which he will drive in the Grand Prix in June.

The last club exhibition of cars for the present season at the Long Island Automobile Club will be held in the rooms, 360 Cumberland Street, this evening. The cars that will be shown and explained to-night are the Jackson, Autocar, Wayne, Ariel, Mors, and Baker electric. This will be the eighth exhibit of cars given by the club this season, and over thirty different makes of machines have been shown.

The Executive Committee of the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers has elected the following officers for the year: President—John J. Amory; Vice Presidents—H. A. Lozier, Jr., Charles A. Strelinger, and Henry R. Sutphen; Secretary—H. S. Gambel; Treasurer—Albert E. Aldridge.

Gravesend Bay Yachting Regulations.

The meeting of the Gravesend Bay Yacht Racing Association, held at the Crescent Athletic Club last evening, effected all the contemplated alterations in their regulations to prepare for the active racing season with the exception of permanently approving the racing schedule arranged. Owing to some uncertainty in the Atlantic Yacht Club as to the date of the annual cruise, due to the effort to arrange a joint event with the Seawanhaka-Corinthians and the Corinthian Yacht Club of Philadelphia, the July schedule may have to be altered. The whole matter was held in abeyance pending the return of Commodore Daniel G. Reid from abroad.

The association adopted a new constitution modeled closely upon that in force in the Long Island Yacht Racing Association, and [illegible] in the classification [illegible] a new class of dories [illegible] clubs. The racing rules as recommended by the Atlantic Coast Conference of American Yacht Clubs were adopted in toto and are now in force in all the clubs about New York Harbor.

The office of Association Measurer was created and John R. Brophy of the Brooklyn Yacht Club was elected to the position. The [illegible] the arrangements effected with the Harbor Board to lay Government buoys for the marks.

BOWLERS OPPOSED TO A. B. C.

First Steps in East Toward Organizing a New Governing Body.

The first move toward organizing a governing body among the bowlers of the country antagonistic to the American Bowling Congress was begun yesterday at a meeting held at the Grand Central Bowling Alleys of William Cordes, 321 Washington Street, Brooklyn. Since the recent tournament at Louisville the Eastern men who participated in that affair have been outspoken in their condemnation of the methods used during that tournament, especially in throwing out the high individual score of Tuthill of Brooklyn. It was also discovered that there was considerable opposition in the West against what was termed the autocratic government of the tournamment, and it was resolved to organize a new association at once.

At the Brooklyn meeting yesterday the preliminaries for a thorough organization were arranged, and the new body, which will probably be called the National Bowling Association, will be formed at a meeting to be held at the Grand Central alleys on April 19. There were present at the meeting Michael Costa and Harry Mills from Philadelphia, David Sturr and J. J. Norton from Newark, and John G. Floss from Buffalo. Dr. W. A. Griffith of Brooklyn acted as Chairman. A letter was received from Dr. H. Timm, ex-President of the American Bowling Congress, favoring the formation of the new organization, and assurances have been received from Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit, and even Chicago, that each of these cities will be represented in the new association.

College Gymnasts to Compete To-night.

The best college gymnasts have entered for the annual meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Gymnasts of America, which will be held to-night in the gymnasium of Columbia University. The entry list is unusually large, seventy men having entered for the six events, namely: horizontal bar, side horse, flying rings, parallel bars, tumbling, and club swinging. The meet promises to be closely contested, as Harvard, Yale, and New York University have strong teams. The Columbia representatives, although not so good as last year's champions, are in fine physical condition, and will undoubtedly make a good showing.

Among the performers will be E. C. Krauss of the University of Pennsylvania. In the dual meet with New York University last week Krauss won three first places. He is one of the best gymnasts in the country, and has an excellent chance to win the all-around championship.

TENNIS FOR SCHOOLBOYS.

Plans for Championship Tournament the Latter Part of June.

Plans for the holding of the schoolboy lawn tennis championship under the direction of the Metropolitan Lawn Tennis League were perfected yesterday at a meeting of the committee having the tournament in charge. In the final championship series thirty-two competitors will meet in the singles, and sixteen teams in the doubles. These matches will be decided the latter part of June. It allows for eight representatives in the singles from the public schools of Manhattan and Brooklyn, four each from the Bronx, Richmond, and Queens, and one each from New Jersey and Westchester County, and they are represented in the Metropolitan League by organizations. Manhattan and Brooklyn will each be represented by four pairs in the doubles, while the Bronx, Richmond, and Queens will have two pairs each, and New Jersey and Westchester County one pair each.

Chairman Thomas C. Trask of the West Side Lawn Tennis Club and his associates on the committee, Morris S. Clark, Siwanoy Lawn Tennis Club, and J. Pryer Allen, New York Athletic Club, and Secretary of the committee, arranged a schedule, so that the borough tournaments, which will bring out the competitors for the final and championship series, may be begun in May and finished by June 10. These matches and a majority of the preliminary competitions will be decided on the courts of the Metropolitan League clubs. These include the West Side Lawn Tennis Club, New York Lawn Tennis Club, and Hamilton Grange Lawn Tennis Club of Manhattan; the Kings County, Brooklyn, Knickerbocker Field Club, and Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn; no organization in the Bronx; Staten Island Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club in Richmond; no club in Queens, while New Jersey is represented by the Montclair Athletic Club and the Englewood Field Club, and Westchester County by the Siwanoy Lawn Tennis Club, and the courts of the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island.

In many instances the courts of the public parks will have to be used for the matches. This will be determined upon at the closing of the entry lists, no fee being charged for entrance to the tournament, which will close the latter part of next month. Already the impetus which the proposed championship has given to the sport is indicated by the action of the boys of the High School of Commerce and of De Witt Clinton High School, in which lawn tennis organizations have been formed. The High School of Commerce has arranged to build a court immediately adjoining the school, and has entered into an agreement for a series of dual matches in singles and doubles with De Witt Clinton. Kenneth McAlpin is President of the Commerce Association, which has enrolled eighty playing members. This affords an inkling of the proportions of borough tournaments of the coming championship series, and the prospect of developing ranking players from among the schoolboys of the city.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Necklet Snaps Assessed as Jewelry—Other Decisions.

In a decision by T. S. Sharretts, the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled yesterday a claim filed by the American Bead Company and others of New York, regarding the tariff classification of necklet snaps and slides set with rhinestones in imitation of diamonds, sapphires, and other precious stones. The articles were designed for use in the manufacture of necklaces or other articles of jewelry. The Collector assessed duty on the articles at the rate of 60 per cent. under the provision in the tariff for jewelry. The importers unsuccessfully contended for duty as manufactures of metal at 50 per cent.

General Appraiser Sharretts also wrote a decision overruling claims made by G. W. Sheldon & Co. of New York and Chicago. The importers maintained that the assessment of 45 per cent. duty on test plates and so-called dispositives was excessive and should be reduced.

Other importers' claims overruled were filed by the United States Commercial Company, Reiss & Brady, Francis H. Leggett & Co., Morris Goldberg, Veit, Son & Co., Emile Utard, H. Robinson, Freund, Foise & Co., and others, New York.

The board sustained protests filed by William H. Stiner & Sons, and the E. A. Bliss Company, New York.

U. S. Mortgage & Trust Changes.

John W. Platten, Vice President of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, was elected a Director of that institution yesterday at the annual meeting of stockholders. The vacancy in the Vice Presidency caused by the resignation some months ago of Clark Williams was filled by the election of Samuel S. Campbell, who has been cashier of the Merchants' National Bank. S. P. Colt, at present manager of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company's municipal bond department, was made Assistant Secretary. Zoheth S. Freeman will succeed Mr. Campbell as cashier of the Merchants' National Bank.

Lanston Monotype's First Dividend.

The first dividend to be paid by the Lanston Monotype Company since its organization, in 1887, was recommended at the meeting of the Executive Committee, and will undoubtedly be confirmed at the Directors' meeting, to be held next week. The dividend recommended is 2 per cent. semi-annually, and will be payable April 23 to stockholders of record April 9. The company is capitalized at $5,000,000, and the stock, which is $20 par, is quoted around 13.

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Rates, 5@7 Per Cent.

Consolidated Gas Breaks—Many Favorable Railroad Earnings Statements.

Without other impetus than that derived from the speculative inclinations of professional traders, yesterday's stock market was strong during the forenoon hours and irregular with a lower tendency in the afternoon session, although a slight rally near the close of the day left prices finally very little changed from the level obtaining on Wednesday night. Such news as came to hand from the conference of operators and miners at Indianapolis was indecisive, although the possibility of continued operation in the Pennsylvania field was again indicated, while up to the close of the market it seemed altogether probable that an extension of the present agreement in the anthracite regions for thirty days, pending further conferences, would be asked for by the miners. A break of 5 points in Consolidated Gas stock shortly after the noon hour affected sentiment adversely, it being reported in explanation of this decline that the Directors of the company, who were in session at the time, had reached a decision to reduce the dividend on the stock to a 4 per cent. basis. No such action was actually taken, the meeting being for purposes apart from dividends. The stocks comprised in the Rock Island system, including the Rock Island and St. Louis & San Francisco issues, as well as the bonds of these companies, were firm throughout the day, largely as a result of the publication of the very favorable earnings statements of the Rock Island and of the San Francisco, the former property reporting an increase of $879,000 in net earnings for February, and the latter an increase of $721,000 in net for the same period. Other excellent earnings statements were submitted during the day, including that of Canadian Pacific, whose increase for February was $903,000. In the industrial section of the market strength was displayed by the American Sugar, American Smelting, American Ice, and Colorado Fuel and Iron issues. The standard railroad shares were traded in at moderate concessions from the prices of the previous day, but these in few instances ran above fractions.

Offsetting the news of the additional engagement of additional gold from Berlin were the further heavy losses of the banks to the Sub-Treasury, the drain to that institution now amounting to $2,307,000, as against a gain of $331,000 at this time a week ago. Under the demand incident to the April 1 disbursements, call money was again active, rising to 7 per cent. in the course of the day. Supplementing the recent engagements of gold was the announcement yesterday that the Société Financière Franco-Américaine had sold $3,000,000 of its bonds to French investors, and that in accordance with the purpose for which the institution was organized the proceeds would be invested in securities here under the direction of the local Directors, it being understood that the funds for this purpose are in hand. The operations of this institution introduce, of course, a new element of strength in the local financial situation. Foreign markets were somewhat lower yesterday, London reporting inquiries there by our banks for gold. The bank of England reported a moderate decrease in the proportion of reserve to liabilities, its loans increasing $7,185,000 over the figures of the previous week.

The failure to pay this interest by April 1, within the ninety days of grace allowed by the terms of the mortgage, will place the bonds formally in default.

The issues on which interest is to be paid on April 1, according to the dispatches, are Cincinnati, Dayton & Chicoga first mortgage 4 per cent. bonds and equipment 4½ per cent. notes; Flint & Père Marquette first mortgage bonds, and Flint & Père Marquette, Port Huron Division, 5 per cent. bonds. LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 29.—Rates for money were increased to-day, owing to month-end requirements. Discounts were easier on the expectation of more abundant money next week.

Prices on the Stock Exchange strengthened on the satisfactory news from Algeciras, though business was moderate pending the conclusion of the conference on Moroccan reforms. Consols hardened. Home rails were generally better.

Americans opened quietly, somewhat above parity. A more confident feeling prevailed regarding the coal and labor agitation on the expectation that the matter would be settled by arbitration. Transactions were limited and prices closed steady. Grand Trunk was quiet as a result of the disappointing February revenue.

Foreigners were moderately supported. Internationals were firm on Continental advices.

GAGE LEAVES U. S. TRUST CO.

Resignation as President Announced to Take Effect in May.

The resignation of ex-Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage from the Presidency of the United States Trust Company was informally announced at a special meeting of the Trustees yesterday. Mr. Gage will remain in office until the first week of May. After that he intends to retire permanently from active business.

E. W. Sheldon, who has been the attorney for the trust company for a number of years, and is thoroughly familiar with its affairs, was nominated to succeed him, and will be formally elected when Mr. Gage's resignation takes effect.

The announcement of Mr. Gage's resignation was immediately followed by the resignation of James S. Clark, Second Vice President, in whose place the Trustees elected William M. Kingsley.

Mr. Clark's resignation was not a surprise to those of his friends who knew of his ambition to fill the Presidency of the institution six years go, when Mr. Gage succeeded John A. Stewart. In fact, ever since Mr. Gage announced his intention of retiring some weeks ago and it became known to the company that the Trustees were looking for an outsider to fill his place, there has been a great deal of disappointment among some of the men passed over. This was made plain at the meeting yesterday when the resignation of Henry L. Thornell was presented. After the meeting a statement explanatory of the resignation of the Secretary was given out, which said:

> Mr. Thornell, who has been for almost a quarter of a century the Secretary of the company, also presented his resignation, in accordance with determination, previously announced, not to remain connected with the company in the event that the vacancies in the offices of President and Vice President should be filled without regard to his long-time service and connection with the company.

The United States Trust Company, according to the last report to the Controller, has resources of $67,526,258, and is capitalized at $2,000,000.

PASSENGER PROFITS LESS.

But Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Net Income Shows Growth.

Passenger traffic on the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company, which is part of the Pennsylvania's system in the Middle West, shows a falling off in revenue for the year just closed. Although the volume of passenger business made slight gains, the profits fell off 4.98 per cent. and the mileage 7.2 per cent. This showing, which compares unfavorably with 1904, is explained in the annual report by the loss of the long-haul traffic which the road had during the St. Louis Exposition.

All the gross increase in earnings shown in the report came from the freight traffic, which amounted to $19,314,498, compared with $16,520,384 in 1904. How much of this increase of $2,623,936 was attributable to the great prosperity in the steel trade is seen in the list of items showing the greatest increase, which nearly all belong to the commodities of the iron and steel trade.

Gross earnings in total were $31,417,095, an increase of $2,884,620. Operating expenses increased $2,153,621, and were $23,519,385. Net income was $3,574,199, a gain over 1904 of $653,961.

ISSUES BONDS IN PARIS.

Societe Financiere Franco-Americaine Begins with 15,000,000f.

The first step in a project which will open American securities to the investment of French capital is made possible by the issue of the first 15,000,000 francs of the 4 per cent. bonds of the Société Financière Franco-Américaine. Advices from Paris were received in Wall Street yesterday telling of the placing of these bonds, which run until 1955, at a little below par with French investors.

Sales of American securities are heavily taxed in Paris, and this fact has practically shut out the French public heretofore from investments in American securities. The Société was organized to overcome this difficulty.

The proceeds of the bond sale, $3,000,000, will be invested in American securities under the advice of the New York Directors, who are James Speyer, Adrian Iselin, Jr., Norman B. Ream, and Richard Schuster.

EXCHANGE MAY ACT TO-DAY.

Produce Members to Vote on a Lease to Consolidated.

A meeting of the Directors of the New York Produce Exchange will be held this afternoon, at which the Directors will probably act on the proposal to lease to the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange part of the floor of the Produce Exchange. The Directors of the Produce Exchange met yesterday, but did not act on the proposed lease.

The work of counting the postal card votes of the members of the Exchange on the proposal of allowing the Consolidated Exchange to move to the floor of the Produce Exchange had not been completed yesterday. The vote will probably be announced by the Directors to-day. The action of the board, it is believed, will be determined by the wishes of the members as indicated by this vote.

ARIZONA WATER CO. SOLD OUT.

Corporation's Assets Bid In by the Bondholders' Committee.

Under orders of the United States Circuit Court, Payson Terrill, as Special Master, sold at public sale yesterday, in the Federal Building, the property and assets of the Arizona Water Company. The price paid for the corporation's assets was $50,000. The only bid received was that of Porter Steele, representing the Bondholders' Committee, composed of Charles S. Fairchild, Arthur B. Leach, and William H. Burrows.

The sale resulted from a foreclosure suit instituted by the New York Trust Company, as trustee of the $50,000 of Arizona Water Company first mortgage bonds. The company's property consists of irrigating rights and land grants in Arizona. The bonds were issued Jan. 1, 1899.

BANK OF COMMERCE DROPS.

Further Stock Decline Attributed to Possible Insurance Unloading.

Bank of Commerce stock sold yesterday at 182, a decline of 3 points this week and a drop of 11 points since the beginning of the month. In November last the stock was quoted at 200, and at the beginning of this year sales were made as high as 199.

The steady decline in the stock is generally attributed in Wall Street to the belief that the large life insurance companies will be obliged to dispose of their stock in financial institutions. Both the Equitable and the Mutual Life have large holdings of Bank of Commerce stock.

C. W. Morse Gets Bath (Me.) Bank.

BATH, Me., March 28.—Announcement was made to-day that Charles W. Morse of New York had acquired control of the Bath Trust Company. This gives Mr. Morse a large interest in three banking institutions here, as he already holds control of the Lincoln National Bank and is a large stockholder in the First National Bank. In banking circles, a consolidation of the three institutions is predicted.

REFEREE ACCUSES CHAMPION.

Thinks Former Hotel Manager Schemed to Avoid Paying Creditors.

William H. Willis, referee in bankruptcy, has made a report recommending that a discharge from bankruptcy be denied to Ezra R. Champion, former hotel manager, who in 1903 had five apartment hotels in West Forty-seventh Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, the Flanders, St. Margaret, Portland, Somerset, and Stanley, at the instance of Lesser Brothers, attorneys for several of the creditors and also for the Trustee, Benjamin Lesser.

Mr. Champion disposed of all these hotels in October and November, 1903, and he filed a petition in bankruptcy on Jan. 2, 1904, with liabilities $432,707 and actual assets small.

The referee says in his report that in view of the various transfers and considering the various benefits resulting therefrom, including Champion's employment by the Somerset Hotel Company at a salary of $500 a month, the granting to him of the lease of the Hotel Margaret, the obtaining by him of large sums of money in cash for which he has not satisfactorily accounted, and the granting to his wife of the lease of the Stanley Hotel on the very day on which the previous lease was canceled, and, considering further, the fact that all of such transactions occurred within a period of four months of the petition and more than six weeks after he had sought to obtain an extension from his creditors, and the final result was to divest the bankrupt of all property, the referee cannot avoid the conclusion that all the transactions were parts of a scheme devised in contemplation of his bankruptcy and to enable him to transfer his property so as to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

William Baylis, Jr., was elected a member of the New York Stock Exchange yesterday.

Greene Consolidated Copper stock, which was dropped from the Boston Stock Exchange list in January, has been reinstated.

Spencer Trask & Co. have issued a pamphlet analyzing convertible bonds and explaining the combined investment and speculative features of these issues, which are now so conspicuous on the market, in some of which investments have appreciated 20 to 30 per cent.

One of the first steps of the Standard Cordage Company plan to take over the physical property of that company will be the purchase at auction on Wednesday of the Elizabeth (N. J.) plant of the Standard Rope and Twine Company. The property was sold for the first mortgage bondholders, and was taken over in the names of Alvin W. Krech and James B. Clews for $27,500.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

On every reaction in prices in the last fortnight the market has appeared to gain somewhat in technical strength.

* * *

The symptoms of bullish enthusiasm which accompanied the last hour's trading on Wednesday were less pronounced yesterday, owing partly, no doubt, to the absence of any response from commission houses to the improvement, but the market, as a whole, lost little, if any ground, and was in all respects well behaved from the point of view of a conservative bull. It was noticeable, for example, that on moderate-price recessions the volume of trading fell off, whereas in a market that is heading downward it is on the rallies that dullness appears. The total of transactions yesterday was about 20 per cent. smaller than Wednesday's total. Naturally, there was some little profit taking of a professional nature, but it was well received, and another flurry in call interest rates was disregarded. On the other side, sentiment was less responsive to bullish initiative, probably for the reason that such initiative was too clearly of professional origin. The further advance of Union Pacific to 155¾ in the forenoon failed to inspire any general enthusiasm, and the stock subsequently fell back 1 per cent., closing at a fractional decline.

* * *

Loans made to-day will carry over until Monday. It seems reasonable to suppose, therefore, that the maximum rates for call money, incident to arranging for the quarterly disbursements, may obtain to-day. Call loans were renewed yesterday mostly at 6 per cent. The money that loaned under 6 per cent. was in small amounts. Nearly all of the large lenders marked their money up to 6 per cent. The highest rate reported all day was 8 per cent. So far, call money has not been nearly so high as some bankers expected it to go. A few were of the opinion last week that the rate might go to 25 per cent. before the end of the month.

* * *

Amalgamated Copper furnished an example yesterday of what traders mean when they say the tape lies or that the market is deceptive. "I was entirely fooled in Amalgamated this morning," said a trader at luncheon time. "I watched the trading at 108¾, ⅞, and 9, lots of 500 and 1,000 shares recurring at those quotations, and then, when it sold at 109⅛, with another lot immediately at 109¼. I said to myself, 'Here's another good bulge in Amalgamated just starting. I bit off some at 109⅛, feeling proud of my judgment, and then my bulge flattened out like a ruined omelet soufflé. That's what I call a deceptive market." Every trader within hearing readily concurred in that opinion.

* * *

It will be remembered, perhaps, that on the announcement of the "Heinze settlement," when Amalgamated Copper was selling around 118, certain very prominent authorities declared that, in their judgment, the boom in "coppers" was over. This was the opinion of a Boston house, which had held a bullish position on "coppers" for months. It was also the opinion of Mr. Lawson, but he had already ceased to be an authority on such matters. Since then Amalgamated Copper has touched par, and recovered half the decline. In the interim conditions in the copper metal trade steadily improved, and the outlook is now so promising that the conservative opinions expressed on "coppers" at the time of the "Heinze settlement" have in almost every case been revised. The Boston house that turned on Amalgamated Copper at the extreme top, and got a break of 18 points to vindicate its judgment, has turned conservatively bullish again. It is now a settled impression in Wall Street that the break in Amalgamated Copper from around 118 to par was chiefly at the expense of the Heinze contingent, notwithstanding positive statements to the contrary from Heinze's friends and market followers—notwithstanding even the $3,000,000 Heinze smile which wouldn't come off.

* * *

The congested condition of the bond market is a source of misgiving. One commentator calls attention to the possibility that railroad corporations whose bonds are practically unsalable may be compelled to resort to short-time notes as a means of raising money to meet their more urgent requirements.

* * *

Mr. Price's bull campaign in cotton has failed, so far, to attract much public speculative interest, to the keen disappointment of brokers who were hoping that activity in that market would help to offset the dullness in stock speculation.

* * *

The earnings which are now being reported appear to justify the assertion that the Rock Island system has "turned the corner." The figures must be very gratifying to the friends of that property. The improvement is general throughout the system, including, besides the Rock Island property, the St. Louis & San Francisco and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois. Those who have followed Rock Island affairs attentively are of the opinion that the annexation of the "Frisco" was a stroke of mingled genius and good luck. In the stock market the Rock Island stocks appear to have recovered from the liquidation of Mr. Leeds's holdings several months ago. The low point in the market for these securities was reached shortly after the completion of that liquidation when announcement was made that the preferred stock dividend would be discontinued. This passing of the preferred dividend was a victory for the conservative banking element in Rock Island affairs, and the securities have since been held in higher regard by Wall Street generally. The common stock recently has been well supported, even strong, and there is some hope of a bull campaign in it under more favorable market conditions. Its advantage for purposes of speculation lies in the fact that it possesses a wide market.

* * *

The activity and strength of Union Pacific this week could be credited almost entirely to the initiative of three or four aggressive speculators who regarded the stock not only as one that would be most likely to influence the general market, but as a security in which the risk of getting "hung up" in case the demonstration failed would be relatively small. So far as can be learned, the movement has been conducted without any inside assistance. Jacob Field has been very active in the stock. It is understood that several equally prominent operators have been associated with him in the demonstration, the results of which, doubtless, have been as satisfactory as could have been expected in so professional a market. It could have been predicted that the movement would meet with general approval, owing to the high esteem in which the stock is held by every good bull in the country. Union Pacific undoubtedly is the most popular high-priced railroad security in the market.

* * *

Union Pacific sold yesterday within less than 5 points of its extreme high record last January, and if you choose to count the 3 per cent. dividend which came off the stock in February, yesterday's quotation of 155¾ was the equivalent of 158¾, as compared with the high record price of 160⅛ in January. This would be a remarkable showing in the case of any stock; it is extraordinary in the case of Union Pacific when you consider the extent to which bullish interest has converged upon it through the whole bull market of the last two years. At the beginning of the decline which followed the culmination of the January boom many experienced traders believed that the market position of Union Pacific was more vulnerable than that of the average stock, because everybody seemed to be long of it. Instead the miscellaneous bull account in Union Pacific was perhaps no more or less vulnerable than the bull account in any one of twenty other stocks, but Union Pacific was better bought than other stocks on a scale down, with the result that its maximum decline was only 11⅝ points, half of which has since been recovered, besides which a 3 per cent. dividend has come off the price in the meantime.

There has been some very good buying of Southern Pacific recently. A number of prominent houses have been picking it up quietly. The actions of the stock would suggest accumulation. It is understood that Mr. Harriman refuses to commit himself to a dividend policy concerning Southern Pacific, and will only say, to those who have the right to ask, that the property is being developed handsomely out of the earnings, which is his policy. Persons who have been successful in the market with Harriman stocks predict that Southern Pacific will receive much greater prominence in the next general bull movement.

There were more guesses than opinions yesterday among cotton traders at the ring. The unexpected break in the New Orleans market after the close here Wednesday upset a good many calculations. One report was that 7,500 bales were offered to New Orleans to hedge purchases here; that the Southern market was too narrow to absorb this amount, and W. P. Brown and others had to skirmish around to take care of it. Another rumor had it that Brown had been doing a little speculating on the short side and took this cotton to cover.

The market here opened yesterday 3 points down for May and 4 for July, at 11.24 and 11.14. Liverpool was 3 to 4 points lower, but partly recovered, closing barely steady at 1 point decline. Local fluctuations were very erratic. May, after the opening, sold down to 11.20, rallied to 11.28, and again declined to 11.15. Prices ended at 11.11 for May and 11.03 for July. The spot market declined 10 points, to 11.70 for middling and 11.95 for Gulf, against 8.15 and 8.40 last year.

The South sold May and bought July in New York, believing that the difference in price between the two options, which at one time reached 12 points, would narrow. If not, they can deliver on their May contracts at a profit.

A representative house which has been on the bull side for a week or more went over to the bear side yesterday, believing that the statistical position is not strong enough to warrant any further advance and that the new crop is not far enough along to exert much influence at present.

The spot sales at Liverpool yesterday were large, being 14,000 bales, of which 11,000 bales were American. Manchester reports more demand for yarns and cloths firm. Some large orders were taken for gray shirtings for November and January delivery, showing the Manchester mills are sold pretty well ahead.

Port receipts were 13,258 bales, against 14,529 bales last week and 28,053 bales last year. Exports were 40,346 bales. Port receipts since Sept. 1 total 6,683,040 bales, against 7,783,001 bales last year. Exports, 5,041,045 bales, against 6,289,684 bales last year. Interior receipts at the thirteen principal towns were 5,597 bales, against 8,359 bales last week and 16,604 bales last year. Shipments, 8,561 bales, against 14,346 bales last week and 17,538 bales last year. Estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 2,500 to 3,000 bales, against 3,775 bales last week and 5,349 bales last year; Galveston, 2,500 to 3,500 bales, against 4,465 bales last week and 14,333 bales last year, and New Orleans, 2,200 to 3,200 bales, against 1,435 bales last week and 15,837 bales last year.

Cotton Opinions.

JOHN MUIR & CO.—There is being a great deal of bullish advice sent here from the South for the last few days with reference to bad weather. The information, however, is not accompanied by buying orders.

T. A. McINTYRE & CO.—To-day's selling was due more to skepticism regarding the permanency of the bull movement rather than to the development of anything new of a particularly bearish nature in the general cotton situation.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—We see no reason to sell to the influential operators, who are working for higher prices.

ATWOOD VIOLETT & CO.—Present indications are that the visible supply of American will show a very marked decrease at the end of this week.

BAILEY & MONTGOMERY.—With a spell of good weather we look to see the new crop months sold with freedom, which will have its effect on the old crop months.

Theodore Price's statistician telegraphs from Columbia, S. C.:

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—Taking the day as a whole wheat was in a fairly firm position, and at the close showed ⅛ to ¼c net advance. A part of the steadiness was attributed by market observers to a sentimental following of the advance in corn. Other influences contributing to the stability of prices were a timid short interest and occasional commission house support. Near the close the market took a sharp upturn to about best figures of the day. Liverpool was ⅛d lower, Paris 5 to 10 points down, and Berlin ¼ mark lower, while Budapest closed 4 points net higher. Export business amounted to 11 loads, all Manitoba. No. 2 red in the local market closed 85c, elevator, and 88c, nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 88c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—Throughout the entire day corn had a firm undertone, and was higher than the previous night, closing locally at ⅛c net advance, but showing a greater rise at the West. As was the case Wednesday, most of the news had a bullish average. It included light receipts, an advance of ¼d at Liverpool, clearances of 474,000 bushels, light offerings, and prospects for small carlot receipts at Chicago on Friday. The reactions in the market were unimportant and mostly resulted from profit-taking. Broomhall estimated that Argentine shipments would be 240,000 bushels for the week, against 98,000 the previous week. Export business consisted of 1 load. Cash corn in New York closed firm, as follows: No. 2 corn, 54½c, elevator, and 51½c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 52½c, and No. 2 yellow, 52½c, free on board, afloat.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Most of the stocks which changed hands on the local Exchange to-day did so at advancing prices. Chicago Subway was somewhat conspicuous by reason of an advance to around 50½ on trading running to over 1,200 shares during the morning session. Anything that operates against Chicago Telephone interests, as did the City Hall report of a "yellow dog" fund in the company's accounts, helps Subway's cause.

There was no particular pressure on Chicago Telephone stock, and only three shares came out during the morning at 116½. Gossip, however, tried to make capital out of the City Hall report. Edison conversely was being favored by good bids in the market from influential investors, though trading was distinctly limited by reason of little or no offerings at current figures.

Money, 5½@6 per cent. New York exchange, 5c. premium.

LIVERPOOL, March 29.—The Cunard Steamship Line to-day declared a dividend of 4 per cent., after providing fully for depreciation and placing $250,000 in the reserve.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 29.—Evidences are accumulating that the local money market is working easier. No great ease is expected, but it is believed that money will be in good supply after the completion of the April disbursements and that rates will decline moderately.

Call loans, 5@6 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5@5½ per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5@5½ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 5 per cent.; New York funds, 10@12½c discount; clearings, $24,799,911; balances, $1,187,892; Sub-Treasury debit, $30,834.

After a fairly active opening, the copper shares became dull, with trading limited. Greene Consolidated, which as today been readmitted to the list on the Stock Exchange, was strong and active, showing a small advance for the day. Utah and United States Smelting were features of early strength, the former selling above 65 and the latter being in demand at 60. Since the early hours the trading was extremely light and price changes nominal, with a slight reactionary tendency in evidence. The closing was quiet and steady at the reaction.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Day of Midsummer Dullness on the Curb.

Industrials Sell Less Than 6,000—Inter.-Met. Shows Some Activity and Firmness.

Trading on the curb yesterday was confined almost entirely to the mining issues, though there was considerable business done in bonds. The dullness of midsummer seemed to have settled over the industrials, and the trading in these stocks was less than 6,000 shares. Under the light trading in mining shares fractional recessions were almost universal. United Copper was one of the losers, closing at 67⅛, 1 point down from the opening, after sales of 6,800 shares. Tennessee Copper lost 1½ points on light selling, closing at 47½. Interborough-Metropolitan was strong and developed a good deal of activity. The last sales were at 52¼, ¾ above the opening price.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 29.—There was increased activity among the local public utility stocks to-day, and while prices did not undergo material change, the buying was of a character to be considered significant. Councils meet next Monday for organization. A bitter fight is on for the Presidency of both branches between the Mayor's candidates and the regular Republicans. It looks now as though the latter would win in Select Council, and as the President of that branch has the appointment of the important committees, his election would be favorable to the public stocks.

The anthracite stocks were less active and easier under realization sales. Cambria Steel was again in demand. Inter-State Railways advanced 1½, General Asphalt, preferred ½, while Pennsylvania Steel preferred was ¾ off. Arbitrage trading was active in Union Pacific, Steel common and Southern Railway.

Total sales, 30,260 shares.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 29.—United Railways income bonds and common stock were very active to-day, the sales of trust certificates amounting to 3,000 shares, the free incomes to $73,000, and the Baltimore Trust certificates to $82,000. The free incomes sold up to 75½, an advance of ½, while the certificates touched 74¼, an advance of ¼. The trust certificates of the stock sold up to 19. There is still much discussion of the railway situation in financial circles and the security holders look for some interesting announcement concerning the property soon after the adjournment of the Legislature.

That it is believed the securities will improve was shown to-day when a broker took a thirty-day option on a block of incomes at 76, which is ¼ point above the highest price reached since the movement began. Maryland and Pennsylvania incomes advanced 1½ per cent. Seaboard 4s displayed strength, advancing ½, but at the close easing off to 90⅝.

The market closed firm and fairly active.

WOMAN DENTIST SUED BY DENTIST HUSBAND

She Is 55, He Is 38, and Wants a Divorce.

SHE SENT HIM HER PATIENTS

Now She Complains of Ingratitude and Capillary Deception—She's Well Known in Settlement Work.

Mrs. Arthur Vernon Tucker, who is Dr. Elma H. Edgar in professional and philanthropic circles, is thoroughly convinced that the ancient story of the treachery of the revived serpent was founded on fact. She says as much in opposing her husband's suit for divorce.

She is 55; he is 38, and both are dentists. Mrs. Tucker has been a dentist for a long time. When she married Tucker he was working in a machine shop. That was in 1892. He took lessons under her guidance, she says, and finally got a diploma. Later he left her, and she has since become prominent in east side settlement work, where she is esteemed by her associates.

Mrs. Tucker was the widow of Thomas H. Edgar. After her husband's death she practiced dentistry in Brooklyn, having been graduated from the Philadelphia College of Dentistry. She supported her father and her three children, and rented the extra rooms in her house. Tucker became her lodger. She says he wore a full beard and said he was 35 years old, and that she did not think the apparently slight difference in their ages counted for much when they decided to marry. In reality, he was 24 years old, a year younger than her oldest son.

After the honeymoon, Mrs. Tucker says, she told her husband that he had better study dentistry. He attended a local college, and she heard his recitations every night for three years, until he got his degree. Then he got work as an assistant to another dentist at $30 a week.

It was planned, Mrs. Tucker says, that her husband should put his money in the bank until he had saved enough to start an office of his own at 8 West Fourteenth Street, while she still practiced under the name of Dr. Edgar in Brooklyn.

To help her husband, Mrs. Tucker declares, she sent many patients to him, saying that she was not well enough to attend to them, and that he was an excellent dentist. She says that he cleared $5,000 in the first year of his practice at his own office, and three years later they bought a house in Flatbush. In 1899 she decided to quit practice on account of defective eyesight. She says that she then discovered that instead of having a great deal of money in the bank, her husband had saved little, and had spent much of his earnings on a female assistant.

The couple moved from Flatbush to Harlem, where Mrs. Tucker says that Tucker complained that the conduct of his step-daughter, who was then a widow, did not please him. She thinks that he was seeking an excuse to leave her. In the meantime he had his beard removed, looked youthful, and "very different from what he would have looked like had he remained a machinist all his life."

Tucker left home for good on Feb. 7, 1901. He alleges that he was obliged to do so on account of his wife's habits. Mrs. Tucker has in her possession, however, a letter alleged to have been written by her husband, in which he blames himself for the trouble between them, begs forgiveness, and asks for his freedom. The letter says that he was tempted to commit suicide on account of the trouble he had caused his wife.

Mrs. Tucker declares that she did begin divorce proceedings, but abandoned them for the reason that she did not wish to oblige any other woman to suffer as she had. She then turned her attention to charitable work without remuneration, and became one of the most prominent workers in the University Settlement in Eldridge Street. She has letters of commendation from the Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright, her pastor, and James Hamilton, head of the Eldridge Street Settlement.

NEW IMMIGRATION RECORD.

11,383 New-Comers at Ellis Island Waiting to Land.

Eleven thousand three hundred and eighty-three persons, the high-water line of the Spring immigration from Europe to the United States, were on Ellis Island yesterday. They came by seven liners from everywhere, and the officials at Ellis Island, who for some time past have been working all hours to cope with the tremendous rush, had to redouble their efforts in order to prevent a congestion which would result in serious delays to the shipping of the port.

As Ellis Island can only accommodate about 5,000 immigrants, many of the immigrants had to stay on board the ships one night longer. The number arriving yesterday is greater than the previous record by more than a thousand passengers, who landed here last Spring.

The vessels and the number of immigrants they brought over were:

Citta di Milano, 1,298, Italians; Teutonic, 1,017, English and Irish; Rhein, 2,399, Germans, Swedes, and Hungarians; Graf Waldersee, 2,587, Germans, Swedes, and Hungarians; Cretic, 2,100, Irish, English, and Germans; Brooklyn, 750, Portuguese; Pisa, 1,282, Italians. Total, 11,383.

DURYEA SAYS HE CAN'T PAY.

He Wants Rate of His Alimony Reduced from $2,340 a Year.

Chester B. Duryea has begun proceedings to have the amount of alimony he pays Nina L. Duryea, who obtained a separation from him in 1904, reduced from $2,340 a year. He says that he is no longer able to pay that amount. Mrs. Duryea, who lives in Paris with her 4-year-old son, has not been served with a copy of the proceeding.

Duryea is the son of Gen. Hiram Duryea; Mrs. Duryea is the daughter of Franklin Waldo Smith of Boston.

The plaintiff was under contract with the United Starch Company as a chemist, at the time of the separation, not to start a starch business of his own in the United States until July 1, 1909. He owned some of the company's bonds, as well as stock in the Corn Products Company. He now says that he was obliged to part with some of the bonds to pay alimony and legal fees, and that the Corn Products Company stopped paying dividends a year gao.

Duryea is now employed by a starch company at Cardinal, Ontario.

PLANS FOR CONNECTING ROAD.

City Wishes to Incorporate Them in the Franchise Contract.

Demand has been made on the New York Connecting Railroad for the detailed plans for its construction, so that the city can include them in the franchise contract when it is signed by the city authorities and the officials of the railroad. This was the course pursued in the case of the New York Central terminal plans. Mayor McClellan believes that by following the same plan in the Connecting Railroad matter the city can control the building of every foot of the line.

President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen, who is Chairman of the Conference Committee of the Board of Estimate and the Rapid Transit Commission on the subject, wrote yesterday to Edward M. Shepard, as the legal representative of the road, as follows:

> I assume that your engineers have made a study and an estimate of the cost, as President Cassatt, in his letter to the Mayor, stated that the road of eleven miles will cost $11,000,000.
> Will you kindly furnish me with a statement from your engineers showing between what stations as marked upon the filed map and profile it is purposed to use steel viaducts or bridge, earth embankment, tunnel construction, or open cut work?

Mr. McGowan and his fellow-members of the Conference Committee have completed a personal inspection of half of the right of way for the proposed road. They will go over the rest of the route next Tuesday or Wednesday. In speaking of the inspection Mr. McGowan said:

> It is a stupendous piece of work that the railroad has planned, and no one can realize how great it is unless he goes over the ground as we did. Near Juniper Swamp the railroad company has purchased 400 acres of land for terminal and storage yards. The whole enterprise is so big that it has to be considered carefully. The privileges the company asks in its application for a franchise involve so much that it is difficult to fix a proper estimate on the price it should be asked to pay. The letter I received from Vice President Rea on the subject of traffic rates is pleasing to me because it shows some willingness on the part of the Pennsylvania Company to meet us in a fair compromise.

Some days ago, at the suggestion of the Mayor, Harry P. Nichols, Chief of the Bureau of Franchises, sent a letter to Mr. Shepard telling him of the intent and object of the various clauses which Mr. Nichols had placed in the original franchise for the company. Mr. Shepard, in reply, wrote to Mr. McGowan yesterday.

"If you will tell me what part of Mr. Nichols's suggestions you take seriously," he said, "we will take it up."

HURRY EAST SIDE TROLLEYS.

If It Will Take Two Years to Begin Please Start Soon, Says League.

Mrs. Florence Kelley, General Secretary of the National Consumers' League, has written to the State Railroad Commission, pointing out the need of prompt action in equipping with electricity the car lines operating on the east side of this city. Miss Kelley urges that action should be taken at once because General Manager Oren Root has estimated that it will take two years to complete the work after it is begun. Her letter in part says:

> The present insufficiency of the lower east side car service gretly increases the difficulty of getting to their work for many thousands of women and girls and puts a heavy premium upon crowding in such tenements, however undesirable, as may be within walking distance of places of employment in the business parts of the city.
>
> Having lived for five years in Henry Street, Manhattan, I speak from experience when I state that the cars on Madison, Houston, and Stanton, Spring and Delancey, Canal and Roosevelt Streets, are regularly inaccessible for working women and girls in rainy and snowy weather during the rush hours.
>
> It has been urged by the companies that the narrow streets make electric traction difficult, and the use of large cars impossible. To this we reply that the streets on both the east and west sides are not narrower than the streets in Philadelphia, where cars run up one street and down another. This method is applied satisfactorily in Essex and Chrystie Streets, and is capable of application on all the narrower streets in lower Manhattan.
>
> We ask that the State Railroad Commission require the companies to begin immediately the provision of electric traction for all lines on the east side, whether crosstown or north and south lines, and to push the work with all possible expedition.

CROWDS HONOR MEMORY OF FOUR BRAVE FIREMEN

Church Funerals for Men Killed at Factory Fire.

COMRADES ESCORT COFFINS

And Companies Line Up as the Bodies Pass Engine Houses—Fund for Capt. Walsh's Family.

Four fire fighters of New York were buried yesterday in Calvary Cemetery after funeral services held in two Roman Catholic churches. In the exhibition of popular respect for the men who had died at their duty thousands shared, as they would have done for military or naval heroes. Men who had never known the dead took off their hats as the hearses passed, while those who had known them related stories of the "boys."

One story told how Dennis J. Healy had carried through the flames a woman with her new-born babe, and how George B. Christian and Thomas F. Halpin, Jr., had risked their lives twice in saving children. There were many stories of Capt. John F. Walsh, who in his honorable career had offered himself as a sacrifice to the flames in the hope of rescue, coming out phoenixlike from the flames with helpless human burdens again and again until he met death with the "boys" in the big factory fire at Downing and Bedford Streets last Monday afternoon.

The funeral services over the bodies of the three young firemen were held at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, in Twenty-third Street, just west of Sixth Avenue. John F. Walsh's funeral took place in the Church of the Epiphany, Second Avenue and Twenty-second Street.

As the hearses passed fire engine houses on the way to and from the churches the companies were drawn up in line with the big horses, looking wonderingly upon the spectacle of a multitude not gathered to witness their speed and their eagerness for duty, while the firemen, with helmets held in their right hands over their hearts, were ready to respond to the next alarm, whatever it might mean for them.

The body of Fireman Halpin was the first to arrive at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul. It was accompanied by an escort from his company, Hook and Ladder No. 24. The body of Dennis J. Healy was accompanied by three men each from Battalions 11, 12, 14, and 15. The body of Fireman George B. Christian was accompanied by comrades representing the battalions in Richmond, Queens, Manhattan, and the Bronx. In addition there was an escort from the Eighth Regiment, N. Y. N. G., to which he belonged. His coffin was wrapped in the American flag.

Each body was met in turn by the officiating priests, and the choir sang the Miserere as the caskets were borne up the aisle to the chancel.

The solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by the Rev. Thomas McGovern, chaplain of the Fire Department in Brooklyn. The Rev. Emlo Smith, chaplain of the department in Manhattan, acted as deacon.

The brief address over the three bodies was made by the Rev. John P. Chidwick, chaplain of the Police Department and formerly of the battleship Maine.

At the conclusion of the services the three coffins were borne out to the hearses and taken to Calvary Cemetery.

The body of Capt. Walsh was borne from his home, at 309 West Twenty-third Street, on the shoulders of his comrades to the church, a block away. An escort of three companies from ten battalions followed the body to the church.

The solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Dennis J. McManus, the Rev. T. B. Phelan, deacon.

Capt. Walsh left a widow and five children, the eldest 12. A movement to raise a subscription for the support of his family has been started. None of the other victims of the fire was married.

CHARLES F. MURPHY NETTLED

Displeased by Democratic Club Dinner at Which Belmont Presided.

Charles F. Murphy is displeased with the action of the Democratic Club on Tuesday night in standing sponsor for the dinner at which August Belmont presided and at which De Lancey Nicoll, Vice Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, made his sensational attack on Hearst. Mr. Murphy has expressed his displeasure to the Governors of the club in no uncertain terms.

It became known yesterday through friends of the Tammany leader that when he received his invitation from the club's Dinner Committee, he turned the note over to Thomas F. Smith, Secretary of the organization, with word that it should be accepted. A few days later Mr. Murphy received notice that Mr. Belmont would preside. This, he told his friends, he did not know before his acceptance was sent. He was displeased, for he has not yet forgiven Mr. Belmont for certain incidents of the last National campaign, when Mr. Belmont was one of the leading figures on the Parker side and Mr. Murphy was opposing the nomination.

This notice was also turned over to Mr. Smith, who, under orders, wrote a curt note to the effect that Mr. Murphy would not attend the dinner. No reasons were given. Since the dinner and its attendant outbreak, Mr. Murphy has sent to the members of the Dinner Committee to ascertain whose plan it was to have Mr. Belmont preside.

Fully half of the committee have disclaimed having anything to do with the matter. The rest have let it be known that they took the action at the suggestion of Andrew Freedman and President Fox of the club. Mr. Murphy has let the members of the committee know exactly what he thinks of that arrangement. The Tammany leader went to his Summer home at Good Ground yesterday to get it in shape for the coming season.

LECTURE SYSTEM IMPROVED.

Speakers Hereafter to Co-operate with the Public Libraries.

The Board of Education has taken steps to bring the public libraries and free lecture bureaus in closer touch with each other. Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, the Superintendent of Lectures, is responsible for the idea, and it will be put into effect next Tuesday night at the public library on 135th Street, near Lenox Avenue, where Prof. Loiseaux of Columbia University will give the first in a series of four lectures on "France and Spain."

The educational value of both the lectures and the libraries will be appreciably increased, it is expected, by this plan. After the lecture is delivered the audience will have an opportunity to go to the book shelves and find reading dealing with the lecturer's subject.

At first only three libraries will be used for the lectures, but gradually the system will be extended until it embraces all parts of the city.

LOST BY BRIDGE DELAYS.

Contractor Ryan Sues for $462,691—Alton B. Parker, Referee.

Ex-Judge Alton B. Parker was appointed referee yesterday by Justice Giegerich of the Supreme Court in the suit of Patrick Ryan, surviving member of the firm of Shanley & Ryan, contractors, to recover $462,691.68 from the City of New York. The firm had the contract to build the anchorage of the Williamsburg Bridge.

The plaintiff alleges that the firm lost the amount sued for owing to delays arising from favoritism shown by city officials to the New Jersey Iron and Steel Company, R. H. Flynn, Colin & McLean, and the John A. Roebling's Sons' Company, with which one of Richard Croker's sons was connected. Ryan says that his firm was unable to complete its contract until other companies had finished the work on other parts of the structure.

It is asserted that all the firms mentioned had their time extended more than once, solely for their benefit. The plaintiff says that his firm's plant was left idle, and that he was obliged to rent storehouses in which to keep large quantities of material.

And Asks Jerome to Look Into the Vanishing of Divorce Witnesses.

The former Mrs. Brodie L. Duke, whose husband obtained a decree of divorce from her a few days ago on statutory grounds, had a long talk with Assistant District Attorney Corrigan yesterday, for the purpose of having the circumstances connected with the alleged disappearance of her witnesses looked into by the District Attorney.

Her contention is that her husband was party to a conspiracy to keep away two physicians who would have testified that she was in a sanitarium on the day when the actions alleged in Mr. Duke's complaint were said to have taken place.

INTENT WAS FELONIOUS, IS JEROME'S ARGUMENT

Perkins Case Within Statute, He Asserts in Court.

CONDEMNS CORPORATE GIFTS

Was Afraid Courts Would Not Agree with Him—Justice Greenbaum Thinks Papers Defective.

The hearing held by Justice Greenbaum in Part II. of the Supreme Court yesterday on the writ of habeas corpus granted to Former Vice President George W. Perkins of the New York Life Insurance Company after his arrest on a charge of larceny ended with an announcement by the court that decision would be reserved, as is usual in such cases. Former Judge William N. Cohen argued that Mr. Perkins might have made himself civilly liable in accepting reimbursement for the $48,500 which he paid to Cornelius N. Bliss in 1904 for the Republican campaign fund, but that his act could under no circumstances be held criminal.

The burden of Mr. Jerome's argument seemed to be that there was no doubt in his own mind as to the illegal and criminal character of corporate contributions to political parties, but that he, as a prosecuting attorney, had to consider the rulings of the courts in the past as well as his own interpretation of the statutes.

He spoke of campaign contributions by great trust concerns as "immoral in the highest degree," and he said that, if only the words of the statute defining larceny were considered, the facts stated in the papers accompanying the warrant for Perkins were fully covered by that statute. But the difficulty that had caused him to seek for a definite ruling from the court before proceeding, lay in the repeated decisions by the highest courts that larceny could not be proved until "felonious intent" was proven.

Felonious Intent Not Defined.

He pointed out that the criminal courts had refrained from formulating a general definition of "felonious intent," just as the courts of equity had failed to give such a definition of "fraud," leaving the presence of such intent to be determined by the jury in each particular case. And of that intent he said that "there is a subtle moral character to it—too evanescent for definition, but easily ascertainable in most cases."

Having referred to the use by Directors of company funds to advance political interests opposed to a large portion of the policy holders as "contrary to public policy, to public and private morality, and to common decency," Mr. Jerome added:

"The doing of these acts brings into the misappropriation already conceded, that subtle element required by our decisions and brings it within 'felonious intent.'"

Justice Greenbaum gave Mr. Jerome until Monday to file a brief on points raised by the court. From the questions put by Justice Greenbaum, both to Mr. Jerome and to the opposed counsel, it seemed as if he were inclined to regard the action against Perkins as invalid because of technical shortcomings in the papers on which the warrant was based. His point appeared to be that no explicit charge was contained in those papers, and that no individual or set of individuals had lodged information constituting a complaint, but from certain facts set forth in the affidavits the Magistrate had drawn the conclusion that a crime had been committed.

The Papers According to Practice.

The reply of Mr. Jerome was that the papers had been drawn in accordance with the practice prevailing in the courts for the last eighteen years, and that the character of the facts stated in the supporting papers sufficed amply to indicate the nature of the crime charged. He said also that the papers had been supplemented by oral information, and it was evident that he meant that he had personally informed the Magistrate that the facts set forth in the affidavits of Vice President Darwin P. Kingsley and Treasurer Edmund D. Randolph of the New York Life constituted a larceny and ground for the issue of a warrant.

But Justice Greenbaum refused to consider anything not appearing directly in the papers before him. He offered the District Attorney a chance to amend these papers, but Mr. Jerome refused to avail himself of the offer, saying that the case must stand on the papers as they were before the court.

The hearing was set for 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. An hour before the room was jammed to its utmost capacity, and when the parties directly concerned arrived a way had to be made for them by court attendants. Lewis L. Delafield and ex-Judge Cohen arrived first. With them were other members of the legal staff of the New York Life, including James T. McIntosh, counsel for the general solicitor.

Mr. Jerome Was Punctual.

Mr. Jerome arrived a few minutes ahead of the fixed time, accompanied only by Assistant District Attorney Kresel and a stenographer. Mr. Perkins plowed his way through the blocking crowd and took the seat reserved for him just as the hands of the clock pointed at 2:30. A couple of minutes later Justice Greenbaum ascended to the bench.

Mr. Delafield opened the proceedings by informing the court that he would file a demurrer against the warrant on the grounds that the alleged facts did not constitute a crime, and that the Magistrate had no right to issue the warrant. At the same time he gave notice to the filing of a verified traverse, asking that the two proceedings be merged into one.

Mr. Cohen spoke for more than an hour. He quoted freely from the authorities in an effort to prove that the part of the statute defining larceny by appropriation of funds held in trust could not be applicable, because Mr. Perkins could not be said to have appropriated

STORER SERIOUSLY ILL.

Many Diplomats Call—Mrs. Storer Denies Using President's Letter.

VIENNA, March 30.—Bellamy Storer, the retiring American Ambassador, is ill in bed, suffering from a renewed attack of Egyptian fever. His physicians have forbidden him to see any one.

In spite of Mr. Storer's illness, which is said to be serious, many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Storer assembled at the Ambassador's residence this afternoon and took tea with Mrs. Storer. Among them were the Papal Nuncio, Mgr. di Belmonte; the Duke de Bailen, the Spanish Ambassador, the Marquis de Rouvray, the French Ambassador; the Duke d'Avarna, the Italian Ambassador; the wife of Count von Wedel, the German Ambassador, and Prince Windisch-Graetz, whose son, Prince Otto, married the Archduchess Elizabeth Marie, granddaughter of Emperor Francis Joseph.

It is stated by persons on intimate terms with Mr. and Mrs. Storer that the latter intends to take up her husband's cause as her own. She is quoted as emphatically denying having used a private letter from President Roosevelt for the purpose of helping Archbishop Ireland. Mrs. Storer will not discuss the matter.

Since Mr. Storer's return to Vienna there has been practically a severance of diplomatic relations between the American Embassy and the Foreign Office, as now that Mr. Storer is in Vienna the Austro-Hungarian Government does not consider that Secretary Rives is Chargé d'Affaires.

Mr. Storer's letter of recall is expected next week, but unless the State Department at Washington authorizes Mr. Storer to present it personally its presentation must await the coming of Mr. Francis, Mr. Storer's successor.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Charles S. Francis, the new American Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, called at the State Department to-day and received his commission. He took the oath of office at his home in Troy, N. Y., as soon as the Senate ratified his appointment.

Mr. Francis will sail for Europe as soon as he has received his instructions. His departure will be hastened by the apparent disinclination of the Austrian Government to recognize the notice of Mr. Storer's resignation presented by Secretary Rives.

WON'T CRITICISE PRESIDENT.

Ex-Gov. Davis Refuses to Answer Question About Canal Affairs.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The course of President Roosevelt in dismissing the members of the Walker Canal Commission was inquired into by Senator Morgan to-day, when Gen. George W. Davis, ex-Governor of the canal zone and later a member of the Advisory Board of Engineers, was on the stand before the Senate Investigating Committee. Senator Hopkins objected on the ground that an officer of the army should not be put in the position of criticising his superior officer. Gen. Davis himself said he thought it would be highly improper for him to make such an answer.

Senator Morgan read the letter of the President date April 1, 1905, declaring that the practical results accomplished had not been satisfactory and that a change in the personnel of the commission was necessary. Gen. Davis had said that the work of the commission had been excellent and that, so far as he knew, there had been no delinquency on the part of any member of that commission. Senator Morgan asked whether any action by any Commissioner had retarded the work on the canal, when Senator Hopkins made his objection.

"I might say that my opinion would not be conclusive, and I would not presume to question the right of the President to take the course he did. I think such authority is necessary to the Chief Magistrate of the Nation," said Gen. Davis.

The contract plan for the building of the Isthmian Canal was strongly advocated by Gen. Davis. Half a dozen contractors in America and Europe would be bidders for the work, said Gen. Davis.

Senator Morgan replied that European contractors would not be desirable because of the criticism their employment would raise in this country.

Gen. Davis answered that, speaking generally, foreign contractors were better able to take over big works of this character than American contractors.

Concerning the military aspects, Gen. Davis recommended that the canal be strictly neutral.

HARVARD WINS DEBATE.

Advocates City Ownership for New York in Contest Lost by Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 30.—Harvard won to-night in the Yale-Harvard debate, making nine out of thirteen victories since the contest was established.

The question was, "Resolved, That it would be for the best interest of New York City to own its street railway system, including surface, elevated, and subways." Harvard claimed gross overcapitalization by private companies, bad service, corruption, unhealthy cars, and immoral overcrowding and that New York was in the grasp of a "gigantic monopoly." Municipal ownership was urged as the only reform.

Yale admitted some of the defects, but claimed that worse corruption would follow public ownership; that it would cost $500,000,000 to buy the properties and $20,000,000 loss each year to run them, and that proper regulation of private owners was the best way to meet the problem.

Col. N. G. Osborne of this city presided, and the Rev. J. M. Buckley, the Rev. Robert Stuart MacArthur, and Melville E. Stone, all of New York, were the judges. Yale was represented by E. H. Hart, '07, of Brooklyn; the Rev. J. N. Pierce, '06, T. S., of this city, and H. D. Smith, '08, T. S., of Beloit, Wis., Harvard's champions being A. H. Elder, '07; G. W. Hinkley, '06, L. S., and A. P. Matthew, '08, S. L. S.

TELLER STEALS $34,000 AFTER 33 YEARS' WORK

Turney Robs the National Bank of North America.

WON'T SAY WHERE CASH WENT

But Letters from Women Acquaintances Supply a Clue—Culprit Former Captain in the 22d.

For thirty-three years a trusted employe of the National Bank of North America, Joseph A. Turney, note teller, has confessed to the theft of $34,000, and is now locked up in the Tombs without bail. That his downfall was due to his fondness for expensive companionship was proved last night by the discovery in his locker in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory of more than a hundred letters from women acquaintances. Turney was Captain of Company F until he resigned last Monday night. He was never suspected of any wrongdoing, least of all by his wife and 18-year-old son, with whom he lived in Brooklyn.

Turney was bonded for $10,000, so that the total loss to the National Bank of North America is $24,000. He committed the thefts, undetected for a long time, through falsifying his accounts and covering up the shortages from day to day by further falsifications.

The arrival at the bank of a letter yesterday morning, after the teller was locked up, gave a hint to the bank officials of where the money had gone. The letter, addressed to Turney, was opened and found to contain a bill for gas furnished to a woman not Mrs. Turney. Before the bank officials saw this bill they thought the theft was due to speculation.

Last night a friend of Walter W. Lee, Vice President of the bank, suggested to him that the ex-Captain's locker in the armory might give a clue. So Mr. Lee applied to the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station for two men. With them he went to the armory, at Columbus Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street, and, with the permission of Col. Thurston, opened the locker.

Bundles of letters fell out. They were written on colored, scented paper, and many of them mentioned money.

Memoranda in the locker showed that the teller's juggling with checks had extended back over a period of ten years, 1896 being the earliest year mentioned. The memoranda gave the size of the checks, which ranged from $5,000 to $10,000.

When the teller was about to be taken from the Tombs Court to prison yesterday morning he kissed his wife, but did not say a word to her. Her eyes were red with weeping. Turney turned to his son and said: "Good-bye, Bob," and then walked out of the room with an officer.

At the National Bank of North America yesterday morning President Alfred H. Curtis gave out this statement:

> Joseph A. Turney, note teller of the National Bank of North America in New York, was discovered last evening to be short $34,000 in his accounts, and on being confronted with the evidence, confessed. He is bonded by a surety company. Turney is a Captain in the Twenty-second Regiment of New York, married, has one son, and lived in a modest manner in Brooklyn. A few weeks ago his department, under the usual examination by the United States Bank Examiners, was thoroughly gone over; also at the semi-annual examination in January by expert accountants in behalf of the bank.

Began as a Messenger.

In all the years Turney had been with the bank he had possessed the fullest confidence of both his employers and his associates. He began as a messenger, when he was seventeen years old, and was gradually promoted until he became a note teller at $2,300 a year eight years ago. It was said by President Curtis yesterday that Turney handled perhaps $600,000,000 every year. Nearly $2,000,000 passed through his hands Thursday, the day the shortage was discovered.

Just after luncheon time Thursday one of the men working near Turney went to President Curtis's desk. He was greatly excited. The Bank President looked up at him in surprise.

"What is it?" Mr. Curtis asked.

"There's something wrong, sir, I'm afraid," replied the employe. And then he told of having seen Turney put money in his pocket and act otherwise suspiciously. The President was on the alert immediately. The employe had not made known his suspicion till he was sure of his ground. As a specific instance of dishonesty he pointed out to President Curtis that one check of $3,570 had not been entered properly.

The President waited until half-past five o'clock to make his personal investigation. Then he walked over to Turney's desk and looked at his accounts. Instead of showing a shortage the ledger showed Turney $1,000 over—that is, he seemed to have $1,000 more than he should have. This alone was enough to arouse suspicion, and Turney was invited to step into the President's private room.

Turney Brought to Book.

President Curtis conducted the examination, while two Vice Presidents and the Cashier sat silent and looked on. The book containing Turney's entries was spread on the desk, and the items were taken up one by one. Turney was perfectly cool, and answered every question readily.

Besides handling notes, the note teller runs the account with out-of-town banks. Thousands of dollars in checks from these banks come to him, and he enters them as receipts. Most of them are checks on New York banks or trust companies, and are converted into cash immediately. By omitting to record the receipt of the checks, and by turning them in as cash, a teller might abstract cash in corresponding amounts and put it in his pocket, and detection for that day would be unlikely.

The next day the teller might enter a check received the day before, and then omit to record a later check. In this way he could conceal a shortage for some time, because the uncertainty of train schedules would furnish an excuse for the delayed arrival of checks from far-away Western and Southern States. It was by means of these out-of-town checks that Turney was enabled to make away with the cash.

First the bank President took up the item that the other employe had told

PEBBLES BOMBARD FLIER.

New York Central Express's Windows Broken by Stony Shower.

While running at a high rate of speed about two miles north of Poughkeepsie yesterday the Metropolitan Flier, one of the fastest trains on the New York Central, met with a peculiar accident. The mishap frightened the passengers and inflicted minor injuries on some of them.

The train, which is due to leave Albany at 2:10 P. M., was fifteen minutes late in getting away, and ran fast to make up time. The cars were crowded, among the passengers being members of the Legislature on the way to this city for the weekend.

Near Poughkeepsie there is a water trough in the middle of the track, from which trains fill their tanks as they run. This is an operation that always scatters water and pebbles on either side of the track.

Just at the point where the Metropolitan Flier began to take water it met a freight train running in the opposite direction on the outside track. Flying pebbles struck the sides of the freight cars and, rebounding, landed in a shower on the side of the flier's coaches.

Four windows were broken in the smoking car, and four or five in the next day coach. The passengers, bewildered as the windows were smashed and they themselves were showered with flying glass and pebbles, jumped from their seats in alarm. In the smoking car several card games were in progress. These were broken up, and cards and chips scattered on the floor, while the players ran for shelter.

The train ran through to this city without stop. It arrived on time, having covered the 69 miles from the point where the accident occurred in 77 minutes.

Among the passengers were Assemblyman Arthur C. Wade of Jamestown, N. Y., and Assemblymen Rock and Francis of this city and Thomas H. Reed, Secretary of the Anti-Saloon League.

WRIGHT NOW AMBASSADOR.

Ide Will Be Inaugurated as Governor General at Manila Monday.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Luke E. Wright became Ambassador of the United States to Japan to-day. The oath of office was taken by him at the State Department, and he will leave Washington to-night for Memphis, Tenn., to make preparations for sailing for Japan from Seattle on April 29. Mrs. Wright will accompany the new Ambassador to the Far East.

When Gen. Wright to-day received his commission as Ambassador to Japan, he ceased to be Governor General of the Philippines.

Henry C. Ide of the Philippine Commission, the present Acting Governor of the islands, will continue in that capacity until April 2, when he will be inaugurated as Governor General. He will continue in that office until Sept. 15, the date set for the inauguration of James F. Smith of the Philippine Commission as his successor.

Mr. Smith is at present on his way here from the islands. He will confer with the President and Secretary Taft before returning to the Philippines to take up his new duties.

JORDAN LEAVES ATLANTA.

Ex-Controller of the Equitable Goes to a Quieter Place.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, March 30.—After having been in Atlanta a week Thomas D. Jordan, ex-Controller of the Equitable Assurance Society, left the city this afternoon accompanied by Mrs. Jordan. Their departure apparently was hastened by the publication this morning of the news of their presence here.

The couple went to the railroad station in a closed carriage. Mrs. Jordan wore a heavy veil and Mr. Jordan seemed to be trying to avoid notice. He was recognized by an insurance man.

It can be said that the couple are not going to New York, and it is not likely that they will make that their ultimate destination for several months. It is declared to-night that they have gone to Washington, Ga., where they will stop with relatives.

"I have absolutely nothing to fear in the investigation," said Mr. Jordan to a friend, "but I do not care to return to New York just at present. My record with the company is absolutely clean. I have no intention of issuing any statement whatever."

JEROME CRINGED—TILLMAN.

Senator Thinks District Attorney Has Disgusted Decent Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Senator Tillman, after reading the interview with District Attorney Jerome in to-day's NEW YORK TIMES, said:

"I think there is little that Mr. Jerome can say that will help him much in the estimation of the public. He has sought to be Judge and jury in a criminal matter, and has cowered and cringed before the might of money. His conduct has been such as to make decent men everywhere, among whom I trust I may include myself, disgusted.

"We had a right to expect a different course from a man who was, we thought, a reformer. The matter shows that right now in this country of ours the judiciary and the law officers are on trial before the public."

BANK RECEIVER OUSTED.

Missouri Supreme Court Restores People's Bank to Its President.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 30.—The Missouri Supreme Court to-day decided that the St. Louis County Circuit Court acted without authority when it appointed a receiver for the $2,500,000 People's United States Bank of St. Louis, of which E. G. Lewis is President.

The decision sets aside the receivership of Fred Essen, who was appointed after the first receiver, Selden P. Spencer, had been removed. President Lewis filed suit in the St. Louis County Circuit Court to have the receivership set aside and Essen removed. The decision was against Lewis, who appealed to the Supreme Court, resulting in the receiver being ousted by to-day's decision.

COAL ROAD STOCK LISTS DEMANDED IN INQUIRY

Mine Ownership or Their Control Must Also Be Revealed.

BACKED BY SUPREME COURT

Commerce Commission, Strengthened by Recent Decisions, Begins a Sweeping Investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission has issued a most sweeping order under the authority of the resolution by Congress providing for an investigation of the coal roads and the coal merger. The order is addressed to the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Norfolk & Western, the West Virginia Central & Pittsburg, the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg, and the New York Central Railroad Companies.

No similar order has ever been issued by the commission. It goes directly to the data that have hitherto been regarded as privileged and safe from publicity. The commission is aiming to get information to explain the charge that the Pennsylvania and the New York Central, while they do not own a majority of the stock of the various subordinate roads, manage to get control of them at the annual meetings of the stockholders, and then operate the properties to their own advantage and to the danger and injury of the public.

The questions asked by the commission indicate a clear purpose to take advantage of the recent decisions of the Supreme Court in the Pulp Trust cases. The order directs the railroad companies named to give to the commission lists of all their stockholders with the amounts of stock they hold and their Post Office addresses. The names and locations of all coal mines along their lines, or along the lines of other roads in which these roads may be interested are called for, and the rating of these mines when cars are allotted for the business of each mine; the names of all stockholders who voted at the last annual meeting, and the names of those who remained away and gave proxies, are asked for. The dividends paid to the stockholders, and the Post Office addresses of stockholders who received dividends, are also called for. The commission wants maps of the railroads and of the coal territory that they are interested in.

This broad and direct inquiry is intended to furnish a basis for the investigation, which the commission purposes to make thorough and effective. The power to do just what is undertaken in this order has not existed before, and the commission will now put it to the test of actual application. Should the railroad refuse to answer or delay unnecessarily in complying with the demands of the commission, resort will be had to the Department of Justice to enforce the law.

BOTH WANT HONEST VOTE.

Republicans and Democrats Unite in Hartford to Enforce New Law.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 30.—A meeting of representative citizens for the purpose of preventing corruption at the city election next Tuesday was held in the City Hall to-day, in response to a joint call issued by the Chairmen of the two political parties. Among those at the meeting were Gov. Robert, Mayor Henney, William F. O'Neil, the Democratic Mayoralty nominee, Ministers, Judges, and laboring men of different nationalities.

All Connecticut is awaiting the outcome of the first practical test of the new Corrupt Practices act, passed by the last General Assembly, and the meeting appointed a committee of two to watch each polling booth and to insist upon purity of suffrage and implicit obedience to the new law, which carries severe penalties for violation. The movement is entirely nonpartisan.

LIQUOR TAX ON MEDICINES.

Connecticut Law Applies to Patent Drugs Containing Alcohol.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 30.—All department store owners and country storekeepers who have been handling patent medicines which contain a considerable percentage of alcohol will have a heavy license expense dating from April 1, as the result of the State laws and the recent ruling of the Internal Revenue Department.

A retail liquor dealer's license must be taken out by every one selling patent medicines containing a certain percentage of alcohol, this license costing $25. The County Commissioners of the State have decided that where a Government license is required, a State license must also be taken out, which will necessitate an increased expense of from $250 to $500 annually, according to the population of the town.

TROOPS PATROL WINNIPEG.

Strikers Unawed Even When Soldiers Load with Ball Cartridges.

WINNIPEG, March 30.—Troops were called out to-day to quell disorders attending a strike of street-car men. A detachment of Royal Canadian Mounted Rifles is patrolling Main Street.

A company of regulars, lined up at Higgins and Main Streets with fixed bayonets, did not awe the crowd, which attacked a car and attempted to pull off the crew. Mayor Sharpe then read the Riot act, and was greeted with hoots and jeers.

The soldiers then loaded with ball cartridges. The mob still failed to disperse, and a charge with fixed bayonets was ordered. This kept back the excited men.

Locomotive Plunges Into the Hudson.

CATSKILL, N. Y., March 30.—The thrilling sight of a locomotive dashing down a steep grade and plunging into the Hudson River was witnessed at a cement plant here to-day. The big engine was used for drawing cement from the plant to the river, and became unmanageable. The engineer and fireman jumped just as the engine went off the dock.

THREE BUILDINGS BURN.

Many Rescues in Third Avenue Fire Early This Morning.

A fire which started early this morning in the kitchen of the Imperial Restaurant, on the ground floor at 326 Third Avenue, spread, despite the efforts of the firemen, to the buildings at 324 and 328, and necessitated sending in a second alarm. The three buildings, at 324, 326, and 328, were completely destroyed, and the roof of the Bull's Head Tavern, at 320 to 322, was badly burned.

The families that lived above the stores were thrown into a panic by the fire. All escaped in safety, but the flames spread so rapidly that several of the occupants of the buildings had to be rescued by the firemen. As all of the buildings were old, and had no fire-escapes, the firemen rescued the tenants by running ladders to the windows of the apartments.

CHILDREN OFFER FIRST AID.

Schoolgirls Use Skirts to Make Bandages for Wounded Workingman.

When Ambulance Surgeon Baumgarten of the Norwegian Hospital reached Louis Polard yesterday at Thirty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue, South Brooklyn, he found his head swathed in bandages made from the skirts of school children.

Polard, an employe of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, had fallen from a pillar of the elevated structure at that corner and had fractured his skull. The street was crowded with school children on their way home for the recess hour at that time, and a number of the little girls tore their skirts into bandages to stop the flow of blood.

The injured man was taken to the hospital, where he died at 4 o'clock.

HADLEY ILL WITH PLEURISY.

Missouri Attorney General Caught Cold on His Recent Trip Here.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 30.—Attorney General Hadley is suffering from a severe attack of pleurisy. It is stated at his residence in Jefferson City that his illness is the result of a cold he caught while on his recent trip to New York and is not a nervous attack resulting from his months of steady and hard work in his fight on Standard Oil.

FAST TRAIN IN A DITCH.

23 Persons Injured in Wreck on New York, Chicago & St. Louis Road.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., March 30.—Twenty-three persons were injured, several of them dangerously, at South Whitely, Ind., to-day by the overturning of the smoking car, a day coach, and five sleeping cars of an east-bound train on the New York, Chicago, and St. Louis Railroad while the train was running forty-five miles an hour.

Among the injured was William Fish of New York, who had his back sprained. He was thrown into a ditch and nearly drowned. The others injured lived in the West. An unidentified woman had her skull crushed and may die. Miss Martha Zahn of Minnesota had her right arm amputated.

DEFIES MR. CARNEGIE.

Pittsburg Brewery Will Put "Tech" Beer on the Market.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 30.—"We will put 'Tech' beer on the market next Monday and the only way Andy Carnegie can stop it is to drink all we brew."

In these words the manager of a big Pittsburg brewing concern to-day replied to a protest on behalf of the ironmaster. The brewery in question stands near the Carnegie Technological Institution and its management to-day announced in all the Pittsburg newspapers that in a few days it would place "Tech" beer on the market.

When Director A. A. Hammerschlag of the Carnegie schools saw the advertisement he communicated with Mr. Carnegie by long-distance telephone. Mr. Carnegie expressed his displeasure. Then one of the Carnegie school trustees went to the brewery management. The reply quoted and a profane commitment of Mr. Carnegie to a hotter climate were all the satisfaction he got.

UNION POLICE IN CHICAGO.

Mayor Dunne Favors an Organization, but Police Chief Doesn't.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Mayor Dunne has thrown down the bars which have prevented organization of policemen into what amounts to a labor union.

He reiterated to-day statements he made last night in a campaign meeting and explained that he had no objection to the organization of any wage earners. Such a step by the blue coats would make it possible for them to affiliate with the Chicago Federation of Labor, which is the central body, composed of a majority of the unions.

Some persons who discussed the Mayor's stand put a political interpretation on it as he is in the midst of the municipal ownership campaign. Chief of Police Collins is not in accord with the Mayor. He declared that the Policemen's Benevolent Association was enough organization protection for his men.

TO RUN THROUGH AVALANCHES

Tunnels for Trains to be Dug on the Rio Grande Road.

DURANGO, Col., March 30.—The Denver & Rio Grande Railroad officials have decided they are unable to remove the huge avalanches which obstruct the track between here and Silverton, and have set a force of men to work to digging tunnels through all the larger slides. They expect the tunnels will last until late in the Summer.

During the past month more snow has fallen in the hills around this piece of track than has ever been known in the history of the country.

WRESTLING BOUT FATAL.

University of Pennsylvania Student Dies of Injuries.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—Alexander Kemp, a student at the University of Pennsylvania, died to-day in the university hospital as the result of injuries received during a wrestling bout.

Kemp was wrestling in the university gymnasium about two weeks ago with a much heavier opponent in order to reduce his weight so that he might compete in the intercollegiate championships. During a "head spin" the vertebra was fractured at the neck, and Kemp remained in a semi-conscious condition up to the time of his death.

MAY STILL HEAD OFF HARD COAL STRIKE

Operators to Confer with Miners Here on Tuesday.

PRICES WENT UP PROMPTLY

Anthracite Rates Raised 50 to 75 Cents a Ton—No Interference from Roosevelt Now.

Both the anthracite operators and the local coal dealers were vastly taken aback yesterday when they learned that President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers had ordered an anthracite strike to begin on Monday, pending the resumption of negotiations between the operators and the unions. It was expected that a strike would ultimately be declared, but it was not expected so soon. The operators declared that a majority of the anthracite miners were opposed to a strike.

Hope of reaching a settlement before the strike is in full swing has not been abandoned. The operators yesterday agreed to meet Mitchell's sub-committee here at a conference to be held next Tuesday morning.

Th local dealers lost no time in jumping the price of anthracite as soon as they learned of the strike order. In Manhattan the price of anthracite was raised from 50 cents to 70 cents a ton, according to the grade.

From Washington came the news yesterday that at a Cabinet meeting it was decided that no action should be taken at present by the President with regard to the strike, it being thought that no acute public necessity for any such action existed just now.

Surprise at Mitchell's Action.

Mitchell's action in taking the public into his confidence and giving out a statement in Indianapolis on Thursday night that all mining in the anthracite districts would be suspended on Monday, while he simply notified the operators that he was prepared to meet them here on Tuesday was considered remarkable. On behalf of the anthracite operators' committee of seven this statement was issued yesterday giving these telegraphic messages exchanged between Mitchell and President George F. Baer of the Philadelphia and Reading Company:

Mr. Baer received the following telegram at 11:30 o'clock:

Indianapolis, March 30, 1906.
George F. Baer, Philadelphia, Penn.:

If agreeable to you a meeting of the joint sub-committee will be held in New York at 10 o'clock Tuesday, April 3, for the purpose of further considering the wage scale in the anthracite field. JOHN MITCHELL.

Mr. Baer sent the following telegram to Mr. Mitchell later:

Philadelphia, March 30, 1906.
John Mitchell, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Is it true that, pending negotiations, you have, as stated in the newspapers, ordered your followers not to work in the anthracite mines after April first? GEO. F. BAER.

No further word was received until 4 o'clock, when the following telegram reached Mr. Baer:

Indianapolis, Ind., March 30, 1906.
George F. Baer, Philadelphia, Penn.:

Telegram received. Committee appointed Shamokin convention Dec. 14, representing mine workers in anthracite region, wired you last night proposing meeting of joint committees appointed on Feb. 15. Pending adjustment of differences instructed that, inasmuch as there will be no contract by agreement after April first between anthracite miners and operators, men necessary to run pumps and preserve property continue work. We are now waiting response to our suggestion for joint meeting on Tuesday. JOHN MITCHELL.

To this Mr. Baer addressed the following reply:

Philadelphia, March 30, 1906.
John Mitchell, Indianapolis:

Although your order to quit work pending negotiations is most extraordinary, the delay in meeting having been yours and not ours, nevertheless we will meet your conference as requested. GEO. F. BAER.

Says Operators Are Not to Blame.

E. B. Thomas, President of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, made the following statement on the existing situation:

"The operators are in no sense responsible for the cessation of work. We have been ready at any time since we made our reply to the miners' committee to meet with them and canvass the situation. Mr. Mitchell has been so busy, however, with the affairs of a rival industry that it has now come to pass that a sufficient length of time cannot elapse to enable us to complete negotiations with him before April 1. We are most graciously allowed, however, the privilege of operating our pumps, and to get men sufficient to prevent the absolute destruction of our property.

"Mr. Mitchell has by this act closed a large industry and opened the door to idleness and waste, through which their followers—lawlessness and disorder—will not be slow to enter."

According to the operators, the miners themselves are not in sympathy with the strike order and did not want a strike. The action of the officers of the union in ordering the strike was not entirely expected by the rank and file. President Truesdale of the Lackawanna said last evening:

"Ninety per cent. of the mine workers in our anthracite collieries are indifferent to the strike order or opposed to it. The Scranton miners were dumfounded on hearing that there is to be a strike, and were at first incredulous."

Mr. Truesdale said that the Lackawanna's mines would continue in operation on Monday, and as soon as possible the miners would be notified that they could continue working on the conditions existing under the Anthracite Strike Commission's award.

None of the other companies, it was also said, will try to break the strike at the start. The companies, it is generally understood, however, have no intention of raising prices of anthracite.

PRESIDENT WON'T ACT NOW.

This Decision Reached at Yesterday's Meeting of the Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The President and the Cabinet discussed the coal strike situation at the Cabinet meeting to-day and agreed in the conclusion that no action could be taken by the President at present. The telegrams of the operators and the miners were read and fully considered.

The President took the view that the operators have given no assurance that if a commission is appointed they will abide by any decision that might be reached by that body, and that there would be no permanent adjustment of the difficulty.

It was urged that for the present there was an abundant supply of coal for all industrial uses, and that no especial harm could result to such interests from a strike. For the householder, who ordinarily suffers most, there seems to be no acute necessity for protection just now, as warmer weather is at hand. The question of interference by the President in case of disorders was considered, and with the conclusion that at present there is no probability of any outbreak, and that so far as that question went it was not necessary to take account of it.

Should the operators and miners come to an agreement to abide by any decision that might be made by a commission, the President would act. It was agreed that action should be taken only upon some one of the following three grounds: First, in case public interests suffer from a coal famine; second, if general disorder occur in the mining region, and third, if the operators and miners should agree to be bound by a settlement of their differences by a commission. The opinion of the President and the members of the Cabinet was unanimous.

NO LONG BITUMINOUS STRIKE.

Will Be Brief in Western Pennsylvania, If It Comes at All.

PITTSBURG, March 30.—General sentiment in the Pittsburg district of the bituminous coal field to-night, based upon the news from Indianapolis, is that, while a strike is now inevitable, in Western Pennsylvania at least it will be short. By the adoption of the resolution permitting miners to sign the 1903 wage scale wherever it is offered by the operators, the way is opened for the operation of the Western Pennsylvania mines, 53 per cent. of which are controlled by the Pittsburg Coal Company.

Dispatches to-night from various points where there has been trouble announce the restoration of the 1903 scale, and the intention of striking miners to return to work Monday morning under that scale.

Francis L. Robbins, Chairman of the Executive Board of the Pittsburg Coal Company, has been foremost among the operators in the movement to restore the 1903 scale, and it is now practically assured that this company will operate its mines, strike or no strike.

It is expected, however, that a thirty-days suspension at least will be called in this district. This will be done in order that the large stocks of coal that industrial plants and railroads have been accumulating in anticipation of a general strike may be reduced and a reversion to normal conditions obtained.

The situation in other parts of the district from reports received to-day is quieter than it has been throughout the week. At Greensburg 8,000 miners to-day voted to continue work regardless of the action of the Indianapolis convention. The two companies there will pay the advance. At Irwin, where the situation has had a threatening aspect, the fear of a general strike is over.

Among the operators in the Johnstown district, which includes Cambria County and the Big Somerset Field, it is believed there is no danger of a strike.

MINERS' CONVENTION ENDS.

Votes for Work in Bituminous Fields Under the 1903 Scale.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 30.—Amelioration of the threatened strike of bituminous coal miners on April 1 was assured to-day by the United Mine Workers of America, who, before adjournment without day, authorized National and district officers to sign wage agreements with any coal operator who would agree to pay the scale of 1903, or its equivalent, for a period of two years. This is a wage advance of 5.55 per cent. in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Western Pennsylvania, and all other districts except the Southwest, composed of Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Arkansas, and the Indian Territory, where an advance of 3 cents a ton is demanded, as the 1903 scale is in force in that district.

As many operators have signified a willingness to pay the advance, the number of miners that intend to strike on April 1 will probably be ultimately reduced by many thousands. It is probable that most soft coal miners will cease work on April 1, although the cessation of labor will be temporary in those districts where the increased wages can be obtained.

About 500,000 miners from the anthracite and the bituminous fields will probably quit work Monday. They will remain on strike, it is said, until settlements have been signed by districts or with individual operators.

The National Executive Board will meet to-morrow morning to take up the details of managing the strike. The convention cost the miners' organization $105,000 for expenses of delegates. There is in the National district and local treasuries of the miners $2,500,000, of which $400,000 is in the National Treasury.

President Mitchell expects to leave here on Sunday for New York to meet the anthracite operators. President Mitchell had control of the convention throughout its sessions. He signified to-day that if the convention did not adopt the resolution permitting the miners to sign wherever the advance scale was paid he would resign. The vote was almost unanimous.

DEALERS RAISE THE PRICE.

Anthracite Goes Up from 50 to 75 Cents a Ton Here.

In view of the impending strike, the Coal Merchants' Association of New York advanced the price of domestic coal yesterday. A meeting to consider the matter was hastily called when the announcement of the strike appeared in the morning papers, and late yesterday afternoon the most prominent members of the retail dealers' association met at 639 Sixth Avenue. J. Samuel Smoot, Commissioner of the Coal Merchants' Association, presided. This official statement giving the advance in the various grades of coal was given out later:

> At a meeting of the Coal Merchants' Association of New York, held late this afternoon, it was decided to increase the price of domestic sizes of white ash anthracite coal 50 cents per ton and of red ash anthracite 75 cents per ton, making the prices respectively $7 and $7.75. The price for No. 2 nut or pea coal for family use was increased to $6 per ton.
>
> The price for the anthracite steam sizes and soft coal were made as follows:
>
> Pea coal, $5; buckwheat No. 1, $4.50; buckwheat No. 2, $4; soft coal, $5.
>
> The yard prices for white ash anthracite were made $6.50, and red ash anthracite, $7.25.
>
> The prices are to take effect this Saturday morning.

With the exception of those who bought above the Harlem River, most purchasers yesterday got their coal at the old figure. They were held in check, however, and were not allowed to purchase very large quantities.

Several retail dealers stated that their supply from the mines has not been heavy of late. Exactly how much anthracite there was in New York at the present time none of them would venture to say.

After the news of the strike order got about there was no coal yard in town that did not have teams standing before it ready to be loaded. The intending purchasers were willing to take all they could get. There were new customers at the yards as well—something that the coal men would not object to on ordinary occasions, but yesterday they did object to it.

After individual conferences over telephones most of the coal dealers in town decided that only their regular customers should be supplied. Even these could get only ten tons each.

At most of the yards, Harlem flat owners or agents bobbed up, who had suddenly discovered that they wanted more coal. According to the retail dealers the Harlem flat dwellers have had heat enough, and the flat owners can't buy their next Winter's supply of coal now.

So far as the arrangement of the local coal dealers with their customers is concerned, the strike could not come at a more propitious time. Their Winter agreements end on April 1.

POLICY HOLDERS GET POWER OF CONTROL

Provisions of the Insurance Bills as Drafted by Experts.

NO SPECIAL ACT FOR EQUITABLE

Political Contributions and Alliances Between Corporations and Subsidiary Concerns Prohibited.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 30.—Senator Armstrong, Assemblyman Rogers, and Charles E. Hughes completed to-day their work of getting the insurance bills, as amended by the joint committee of both branches of the Legislature and the investigating committee, in shape for the printer, so that they may be on the desks of the members of both houses on Monday night.

After the measures had been put in order with the aid of several clerks Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Rogers went away, leaving Mr. Hughes to clear up the last details. This he did in time to get a train at 7 o'clock for New York. Before he left he showed the bills to the newspaper correspondents, so that all their new provisions might be thoroughly understood.

Following is an authoritative exposition of the contents and effect of the bills:

Organization of life insurance corporations is left as it was in the proposed bill. A single amendment is made to cover the case of a mutual corporation. It provides that money may be borrowed to defray the expenses of organization and provide the sum required to be deposited with the Superintendent of Insurance under an agreement by which it shall be repayable with interest not exceeding 8 per cent. per annum when the company shall be able to repay it without impairing its full legal reserve, which must amount to at least $100,000.

The object is to clarify the existing situation. In order that there should be no question about that and to facilitate the organization of a mutual company, it provides that people can put up the money and retake it when the company can repay it under the condition as stated, and for their extra risk they may have this little additional interest.

The Election of Directors.

A scheme of control by the election of Directors by the policy holders is perfected by several amendments, which do not change the scheme in any of its essential features.

It is provided by the amendment that all policy holders who have existing rights to vote secured to them by existing contracts shall be qualified to vote.

It is provided that the lists shall contain the names of all policy holders entitled to vote.

It is provided that the inclusion of the name of any person in the list shall not prejudice the company in any suit upon a policy, the object of that being to give the greatest freedom to the company.

It is provided that the election shall in all cases be by ballot, the ballot to be identified by the signature of the policy holder and contain the number of at least one policy held by him. The companies ordinarily keep their lists by numbers, and an endeavor has been made to prevent anything in the nature of a crowding of the meeting or an obstruction of the election machinery by the requirement of written ballots. A man can arrive and deliver his ballot when he wants to.

It is provided that the Inspectors shall take all ballots delivered during the hours stated or which are received by mail, and the proxies, subject to verification, and on the closing of the polls they shall proceed to count the votes cast and verify them.

It is provided further that the ballots are to be preserved for four months by the insurance Inspectors, subject to the order of any court with jurisdiction.

In the case of stock companies that have already given or shall hereafter give the right to policy holders to vote for Directors, they are to furnish lists, and the election machinery is precisely the same. The provision of Section 52 of the act relating to the giving of a right to vote to the policy holders by stock corporations remains as it is.

It was deemed proper in dealing with the stock companies, whose rights have been established under the law, that the change in the voting should be such as they might be able to establish in the way suggested; that is, by vote of the Directors and a majority of the stock, public sentiment being relied upon to control the situation wherever the policy holder is admitted to vote.

The Case of the Equitable.

With regard to the Equitable situation it was not deemed advisable or necessary to have a special act. The Directors of the Equitable about a year ago adopted an amended charter, which provided for the election of twenty-eight out of fifty-two Directors by the policy holders. The amended charter was held up by an injunction in the Lord suit. The courts decided on both propositions in favor of Mr. Lord's contention that the Legislature had, in effect, no power to disturb the stock right of control and exclusive voting power without its consent, and also that the Legislature did not have the power to confer the right.

Under the terms of a trust deed by which Mr. Ryan turned over 502 shares of a majority of the stock and Mr. Cleveland, Mr. O'Brien, and Mr. Westinghouse came in, it was provided that the Trustees should be authorized to vote that stock in favor of carrying out the policy of mutualization, with the right to the policy holders to vote for twenty-eight Directors. Mr. Cleveland in a letter to the committee adverted to the fact that the Trustees felt bound to carry out mutualization as far as possible. Mr. Ryan on the stand testified distinctly and positively that he would favor any proceedings for carrying out that plan of mutualization.

The result is that the legal holders of the majority of the stock in the Equitable, the Trustees, and the beneficiary owner, Mr. Ryan, are committed in the most solemn and positive manner to the plan of giving the policy holders the right to elect a majority of the Directors.

If the plans miscarried in obtaining for the Equitable policy holders their promised right, the Legislature sits next January, and in the face of the reversal of the declared policy of the Equitable, legislation in the interest of mutualization would be easily effected.

As to Retirement of Stock.

In distinguishing between the right to vote and the right to own stock, the courts will probably hold that the right of the stockholder is not necessarily a proprietary right which the court can interefere with by giving the policy holder the right to vote in the corporation. The ownership of stock is a proprietary right and cannot be taken away without due process of law. It is not a question whether the stock of a stock corporation can be retired, but if it can be done without liquidation.

The Legislature can liquidate any corporation. It can repeal the charter and wind it up, and that retires everybody connected with it. The only ground on which a stock retirement can be upheld as legal is that it is a quasi-liquidation that the Legislature may provide for the termination of a corporation, as, for instance, a stock company, and the creation as a new mutual company by a re-incorporation, and, as incident to that, the wiping out of the stock without a technical liquidation. That theory may be challenged, but it is the theory on which the section is put in, and the only one upon which there can be any stock retirement.

In order to get the matter on a perfectly fair basis it was thought the best plan was to give the vote on Directors, the vote of the stockholders, the approval of the Superintendent of Insurance, and the approval of the policy holders.

Assuming that the stock side is properly taken care of, according to its just rights, the policy holder's side must be considered. A meeting must be called under the new plan at which the policy holders under any proxy, in person or by mail, can vote. A notice must be sent to every policy holder stating the plan of the retirement, and there must be a majority vote in favor of that plan.

Anybody that thinks Mr. Ryan will ever see $2,500,000 under that is mistaken. There is a reasonable conclusion that the stock has no interest in any of the accumulations of the Equitable. It is simply the $100,000 with interest on a seven per cent. basis. This was the idea in preparing the law in 1895 when the words were used "the amount which should be fairly determined to be the value of the stock," but to have no question an amendment was made to section 95 as follows:

"The propriety of said retirement and of the proceedings in connection therewith and the determination by said plan of the amount to be paid as the fair present value of the stock shall be subject to review at the instance of any party in interest including a stockholder or a policyholder, by the Supreme Court or any other court of competent jurisdiction."

That leaves it clearly that a stockholder or a policy holder can challenge anything done under it, so it is clear no policy holder will be dealt unjustly with.

Investments and Syndicates.

There have been two changes in the section regarding investment. The prohibition against continued ownership of stock in any company is retained. The purpose of the committee is as it was in that respect. The alliances between insurance corporations and subsidiary institutions are brought to an end.

One change carried the prohibition not only to stock and collateral trust bonds, but also to unsecured bonds. It was pointed out that a collateral trust bond was objectionable under the laws, but a bond not secured could be used as an investment. That looked to be absurd, but the real object was to prevent the investment in stocks, but on reflection it was thought that prohibition should extend to unsecured obligations as well as collateral trust bonds. That is one change.

The other is that there has been a great deal of insistence that the disposition of these prohibited securities in five years will tend to a loss to policy holders by a sacrifice of securities. The last thing the committee desired to do was to prejudice in any way the interests in securities of the policy holder.

With regard to stocks, they believe that whatever loss there may be can well be sustained in order to put the insurance business where it belongs—on its own footing. But there did not seem to be any reason to extend the possibility of that loss to the case of collateral trust funds now held. So that while the prohibition in future investment against collateral trust bonds and unsecured debentures is retained, under the proposed amendments the companies can hold those they now hold. That does not injure anybody. Prohibition is of the future.

There is a slight change in the law in regard to real property. Instead of attempting to regulate the companies with regard to holding real property, whether foreign or domestic, limitation on acquiring real property with the consent of the Superintendent and also with regard to the disposition of real property by exchanges is now restricted to domestic companies, or in the case of foreign companies to real properties situate in this State.

Limitation of New Business.

Limitation of new business stands as it was, with the exception that it is restricted to domestic companies. As to the big three coming within the $150,000,000 limitation those were domestic, any way, and as to the rest it seemed advisable under this policy:

Let the State of New York make the New York companies the best in the world; let the New York legislation be of such a character that it will be attractive to the Legislatures of other States. There is a tendency even now to adopt the reforms suggested. By managing foreign companies too much in these matters it tends to retard that movement, and to invoke a feeling of State pride, which would be lamentable, so where it was possible to make limitations apply to domestic companies it has been done.

The clause in regard to political contributions remains the same, except that it is punished by fine and imprisonment. In lobbying the scheme also is the same. The punishment is defined.

There was a Section No. 97 in the original bill. It provided for a uniform loading of expenses on the premiums of endowment policies. It was believed by the committee that that was an important measure from a scientific standpoint. Under the previous plan an extra charge was made to a man with an endowment policy because the agent received more to obtain the policy, also because the company took charge of his money, and he had to pay simply because the company was saving his money for him. That has been eliminated. Section 97, as to loadings, has been withdrawn.

Section 98, as to the limitation of business, has met with a very important line of objection on the ground that the expenses were not defined. It said: "Every expense attributable to new business." An effort has been made to define it. It was also objected to because it left a too small margin for expenses. The committee has been in consultation with the sub-committee of actuaries and several other noted actuaries, men representing companies economically administered, and they have been over the ground very carefully in the desire to have a real and just limit. The committee now thinks it is about right, and the criticism of this measure will not proceed from those who desire real reform in these companies.

Payment of Commissions.

It is provided that four things shall go into the expense column of the first year: Commissions on the first year's business, compensation not paid on commission exclusively, like the salary of a local representative of the branch office man, the fees for medical examination and inspection, and advances to agents. On the other hand the margins are the same as provided originally in the bill, and are figured at 50 to 55 per cent. of the premium, taking the ordinary life policy as the basis.

In the discussions which have proceeded in regard to this it is evident that a fair commission can be paid on first year's business under this scheme. The renewals were objected to as too short a period. Originally there were four renewals of 7½ per cent. There are two ways of doing this business. The first is to get all of the expenses in the first year and pay what is known as a brokerage commission. Most of the insurance men think that means rebating on a large scale. The other way is to pay a smaller commission the first year and then renewal commissions.

In fixing renewal commissions the idea has been to give something that affords a limit. The amendment gives nine renewals at 7½ per cent., with the provision that the renewals can be commuted in three or more years.

There has been a liberalizing by giving the companies a chance to calculate on the minimum legal standard so that if they go on the higher standard they can have the advantage of the higher loading. The whole thing gives an elastic plan.

Economically managed companies can pay as much as they do now under this new bill. There must be some retrenchment where there has been mismanagement. Actuaries state that from 40 to 50 per cent. can be paid the first year under ordinary life insurance policies under this bill. Then there can be nine renewals of 7½ per cent., or a commutation of that.

The endowment figures on less percentage, because there is more money, but the premium is higher and the commission may be at a less per cent.

In the matter of renewals the New York Life tries to give all its payments in two or three years, while others continue them for ten or fifteen years. The economically managed company can get along well under this law, the same as before.

The men in the field will not suffer much under this measure, which is not as drastic as the one originally proposed. It enforces retrenchment where there has been mismanagement, and yet it provides sufficient for an economically managed company. If the company finds it cannot give the agents proper commissions it will have to cut expenses by retrenchment at the home office.

Valuation of Policies.

The valuation of policies remains the same, except for a clerical change that the company may now value the policies higher than the law requires, and that is the only change that is made.

The section in regard to rebates remains unchanged.

The question of surrender values is an actuarial matter. There is a surrender charge of one-fifth, or $25 a thousand dollars.

The committee adheres to the policy that there shall be only annual dividends on policies, and companies doing business in the State will in future only write annual dividend policies.

In regard to the distribution of surplus, the changes are all made to perfect the scheme and to avoid any question of an actuarial nature. But there are no deferred dividend policies, they are annual dividends with annual distribution, and the policy holder can take it in cash or have it accumulate and held by the company for him whenever he wants to get it.

Deferred dividends are alluded to in this sense only, that after being declared the assured can leave them with the company. That puts the company to the task of making not only a bookkeeping showing at the end of the year, but putting it at the disposal of the policy holder. The purpose is that foreign companies cannot write deferred dividend policies in this State.

The standard forms of policies are retained and remain substantially as they were. There have been a few changes made to avoid questions of an actuarial nature, and the only important change is that they apply to domestic companies. The plan is to have a standard form of policy and let it go forth on its merits; and it is believed the New York standard form will prove to be the standard in insurance.

The provision requiring the giving of information by reports remains the same except for one addition to the effect that the companies must state the salaries paid to salaried representatives.

There was much talk of fixing a definite sum, $75,000,000, as a contingency reserve, and after that 5 per cent. The sliding scale under 5 per cent. was deemed to be just because the argument that there shall be the same contingency reserve for every dollar or thousand dollars of assets is a good argument in dealing with a large company, but not in dealing with a small one.

In order that it could not be said that anything that was done in this legislation tended to the insecurity of the policy holders, an additional margin was provided—that in any year the Superintendent of Insurance might provide an additional contingency reserve for varying reasons, such as a panic or cholera, or any condition that requires an extra amount of risk. A company can be allowed to go to this wider margin, and that is, above the 5 per cent. This the committee believed to be a liberal provision.

The bills were reported out of the committee in the Assembly and Senate to-day, and Assemblyman Cox of Erie, who is a member of the investigating committee, gave notice that he would not be bound by the report and reserved the right to make future amendments. Mr. Cox said that his principal objection was based on the fact that the report allowed foreign insurance companies to write deferred dividend policies in the State, while New York companies were prohibited from so doing.

In an interview Mr. Hughes to-day explained that Mr. Cox was acting under a misapprehension. The fact was, he said, that foreign companies could not write deferred business in this State any more than domestic companies could, but that the Legislature did not think that it could exercise its powers to the extent of prohibiting foreign companies from writing deferred-dividend policies in other States.

If the insurance legislation goes through with as little opposition as some expect adjournment of the Legislature may be expected by the last week of April.

HALDEMAN PLAN ON THE WAY.

Being Brought Here by A. D. Juilliard —British Criticise Peabody.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, Saturday, March 31.—In a circular to the British policy holders of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York D. C. Haldeman advises them that his propositions for safeguarding their interests will be presented at the Mutual's home office within a few days by Augustus D. Juilliard, who is now en route to New York from London. Mr. Haldeman asks the policy holders to leave matters as they are until Mr. Juilliard communicates with him the results of these representations.

Precisely what Mr. Haldeman wishes to do he declines to make public at this time, but it is understood that he thinks the British policy holders should have an organization of their own and that their share of the company's reserve should be turned over to them.

MODIFIED BILLS APPROVED.

Insurance Men Likely to Accept Them —Peabody to Save $1,500,000.

From the statements of high officials of life insurance companies here yesterday it was gathered that there would be little opposition by the companies to the bills proposed by the Armstrong Investigating Committee in their present state.

Emery McClintock, Vice President and Actuary of the Mutual Life, who at the hearing on the insurance features of the Armstrong Committee's bills established the point that the limitation originally set for the expenses of first-year's business was based on a misapprehension of the facts and was impossible of operation, was especially pleased at the modification the Armstrong Committee made in this particular.

President George E. Ide of the Home Life was the man who induced the Armstrong Committee to modify its restriction of the contingency reserve.

Mr. Ide said yesterday:

"I regard the modifications as fairly satisfactory. The committee has met our demands in the case of Section 98 of the new insurance law, and the elimination of the proposed Section 97, providing that the loading on all policies must not exceed the loading on an ordinary whole life policy for the same age and amount.

President Peabody of the Mutual Life announced yesterday that the economies he had put into operation would save $1,500,000 a year for the company, and that he had not finished. Mr. Peabody said that $50,000 a year was being saved over the old régime in the operation of the company's home office building, and $50,000 more in increased rents and through the rental of space which the Mutual Life had heretofore occupied unnecessarily.

In salaries alone $450,000 to $500,000 would be the annual saving, according to Mr. Peabody, and another $200,000 would be saved a year in the advertising account, while $400,000 a year would represent the savings through cutting off various "yellow dog" expenses. In addition, Mr. Peabody declared there were enormous savings being put into effect in the printing and other accounts, which could not be estimated at this time in detail.

Mr. Peabody was tolerably well pleased with the changes made in the Armstrong Committee's bills.

"We got about everything we asked for," was his comment.

One thing that the Mutual Life asked for and did not get was permission to retain its stocks, and in this it was joined by President Morton of the Equitable, who devoted most of his long letter to the committee to this and kindred subjects.

SEABURY REPLIES TO JEROME.

Says District Attorney Tried to Obstruct in Street Railway Case.

Judge Seabury of the City Court replied yesterday afternoon to that part of the interview with District Attorney Jerome, published in THE TIMES of yesterday, which referred to Judge Seabury's investigation of the Metropolitan Street Railway jury cases. Mr. Jerome said in the interview that he had investigated the matter long before Judge Seabury ever heard of the cases, and added that he had told the Judge of his willingness to cooperate with him in a further investigation, and that counsel for the railway company had made the same offer.

Mr. Jerome said further that Judge Seabury, after having been informed that vouchers of the company had been destroyed at the end of each year, persisted in asking that the vouchers be produced. The District Attorney then declared that "there was no longer a forum in which any self-respecting lawyer could consent to remain unless he was compelled to."

Judge Seabury's reply is in part as follows:

"The District Attorney's attack upon me in THE TIMES of to-day seems to me to make it proper for me to state the true facts in reference to the extraordinary conduct of the District Attorney.

"During the whole time that the District Attorney participated in the hearing of the McCabe case he conducted himself as if he were the leading counsel for the defense. He began by attempting to discredit the testimony of the complainant, and when it became evident to him that he would not be permitted to further obstruct the hearing, he withdrew from the case. I regret very much that he ever came into it."

It is the very simplicity and honesty of sticking to old pot-still method and first principles that have placed John Jameson Three Star Whiskey beyond competition.

that which had been handed over to him by the President, Treasurer, and Assistant Treasurer of the company, and which was nothing but his own.

Not Trying to Shift Blame.

"In making those payments, (to Cornelius N. Bliss,") Mr. Cohen said, "Mr. Perkins had no intention of wrongdoing, and he believed fully that he was acting for the best interest of the company. At his request I wish to state further: In saying that he acted throughout under the direction of Mr. McCall he has not the slightest idea of attributing to Mr. McCall any but honest motives and a desire to protect the interests of the policy holders."

"Do you mean to say," the court inquired not long afterward, "that if the President of a company transfers money to the Vice President to which the latter is not entitled the man who received the money can claim freedom from guilt because he did not appropriate the money himself?"

And at another juncture Justice Greenbaum interrupted counsel to ask:

"What is the charge, anyhow?"

"Larceny," explained Mr. Cohen.

"By whom from whom?" demanded the court.

Mr. Cohen began to read from the papers accompanying the warrant.

"From whom, I wish to know?" the court broke in. "From John Smith?"

"No, from the New York Life," answered Mr. Cohen.

"Where does that appear on the returns?" demanded Justice Greenbaum. He let the point drop there, however, to return to it while Mr. Jerome was making his argument.

Mr. Cohen compared the payment of contributions to the Republican campaign fund to the gifts sent by Mr. McCall out of the company's funds to the sufferers from the Johnstown flood and to the yellow fever victims at New Orleans, asking if those acts could be regarded as criminal, although, under the strict interpretation of the law they were illegal, in the sense of being unauthorized.

He added that if the funds, instead of being spent to protect the policy holders, had been used to obtain corrupt legislation the act of Mr. Perkins would have been criminal beyond a doubt.

Mr. Jerome was on his feet the moment Mr. Cohen had finished. He spoke more rapidly than usual and in a manner indicative of nervous tension. Here are a few of the more important passages of his address:

MR. JEROME'S REMARKS.

"In all our statutory law there is more in the law than in the statute alone. It is such familiar doctrine that on the top of the words of the statute is the rule that there must be felonious intent that it is not necessary to discuss it.

"There is no question or doubt or dispute between the learned counsel and myself as to what these papers show—an intent. Thus it becomes purely a question of law; I contending that the intent which they show under our decisions and the statute is a felonious and criminal intent; they contending that this intent is not such.

"The relator himself sets forth in his statement contained in this return that he does not dispute his civil liability for it. There is practically an admission, therefore, that he was converting and misappropriating the money of this corporation. And if a man who converts and misappropriates the money of another does so with a wicked intent, which the law describes as felonious, then it is larceny.

"Judge Cohen has spoken about contributing to charity, to hospitals, to war. This would be ultra vires, I have no doubt. Stockholders could no doubt recover. But I ask your Honor whether there is any similiarity between such cases and this one?

"The theory of our institutions is that, within the reasonable and proper limits established by our law, the choosing of the electorate shall be free. Can it be said to be consistent with our public policies that large sums of money should be given up by corporate interests to affect the decisions at the polls? Your Honor and I may be of opposite political faiths; we may be policy holders in the same insurance company. Shall the Directors or a single officer of that company determine on the use of our money to advance the political interests of a faith opposed to us?

"Judge Cohen says it is not 'prohibited evil,' and not even 'evil in itself'; but I say that it is evil in itself, whether it be prohibited evil or not.

"I say this is contrary to public policy. I say this is contrary to public morality and private morality, and to common, everyday decency. And I say that the doing of those acts brings into the misappropriation already conceded that subtle element required by our decisions, and that it brings it within felonious intent, just as little circumstances oftentimes bring within the range of the court of equity cases in regard to fraud."

Justice Greenbaum asked if the District Attorney considered all political contributions illegal. And Mr. Jerome replied:

Against Public Morals and Policy.

"I hold that it is against the public morals and the public policy to contribute to a campaign fund the moneys of the policy holders of insurance companies."

When asked by the court if he limited his contention to insurance companies, he answered that he mentioned that class of corporation because they were involved in the case under argument and added:

"I consider it immoral in the highest degree for the officers of a great trust company or any such corporation to divert the funds of the corporation for political purposes without the consent of every party interested."

"You are asserting that any such act would constitute larceny?" asked the court again.

"I am asserting that here," rejoined Mr. Jerome. "If this act is not immoral we cannot spell a crime out of it. But if I am correct in the proposition I am urging upon you—that it is an immoral act because against public policy, and at the same time an illegal act because one upon which an action for recovery could be based—then it is that subtle thing meant by felonious intent. It has every other attribute—it is a conversion of the money of another and it fulfills every word of the statute—and if it were not for the decisions that there must be a felonious intent, there would be no doubt about it."

In answer to a question by the court whether there were any authorities for holding an act like the one laid against Mr. Perkins a larceny, Mr. Jerome said:

"No, and so far as I can see your Honor will have to decide on this matter with very little help from the authorities."

Mr. Delafield spoke briefly before the proceedings concluded for the day, contending that if political contributions by corporations might be judged a corruption of the electorate, the same might be held of such contributions by individuals.

ORDERS SPECIAL GRAND JURY.

Justice Dowling Grants Application of District Attorney Jerome.

Justice Dowling, who is presiding in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, granted yesterday the application of District Attorney Jerome for a Special Grand Jury to consider insurance matters alone. It will not be convoked until May 1, and will be in charge of Justice Scott, who is to preside over the May term of the court.

In granting the order asked by Mr. Jerome, Justice Dowling said that he did so after having conferred with Justices O'Gorman and Scott, as well as with Presiding Justice O'Brien of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

"I find," he said, "that there is no way of getting a special Grand Jury more expeditiously than in the way suggested by you. Your ground in asking for it is that the dispatch of public business demands it. As you are in a position to know all the facts and to assume the responsibility, I grant the order."

It was said yesterday by lawyers familiar with criminal procedure and court etiquette that this will prevent Recorder Goff, who is to preside in Part I. of General Sessions during April, and will have charge of the regular Grand Jury, from taking up insurance matters, if such was ever his intention.

The March Grand Jury was discharged by Judge O'Sullivan yesterday under unusual circumstances. As a general thing, when such a body has been discharged the court has thanked it for its work. All Judge O'Sullivan said when Foreman Edward Van Volkenburgh handed him a bunch of indictments and reported that the jury had finished, was:

"Gentlemen, you are discharged for the term."

He spoke the words curtly. As soon as he had uttered them Judge O'Sullivan sat down and began to write without paying any further attention to the jurymen.

This Grand Jury has been an unusually hard-working body. It has disposed of 455 cases in all and found 357 indictments.

It was learned yesterday that District Attorney Jerome suggested to Foreman Van Volkenburgh, as well as to Judge O'Sullivan, that the term of the jury be extended into April if they thought that any public matter required such an arrangement. Neither the Grand Jury nor the Judge adopted the suggestion.

The April Grand Jury will be sworn in by Recorder Goff on Monday.

ATTACKS ON CAPITAL A CRAZE, SAYS BLACK

Lawmakers in Confiscation Frenzy, He Tells Governor.

NO PROFIT IN 80-CENT GAS

He Says the Law Will Be Tested in the Courts—Governor Will Sign the Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 30.—Ex-Gov. Black protested to-day at the public clamor against corporations. At a hearing before Gov. Higgins on the Eighty-Cent Gas bill for the greater portion of New York City, at which he appeared on behalf of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company, he declared: "The only way, in these times, to prove that one is Simon-Pure and God's noblest work, is not to have a dollar. This idea has gone almost wild in this country to-day."

The ex-Governor said legislators were always eager to legislate against the investments of "somebody else," and in the case of the New York legislator it had got to the point where frenzy was about to confiscate the property of the corporation he represented.

The Brooklyn Company was also represented by W. N. Dyckman, Charles F. Mathewson represented the Consolidated Gas Company. Those favoring the bill were Senator Alfred R. Page and W. A. Defort, representing the Independence League. The opposition was given nearly two hours.

"I am opposed to the signing of this bill," began ex-Gov. Black, "on the ground that it will perpetrate an injustice so great and so remarkable as to be practically a confiscation of property.

"What has been done? There is the Gas Commission, the life of which has not yet been a single year. It has ample power to examine conditions. The Legislature has taken from the commission an uncompleted duty, but in so doing has jumped headlong to a conclusion.

"Next and worse—the price fixed is not only too low, but so low as to be below a living price, to leave a margin so narrow—if there be any margin at all—as to make it impossible to pay a single cent or farthing of dividend. When the gas business has become profitable is it the duty or the right of the Legislature to specify what it shall earn? Of course this question will have to be presented before the judiciary.

"I know this bill has gone far, but it ought to have been stopped before it reached here."

The Governor did not indicate what his action would be, but he has announced himself in favor of the bill and will sign it.

BELMONT BILL ADVANCED.

Legislature May Enact Law for Publicity in Campaign Expenses.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 30.—The Senate Judiciary Committee to-day made it certain that some legislation for publicity in campaign expenditures by the political parties will be passed this session.

Following the action of the Assembly committee, which last week reported out a publicity measure, based on Perry Belmont's bill, the Senate committee to-day reported out a committee publicity bill which includes the main features of the Belmont bill.

It is the intention of both Senate and Assembly Judiciary Committees to put on the calendars of both of the houses a committee publicity bill that combines the features of Belmont and other measures that have been introduced in both branches of the Legislature this year. Both bills are known to be satisfactory to the National and State publicity organizations, of which Mr. Belmont is the head.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE HERE.

Disputed Elections Cases Before Them —Ballots Not Yet Produced.

Chairman William J. Grattan and other members of the Assembly Committee on Privileges and Elections began consideration at the Cadillac Hotel yesterday of the contested election case of Thaddeus B. Hyatt, Municipal Ownership candidate, against Michael J. Grady, Assemblyman from the Seventh District, Kings County.

The Assembly passed a resolution on Thursday authorizing the Board of Elections of New York to produce the ballot box for the Fifty-fifth Election District of the Seventh Assembly District, without authority from the Supreme Court, and President Voorhis of the board was called upon yesterday to appear with the ballots. Mr. Voorhis, however, said that he had been unable to get into communication with some of the associate members of the board, and for that reason was obliged to delay the proceedings. He further requested that the board be allowed to apply to the Supreme Court for authority before producing the ballots.

The committee held an executive session, and then announced that it would give out a statement on the subject this morning.

W. L. Rathborne appeared for Joseph B. Trout, Municipal Ownership candidate, against Assemblyman John T. Hackett of the Thirteenth District. After examining several witnesses, the committee continued the case until to-day.

New City Hospital Bill Passed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 30.—Assemblyman Hackett's bill to establish a new city hospital, to be under the control of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, between Twentieth and Seventieth Streets, on the upper west side, was passed in the Assembly to-day.

Hospital Authorities Cleared.

Coroner Acritelli held an inquest yesterday into the death of Walter Crocker of 263 West Forty-seventh Street. Crocker fell from a Broadway car on March 23, and was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital. After having his injuries dressed there he was sent to Bellevue Hospital. There was a suggestion that death might have been hastened by the transfer, but the jury failed so to find.

TELLER STEALS $34,000 AFTER 33 YEARS OF WORK

him about. When Turney was asked about the check for $3,570 he said:

"That was entered O. K."

Check Entered on Wrong Date.

This proved to be true. The check had been entered on the wrong date, but that was not a serious mistake. But President Curtis was not satisfied with that; he had seen other things which aroused his suspicion. Down the page he went, pointing to every item and cross-examining the teller about it. Turney seemed to be able to explain every one. This kept up for three hours. Finally the President put his finger on an item and asked Turney to explain it.

"Why, you don't think I'm short, do you, Mr. Curtis?" he asked in an aggrieved tone.

"Yes, I think you are a great deal short," replied the President, "and I think it would be the best thing for us all for you to explain the whole affair and save trouble."

"Well, I will, then," said Turney. "I suppose I might as well."

Still without any trace of excitement, he pulled his chair a little closer to the desk, took a slip of paper, and wrote on it four sums, the total being $35,000. He had omitted to enter as received four checks, one from Mexico, one from Cleveland, one from Savannah, and one from St. Louis. Deducting the $1,000 "over" disclosed at the first examination of the account, that meant that Turney had taken $34,000.

At the first hint of trouble President Curtis had taken the precaution of sending for a policeman. Frank E. Connor, a detective attached to the Old Slip Station, went to the bank, but during the cross-examination of Turney he remained outside in the hall. When the teller had confessed Connor was called in. At the time the note teller was leaning over the desk and did not see the detective. When he finally looked up and realized who Connor was he was surprised.

"Now, I didn't think you'd do that," he said to the President.

In telling of this remark of Turney's yesterday, President Curtis said: "He said that as if he thought I might have spent those three hours questioning him all for a joke."

Then Connor arrested Turney and took him down to the Old Slip Station. On the way the detective tried to find out something as to the destination of the stolen money.

"Did you lose it on the races?" he asked.

"No."

"Must have been speculating, then?"

"No, I didn't speculate."

Connor did not pursue the inquiry any further.

Wouldn't Tell Where Money Went.

Searched at the station, the teller had $2 in change and some colored postal cards. On them were words written in a woman's hand. Turney stubbornly refused to say what had become of the missing $34,000. After being put into a cell he asked leave to send a message to his wife and boy in Brooklyn.

The Turneys live in the Arlington, 64 Montague Street, in the Heights section of Brooklyn. Six rooms were occupied by the teller, his wife, and son on the sixth floor. The family had lived there for about two years, and Mr. Turney made a favorable impression on his neighbors.

When his wife got the message saying that her husband was locked up in a police station she was stunned with surprise. But the boy took to the station some clean clothes his father had asked for. Both wife and son were in the Tombs Court yesterday morning when Turney was arraigned on the charge of grand larceny.

An effort was made to see Turney in the Tombs. A note asking an interview was sent up to him. The reply was: "Beg to be excused. J. A. T."

Found Broker's Memorandum.

The suspicion that the teller had been engaged in speculation was caused by the finding on him of a memorandum from a Philadelphia brokerage firm. It showed that he had made $90 on some transaction. After the arrival of the gas bill, though, the speculation idea was given up by the bank officials.

Members of the Twenty-second Regiment were greatly surprised to hear of Turney's arrest. Major Keck offered his services as attorney and they were accepted. One of the men in the regiment said:

"I never heard anything about Turney to make me suspect that he would do a thing like this. He was not very popular with his men, because he was on the examining board and would turn a man down for the slightest mistake. It was only for this reason, though, that he was not liked. I never heard anything against his character."

Charles A. Hanna, one of the National bank examiners in New York, was the one who examined Turney's accounts in February.

"It is almost impossible to detect a dishonest teller," he said yesterday, "if he follows the method which Turney undoubtedly adopted. It is the custom of those who follow this method to go along covering up the shortage from time to time by further manipulation with incoming checks or cash. No matter how clever a man is he must be caught in the end, though his books may appear regular for a long time."

The Pinkertons were put on the trail of the lost money, but up to last night had made no discovery.

HANGED AFTER A STRUGGLE.

Negro Murderer Resisted Execution in a Maryland Prison.

TOWSON, Md., March 30.—Isaac Winder, colored, was hanged after a severe struggle in the jail yard here to-day for the murder of Frederick T. Rhinehart, an aged toll keeper. Such a great crowd surrounded the jail and so much excitement and disorder prevailed that the Sheriff was unable to get the culprit to the scaffold until an hour after the time set for the execution, and then he resisted desperately.

Shortly after being sentenced a month ago Winder escaped from the jail, but was recaptured after two weeks of freedom. Winder confessed the murder, but said he did not intend to kill his victim.

ENTOMBED FOR 20 DAYS, 13 MINERS ARE RESCUED

Lived on Bark and Horse Meat After Courrieres Disaster.

ENGINEERS ARE DENOUNCED

Families of Miners Say Salvage Work Was Ineffective — Belief That Other Victims Are Still Alive.

LENS, France, March 30.—The disaster at the Courrières coal mines had a startling sequel to-day, when thirteen miners were taken out alive, after having endured unspeakable horrors during twenty days of entombment.

The story of the survivors, so far as it has been told already, shows that they lived for many days on decayed horse meat amid total darkness. The presence of human flesh would speedily have forced the starving men to resort to the last desperate extremity if they had not been rescued. The survivors are sturdy young miners from 17 to 25 years old, except their leader, Henri Némy, who is 33 years old. All show the terrible effects of their experiences, being emaciated, exhausted, and blinded. Their rescue caused a temporary nervous lucidity, during which they greeted their relatives and graphically related their sufferings. The doctors then enforced quiet upon them, fearing the results of fever and poisoning from their having eaten decayed horseflesh. They are being kept in semi-darkness.

The appearance of the imprisoned men caused stupefaction. A gang of salvagers had just completed their night's work, when they were startled to see a group of miners, terribly haggard and exhausted and with eyes sunken, appear from a remote part of Pit 2. The strongest of the party stated that they had broken out of a distant gallery, where they had been entombed since the disaster of March 10. The rescued men were taken up the elevator, but were unable to see, the daylight dazzling them.

Némy said that for the first eight days the party ate the bark off the timbering of the mine. Later they found the body of a horse, which they cut up and ate with hay. Némy added:

"After the explosion I groped my way about, stumbling over bodies and seeking refuge from the gases. I found some comrades sheltered in a remote niche. We ate earth and bark for eight days and then these provisions gave out.

"We continued to grope among the bodies, seeking for an outlet from our prison, but were forced back time and time again. We found some hay, which we ate, and two days afterward we found a dead horse, which we cut up and ate with the hay and bark. We suffered most from want of water. Finally we became desperate and separated into three parties and communicated with each other by shouts.

"Last night we felt a draught of fresh air, which finally guided us to an opening."

Némy, on seeing his wife, exclaimed: "Hello! Why are you wearing mourning?"

Léon Boursier, another member of the rescued party, said:

"I have heard Némy's story, which is correct, except that Némy forgot the carrots. We found some in a stable, and they formed our best meal."

The families of the miners are intensely indignant. They declare that salvage operations were never undertaken in the part of the mine from which Némy and his companions escaped and disorders are expected. The most severe precautionary measures have been taken. Crowds of women denounced the Directors and engineers, crying:

"If you had given us tools we would have saved our own husbands."

The rescued men are positive that others are alive in the mine. They say they heard calls and tappings yesterday but were unable to reach the entombed men. Renewed salvage operations have been begun, the members of the Salvage Corps carrying provisions in case other survivors are found.

There is a report that in addition to the thirteen men who were brought up out of the mine to-day there were five others who came with them almost to the bottom of the pit but were unable to get further on account of exhaustion.

The total number of men missing after the catastrophe was 1,212. The bodies recovered approximately number 500 and there are still unaccounted for approximately 700.

The engineers explain that smoldering fires prevented them from exploring remote passages of the mine, where it was thought that there could be no survivors. The mineowners also assert that the strike of miners reduced the number of rescuers available. Many engineers and scientists agreed that all in the mine must have died long ago. Engineer Laur, however, dissented, asserting that the salvage work had been deplorably inefficient. He now believes that scores died from exhaustion owing to the poor work of the salvage corps.

SAYS RUSSIA CANNOT BORROW

German Official Declares a New Loan in Berlin Is Impossible.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 30.—Some months ago a book by Dr. Martin, a German Government official, predicting that the Russian Empire would soon be bankrupt, created such a sensation that it was disavowed by the German Government.

Dr. Martin has now published a second book, in which he makes even stronger statements in regard to Russia's financial condition. He says that a new Russian loan in the German market is impossible—"the loan of January, 1905, was the last contribution from Germany's national wealth which the anti-German Czar will receive."

PLANNING JEWISH MASSACRES.

Russian Officials Are Accused by the League of Writers.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 30.—The League of Russian Writers has issued an appeal to the Russian people to unite in the name of their consciences and self-respect to prevent the Jewish massacres which, it is asserted, are beyond doubt being prepared in Southwestern Russia for Eastertide. The appeal says that it is not fancy, but fact, that the police and gendarmes are arranging to let loose the Black Hundreds upon the members of the poor, helpless race.

The league says it has proof that massacres have been planned at Alexandrovsk, Minsk, Brest-Litovsk, Rostoff-on-Don, and Kremenchug. It also points out that the anti-Jewish press is spreading insidious rumors designed to incite the ignorant, instancing specifically the case of the Moscow Day, which recently printed an article under the caption "The Jewish Easter Is Coming—Take Care of Your Children," containing the usual horrible intimation of "blood atonement."

WANTS TO STOP DUELS.

War Minister Says the Kaiser's Orders Remain in Force.

BERLIN, March 30.—In the Reichstag to-day, in the debate on the army estimates, the War Minister, Gen. von Einem, read a statement concerning dueling, saying that the imperial orders against dueling remained in force. Their aim was to abolish dueling entirely.

The Minister's statement was received with laughter by the members of the Centre Party and the Radicals.

The announcement by the War Minister to-day modifies considerably Chancellor Bülow's declaration of Jan. 15, in which he said:

"So long as dueling is widely regarded as a means of redress for injured honor officers cannot tolerate the presence in their ranks of any one who is not prepared to defend his honor with his sword."

TWO TRIBES COMMIT SUICIDE.

Other Starving Natives of Chukchis Peninsula Turn Cannibals.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 30.—Horrible accounts are reaching St. Petersburg of cannibalism and starvation among tribes inhabiting the frozen arctic plain of the Chukchis Peninsula, at the extremity of Asia.

Most of the reindeer died from starvation in the Winter of 1904-5, leaving the inhabitants without means of communication or food. During the past Winter whole tribes have died, and members of the Omolons and Ololya tribes, when facing starvation, assembled in council and decided that nothing remained but death. They agreed that each head of a family should kill his wife and children and then commit suicide.

The tribesmen gathered on a plateau covered with snow and ice, and in the darkness of the arctic Winter the Spartan decision was executed, not a single member of either tribe surviving.

More terrible still is the story of what occurred in a family of the Yukahir tribe. A mother and nine of her children having died of hunger, the father, a surviving daughter, and a nephew lived upon the remains, and when they were consumed the father murdered the nephew.

A Russian named Dolganoff, who went to the region to buy furs, reported the situation to the authorities at Yakutsk, Siberia. He entered a snow hut of a Yukahir family while the latter were eating the head of a murdered relative.

Christian Herald Sends $25,000—It Has Now Raised $125,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The Christian Herald of New York has now obtained half of the $250,000 which it has announced its intention of raising for the aid of the sufferers from the famine in the northern provinces of Japan.

Dr. Klopsch, editor of The Christian Herald, to-day sent to the Red Cross a check for $25,000 for transmission to Japan through the State Department, making the total thus far contributed from this source $125,000.

From other sources about $25,000 has been received by the State Department and forwarded to Japan, and it is expected that further large amounts will soon be received, as some of the State committees formed after the President's appeal for the famine victims was issued have only recently started work.

HAGUE MEETING THIS YEAR.

Mr. Root Asks for $50,000 for American Delegates' Expenses.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—In a communication to the House to-day Secretary Root asks for $50,000 to enable this Government to participate in the second international peace conference at The Hague. In his letter, which is sent through the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Root says:

"His Imperial Majesty the Czar of Russia, as initiator of the peace conference of 1899, has approached the Governments with a view to their taking part in a new international conference, which will be called together as soon as favorable replies have been obtained from the States.

"The President, whose keen desire for the perfection of the agreements of the first conference by a second conference was shown in the two circulars of Oct. 21 and Dec. 16 of last year, has received the proposal favorably.

"While no time has as yet been fixed for the meeting of the second conference, it is probable that it will convene some time during the coming Summer or next Autumn."

WITTE DESIRES TO QUIT.

It Is Asserted That His Resignation Is Before the Czar.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 30.—Since the sitting of the Council of the Empire on March 19, at which Premier Witte made an enigmatical statement which was interpreted as a virtual declaration that his career as Premier was ended and that he would be succeeded by M. Kokovsoff, ex-Minister of Finance, the Premier has not attended the sessions of the Council.

The Associated Press is positively informed that the Premier's resignation, based on the ground of ill-health, is before the Emperor. This, however, is not admitted at the Premier's Chancellery.

The Constitutional Democrats at the second degree elections to-day carried both Tsarskoe-Selo and Peterhof.

Ivan Tolstoy, a son of Count Leo Tolstoy, has been elected an elector of the second degree at Kaluga. He is a Constitutional Democrat.

M. Gladisheff, Assistant Chief of Gendarmerie, was murdered to-day in a street of Smolensk.

BRITAIN BACKS DOWN; NATAL HAS HER WAY

Colony Now Permitted to Execute the Rebellious Natives.

STATEMENT BY LORD ELGIN

He Says the Government Recognizes That the Decision Rests with the Natal Authorities.

LONDON, March 30.—Lord Elgin, the Colonial Secretary, announced in the House of Lords to-day that the Government had received explanatory telegrams from Natal, and that it had been decided to leave freedom of action to the Colonial Government in regard to the execution of the rebellious natives.

Lord Elgin has sent a dispatch to the Governor of Natal in which he expresses satisfaction with the Governor's explanation that steps were taken to examine the evidence and to establish conclusively the guilt of each individual prisoner. The dispatch adds:

"His Majesty's Government never had any intention to interfere with the Government of Natal or to control the Governor in the exercise of his prerogative, but in view of the presence of British troops in the colony the Imperial Government was in duty bound to obtain precise information with reference to martial law cases, with regard to which an act of indemnity must ultimately be assented to by the Crown. In the light of the information now furnished his Majesty's Government recognizes that the decision of this grave matter rests in the hands of your Ministers and yourself."

Lord Elgin concludes with an expression of regret that detailed information was not given earlier.

The constitutional question involved in the imperial intervention in a matter which the Government of Natal considered to be exclusively under its jurisdiction was the main subject of discussion at to-day's meeting of the British Cabinet.

Voluminous cable messages were exchanged between the Colonial Office and Pietermaritzburg, and the hope was expressed that the explanations of the imperial Government's motives would calm the troubled waters.

SURRENDERS TO LABOR PARTY.

British Government Supports a New Trades Disputes Bill.

LONDON, March 30.—The Government has surrendered to the Labor Party on the Trades Disputes bill and Premier Campbell-Bannerman himself announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that he would support the bill introduced by the Labor Party in opposition to the Government measure. He advised the House to accept the bill of the Labor Party, which then came up for its second reading. It provides complete immunity for trade unions' funds, the clause relating thereto reading:

"No action shall be brought against a trades union or other association as aforesaid for the recovery of damages sustained by any person or persons by reason of the action of any member or members of such trades union or other association."

Otherwise the bill is practically a duplicate of the Government's measure.

The Premier explained that the object of the Government was to "place the rival powers of capital and labor on an equality, so that in the event of a fight it should be a fair one."

After some twitting of the Government for its "cowardly surrender to the clamor of the Labor Party" the bill passed its second reading by 456 to 66 votes.

MRS. TEWKESBURY ARRAIGNED

Says She Fled from London Because of Her Husband's Coercion.

LONDON, March 30.—Mrs. Violet Tewkesbury, who was arrested in this city in November, 1905, together with her husband, Lewis G. Tewkesbury, charged with passing worthless checks and who jumped her bail and fled for France, was extradited to-day from Paris. She was arraigned at the Bow Street Police Court, where the Magistrate refused to release her on bail.

Mrs. Tewkesbury declared that she had acted innocently, and stated that she had only fled from London because of her husband's coercion.

KAISER'S PET PLAN ADOPTED.

Reichstag at Last Consents to Creation of Colonial Ministry.

BERLIN, March 30.—The Reichstag today adopted by 127 to 110 votes the motion to raise the Colonial Bureau of the Foreign Office to a Ministry of the Colonies.

This is a pet project of Emperor William's, and has only been carried as a result of much wirepulling and the exercise of strong influence on the various parties. Last November the Government asked the Reichstag to raise the Colonial Bureau to a separate Ministry, but the Budget Committee of the Reichstag rejected the proposition.

Many rumors have been afloat in regard to this matter. It was even said that the Emperor had delivered an ultimatum to Chancellor von Bülow—that he was either to obtain the Reichstag's consent to the creation of a Colonial Ministry or resign.

Much of the opposition to the Emperor's plan has been due to hostility toward the Director of the Colonial Bureau, Prince Ernest von Hohenlohe-Langenburg, who, it is supposed, will now become Colonial Minister.

$1,000,000 Damage by Wash-Outs.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 30.—Senator Clark's line alone, the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad, has suffered a loss from wash-outs of approximately $1,000,000 in the Nevada Desert between Las Vegas and Caliente, it is said, and will be put to a total expense of $250,000 in restoring the roadbed and making other repairs necessary to the resumption of through traffic to Los Angeles, Salt Lake, and the East.

REID FOR SPIRITUALITY.

Is Glad Our Colleges Are Likely to Teach More Classics.

BRISTOL, England, March 30.—Whitelaw Reid, the American Ambassador, and Augustine Birrell, President of the Board of Education, were the chief guests at the annual dinner to-night of the University College Colston Society, at which it was announced that a scheme had been taken up for the establishment of a university at Bristol, for which $150,000 of the required $1,000,000 had been subscribed. Mr. Reid delivered an interesting address on education in America.

The Ambassador, after alluding to the many historical associations which have made the name of Bristol sound sweet to American ears, drew an interesting comparison between the educational progress of the two countries. In England, he said, the tendency of university courses was now becoming more in the direction of scientific and technological knowledge, but in America the belief was growing that it might be advantageous to give greater attention to old studies, pure scholarship, and literature, and that scientific education might be carried too far for the best interests of the rising generation.

"In my belief," said Mr. Reid, "the time can never come when spiritual things will not outweigh those merely material."

A New Standard of Excellence in High Grade Clothes for Boys

DOING THE BOYS' CLOTHING BUSINESS as well as it was done in other good stores—which is what we did for some years—was not satisfactory. We wanted to do it better than it was done anywhere else—and we have.

We put into boys' Clothing the same care in selecting materials; the same individuality in creating styles; the same thoroughness in the tailoring that has put Loeser Clothes for men in a class alone. Some Brooklyn mothers know what the result has been. Every Brooklyn mother ought to know it.

We are proud of these new Spring Clothes for boys. Examine them for yourself to-day. See how the collars and shoulders fit. Note the fullness of the coats and their graceful draping. And every Suit is GUARANTEED to hold the shape that pleases you at the beginning.

WIFE OF DR. W. T. BULL ROBBED IN ST. LOUIS

Money and Jewels Stolen from Her Trunk at the Jefferson.

HAD ARRIVED FOR A CONCERT

Journeyed from Chicago with a Woman Friend to Hear Jean Gerardy Play the 'Cello.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 30.—Mrs. W. T. Bull, wife of the well-known New York surgeon, and formerly the wife of James G. Blaine, Jr., who has been sharing a suite at the Hotel Jefferson with Mrs. Alice Rymear, a widow from Paris, reported to the hotel management and the police to-day that she had been robbed of $137 and jewelry worth $500. The money and jewels were taken from a chamois bag in her trunk, she said, while she and Mrs. Rymear were attending a concert given by Jean Gerardy, the 'cellist, at the Odeon on Thursday night. The robbery was discovered some hours after the return from the concert.

Mrs. Bull and Mrs. Rymear arrived at the Jefferson on Wednesday evening and engaged what is known as the "Jefferson suite." Mr. Gerardy arrived on Thursday morning and was entertained by them.

"I came from Chicago, where I had gone from New York to attend the funeral of a sister-in-law, to attend Mr. Gerardy's concert," said Mrs. Bull this morning. "I was upset by the death of my relative and felt that I needed a little relaxation and that it would do me good to hear Mr. Gerardy play. Mr. Gerardy has long been a warm friend of mine and of my husband.

"I brought with me from Chicago jewels worth $5,000. They were in a chamois bag, which was kept in my trunk. Last night, when I was dressing for the concert, after Mr. Gerardy had departed for the Odeon, I opened the trunk and took from the bag a pearl pendant, a locket, a brooch, and several rings. Mrs. Rymear replaced the bag, which contained some of her own jewelry as well as the rest of mine and $137 in cash. I should say the jewelry was worth about $2,500.

"Mrs. Rymear asked if she should lock the trunk. I told her that it was unnecessary. I had the key, but I have been troubled with rheumatism, which bothers me when I use my arm, and I thought it would be safe to leave the trunk unlocked, as the rooms were locked while we were gone.

"We left the hotel about 8 o'clock and returned at 9:30. Some time later Mr. Gerardy arrived, and we had a light repast in the public dining room, then returned to our apartments. After talking for a time we retired.

"About 12:30 Mrs. Rymear decided to send a telegram to New York, and she went to my trunk to get the money to pay for the message. She discovered that there was no money in the bag, and she then examined the jewelry and noticed that one of her rings was missing. She called me, and I found that one of my rings, a handsome one containing three diamonds, was also gone.

"I was dreadfully upset, and began a search for the money and rings. I could not believe that they had been stolen, and thought that they must have been mislaid. I searched the apartments thoroughly, and looked through the trunk, but the rings and money were not there.

"Then I notified the hotel clerk and the police were called in. I can't account for the robbery, except on the theory that the rooms were entered while we were away. Evidently the robbery was committed by a 'money thief,' who was afraid to take jewelry that might lead to detection."

Mrs. Rymear at first reported that she had lost a gold bar pin set with diamonds and valued at $150, but she found it on her dresser.

Mrs. Bull said that her intention had been to leave St. Louis at 1 P. M. to-day for New York.

Detectives Joyce and O'Brien called to see Mrs. Bull and spent an hour with her. She told them that a bellboy was in the room when Mrs. Rymear returned the jewel bag to the trunk, and that she asked if the trunk should be locked, and heard Mrs. Bull reply that she did not think this was necessary. When she and Mrs. Rymear left the room she gave the key to the bellboy, asking him to lock the door and take the key to the hotel office. She added that she did not suspect any one in particular and had no theory as to who took the money and rings.

Dr. William T. Bull said last night that he had been in telephonic communication with his wife about the robbery, but he could add no details to those contained in the dispatches from St. Louis. He said Mrs. Bull had gone to Chicago from New York to attend the funeral of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Howard Baker.

MANN DEFIES STANDARD OIL.

Says Its Agents Are Attempting to Defeat Him for Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Representative J. R. Mann of Illinois, representing a Chicago district, in a ringing speech in the House charged that as a result of his activity in securing the passage of anti-rebate and railway legislation the Standard Oil Company is now making a fight in his district to prevent his renomination.

Mr. Mann prefaced his accusations with the history of the crusade in Senate and House, which resulted in the framing of three bills, "all," as he declared, "aimed at the Standard Oil Company." Then the Illinois Congressman said: "In the passage of this legislation through Congress it happened that these bills were aimed at practices largely indulged in by the Standard Oil crowd, as the public believes. Although I was a very humble instrument of the House in connection with the passage of these laws, I incurred the violent displeasure of the Standard Oil crowd. With expressions of bitter hatred and with threats of vengeance their attorneys and representatives left Washington.

"The Elkins Anti-Rebate act was distinctly an Administration measure, considered and urged by the Roosevelt Administration. It met with the approval of both houses of Congress, notwithstanding the bitter enmity of the Standard Oil crowd. But Standard Oil in my district now is urging as one of the reasons for defeating me my part in connection with its passage through the House. No wonder That law has stopped the payment of rebates to the Standard Oil Companies. It has lost them millions. It hurts. They feel it. They hate it. They hate me for that.

TO REORGANIZE ARTILLERY.

Field and Coast Branches to be Separated Under New Plan.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Complete reorganization of the coast artillery and the separation of the field and coast artillery are contemplated in a bill Representative Hull of Iowa, Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, has introduced at the request of Secretary Taft and the Chief of Staff, Lieut. Gen. Bates.

At present the coast and field artillery are under the Chief of Artillery, and both are organized into batteries, but have no regimental organization. As the field artillery and the coast artillery are entirely unrelated and have wholly different duties, the War Department desires that the field artillery shall be organized as the cavalry and infantry are, and shall in every way be governed as those branches of the service are. Consequently the bill provides for its organization into six regiments with two battalions each, and each battalion is to contain three batteries.

The coast artillery is by the provisions of the bill to continue with the battery as the unit of organization, and is to be under the direction of the Chief of Artillery, whose title is to be changed to Chief of Coast Artillery. The number of men in that branch is about 14,000, and the bill provides that it may be increased to 19,147. Provision is also made for additional special grades among the enlisted men, and for increased pay for electricians and other skilled men necessary to coast defense work.

FAVORS FREE ALCOHOL BILL.

Committee Reports Measure Lifting Tax on Denaturized Spirits.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The House Committee on Ways and Means authorized to-day a favorable report on the free alcohol bill.

The bill provides that beginning three months after its passage domestic alcohol of such degree of proof as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury may be withdrawn from bond without the payment of internal revenue tax, for use in the arts and industries, and for fuel, light, and power, provided it shall have been mixed in the presence and under the direction of an authorized Government officer before withdrawal with denaturing material suitable to the use for which the alcohol is withdrawn, but which destroys its character as a beverage and renders it unfit for liquid medicinal purposes.

NO AGE LIMIT FOR CLERKS.

Provision Stricken from Appropriation Bill Passed by the House.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The House to-day passed the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial Appropriation bill, carrying $30,000,000. The feature of the proceedings was the elimination of the age limit of clerks, a provision which has created much discussion, and which incited the alcohol bill. Though the Standard Oil Company is said to be opposing the measure, only Messrs. Dalzell and Grosvenor voted against a report on it.

$20,000,000 FOR BUILDINGS.

House Committee Agrees to Report a Public Buildings Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to-day agreed to report a public building bill carrying appropriations aggregating $20,000,000.

The details of the bill are not fully completed, and the committee voted to refrain from disclosing the projects to be included in the measure until the report is finally completed, which will be in about ten days.

MRS. CUSHING IS AL 'VE.

Writes That Report of Her Suicide in London Was Exaggerated.

LONDON, March 30.—Mrs. Gertrude Wood was much surprised when her attention was drawn to-day to a letter written to a Paris newspaper by her sister, Laura Cushing, saying that the report of Mrs. Cushing's suicide in London on March 16 was "slightly exaggerated."

Mrs. Wood, who seemingly had absolutely identified the suicide as Mrs. Cushing, is going to Paris immediately to see her sister. She is unable to throw any additional light on the mystery, and she is convinced that the articles she identified had belonged to her sister. Mrs. Wood admits, however, that she must have been mistaken in the identity of the suicide, as she does not doubt the genuineness of the Cushing letter.

Apparently the authorities here have now no clue to follow, unless a Broadway (New York) firm where the dead woman's shoes were purchased happens to keep minute records of the sales. The deceased was about 40 years old and had auburn hair. She wore a wedding ring not of British manufacture.

HAZING BILL AGREEMENT.

House Substitute Retained with Amendment on Dismissal.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The conferrees on the hazing bill for the Annapolis Naval Academy reached a complete agreement to-day.

The agreement retains the House substitute with an amendment to the first section. This section provides for the dismissal of midshipmen from the Academy by the Superintendent for other causes than hazing. The amendment agreed to stipulates that when an issue of fact is raised between the specifications of dismissal and the answer of the midshipman it shall be determined by a special board of inquiry.

This does not apply, however, to questions raised in the record of the midshipman disclosed by demerit records.

SHOT HIS BUSINESS RIVALS.

Jealous Chinaman Wounded Two of His Fellow-Countrymen.

ROME, N. Y., March 30.—Wing Sing, a Chinese laundryman, put a revolver in his pocket to-day, and, walking two blocks to the laundry of Charlie Wing Sing, shot him and his helper, Wun Pen. Wing Sing cannot recover. Wun Pen got two bullets, but it is believed that his wounds will not prove fatal.

The laundry where the shooting took place is directly opposite the police station, and the shooter was arrested with the revolver in his hand. He said he took revenge because the other Chinamen were getting his business away from him, were winning money from him in gambling games, and had tried to poison the opium he smoked and the whisky he drank. Charlie Wing Sing and Wun Pen said they could give no reason for the attack made upon them.

Grand Jury Censures Woodbury.

Street Cleaning Commissioner John McGaw Woodbury was censured by the Kings County Grand Jury yesterday in the presentment handed by that body to County Judge Aspinall. He was blamed for the flimsy structures built to serve as ash removal stations in various parts of the borough, and the belief was further expressed that Brooklyn was not very well treated by the present administration in the matter of street cleaning.

To Investigate Jersey Senators.

TRENTON, March 30.—The State leaders have decided that there shall be an investigation Monday evening of the charges of Pawnbroker Philip Krimke that Senators Shinn (Rep.) and Martens (Dem.) sought to extort $400 for holding up a Senate bill which would work hardship to pawnbrokers. The Senate Judiciary Committee will run the inquiry, and its report will be demanded in one week. This means a delay in the final adjournment of the Legislature from April 5 to April 12.

SENATORS ABOVE COURTS, BURTON'S BRIEF SAYS

When Offender, as a Senator, Commits an Alleged Crime

SENATE ALONE HIS JUDGE

New Interpretation of Senate's Powers to be Presented to the United States Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The second appeal of Senator Burton of Kansas to the Supreme Court will come up for hearing Monday. Senator Burton will be represented by ten lawyers, ex-Judge John F. Dillon leading the list. The argument in chief will be made by Bailey P. Wagner of Atchison, Kan., the general attorney in Kansas for the Missouri Pacific Railroad, assisted by Fred Lehmann of St. Louis, another prominent Western railroad lawyer.

The argument to be made is one of the most interesting efforts to get new meaning out of the Constitution that has appeared for some time. The validity of the law of 1864, under which Burton was prosecuted, will be attacked and the claim made that the courts are powerless to punish a Senator who has committed an alleged crime, that power belonging alone to the Senate.

"The Constitution," says the brief, "will be searched in vain to find the power conferred upon Congress expressly or by implication to delegate to the judiciary the power by indictment or otherwise to remove from office a United States Senator or forever disqualify him from thereafter holding any office of public trust under the Constitution and laws of the United States."

"Suppose the Senate, notwithstanding the judgment of the court, believing it was wrong, should refuse to expel Senator Burton? Could any one question the Constitutional right and power of the Senate so to decide? If the Senate, under the power conferred by the Constitution, has such right and power, then the act of 1864 cannot be held to be the 'supreme law of the land.' In the very nature of things it cannot be 'the supreme law of the land' if the Senate has the Constitutional power to ignore and disregard the judgment of the court below.

Senator Burton's lawyers conclude with a thrust at President Roosevelt. They say: "Suppose that Congress, feeling that the Executive was becoming too aggressive—was encroaching upon the independence of the legislative branch of the Government—should make a law that: 'It shall be unlawful for any President after his election and during his continuance in office to directly or indirectly attempt to influence the vote of any member of Congress for or against any measure pending before it.' Would such a law be Constitutional?

COD LIVER OIL.

It almost makes you sick to think of it, but it isn't nearly as bad as it used to be. The improved method of refining it makes it much easier to take, and when made into Scott's Emulsion almost every one can take it. Most children like it and all children that are not robust are benefited by it. When the doctor says "Take cod liver oil," he generally means Scott's Emulsion; ask him if he doesn't. They know it is more easily digested and better than the plain oil.

"The Largest Showing in New York City."

This is a phrase that has appeared very frequently in our advertising during the past few weeks.

We want you to feel safe in taking every word of our advertising at its face value—even phrases like this, which are so commonly and carelessly abused that it is likely you pay little attention to them. And so we wish to emphasize the fact that when we say "the largest showing in New York," we say so not because it sounds well, but because IT IS THE HONEST TRUTH.

In many stocks we carry BY FAR the largest gatherings of goods and varieties in styles that are carried in this city. This interests you only, as it argues largest room for choice, and, perhaps, what it indicates as to lower prices.

It rests with you to decide whether when we say "biggest" we can also say "best." We believe that we can. We believe that we are as far ahead of the rest of New York in giving BEAUTY-FOR-PRICE STYLE-FOR-PRICE and NOVELTY as we are in quantities and values. And as to the latter, there is no doubt whatever.

Will You Give Your Judgment?

We maintained our uniform $3.50 price for all Regals as long as possible, but there is no longer any possibility of a lower price of leather and consequently there has been just one of two things for us to do: Either to stop making some lines of Regal shoes or else charge a price increased sufficiently to balance their increased cost. We have built into every pair of Regal shoes the best materials suited to that particular style, and we shall never change that policy. We have anticipated our needs for some time to come, and can still supply you with many styles at the $3.50 price. We guarantee that in every Regal model you will get absolutely the best materials suited to that style.

MUCH OIL AT FIRE BRINGS INVESTIGATION

$10,000 Damage Only at Boarding House Blaze.

HOTEL GUESTS DRIVEN OUT

Policeman Lavery Rescues Woman from Burning House in West Forty-seventh Street.

Fire destroyed the four-story boarding house at 127 West Forty-seventh Street late yesterday afternoon. The circumstances attending the blaze and the presence of kerosene oil in considerable quantities convinced Battalion Chief John F. Devanney that the case was one for investigation by the Fire Marshal's office. Deputy Fire Marshal John P. Prial is now looking into it. The parlor on the first floor of the house was wrecked. On the next floor there was apparently no trace of fire. The third and fourth floors were completely burned out.

Firemen found a five-gallon can of kerosene on the third floor after the fire was extinguished. In the hallway on the parlor floor two wicker-covered demijohns were found which the firemen said had contained kerosene.

In the big ten-story apartment house, the St. Margaret, at 129 West Forty-seventh Street, next door to the burning building, the guests left in a hurry. In the Hotel Flanders, next to the St. Margaret, a similar state of alarm existed for a time.

Policeman Lavery of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, who sent in the alarm, said that his first intimation of the fire was when he saw smoke issuing from the second-story windows in the front of the house. Mrs. Bonnaford Leslie, the housekeeper, was ill in bed, suffering from an attack of bronchitis. She was carried into the street by Policeman Ward of the West Forty-seventh Street Station and taken to the St. Margaret. Mrs. Leslie was unable to assign any cause for the fire.

With the arrival of the fire apparatus a crowd thronged West Forty-seventh Street, from Broadway to Sixth Avenue. Reserves were sent from the East Fifty-first Street Station as well as the West Forty-seventh Street Station to hold the curious in check.

The firemen had great difficulty in keeping the flames to the house where the fire originated. Occupants of the house to the west of the burning building hurried to the street, and tried to remove their valuables.

The damage to the house and furnishings is estimated at $10,000. The building was owned by a Mrs. Stebbins. Lodgers, with rooms on the third and fourth floors, lost all of their belongings.

THEY WED ON $6 A WEEK.

He's 16, She's 18, and Sues Him for Involuntary Non-Support.

In the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, a sixteen-year-old bridegroom, who earns $6 a week, faced his eighteen-year-old bride, who had summoned him to answer to a charge of non-support.

The bridegroom, Bernard A. Riley, lives with his parents at 1,801 Brooklyn Avenue, and is employed as a clerk by the Postal Telegraph Company in Manhattan. The bride, Mercedes Bradley, lives at present with her aunt at 917 Hancock Street. She is the daughter of W. B. T. Bradley, a manufacturer of photographs, whose home is at 1,768 Brooklyn Avenue.

"Bernie" and "Mercy," as they call each other affectionately, met for the first time about a year ago. Among the boys of his set out in Flatbush, Bernie was looked upon as a heavy spender, and the ice cream soda pace he followed with Mercy that Summer was a thing to be talked about.

Also, they went boating on the Prospect Park lake at 50 cents an hour, and Mercy dreamily observed how perfectly grand it would be if they could float and drift along like that together always. And Bernie, abstractedly jingling the $1.35 in his trousers' pocket, calculated all eternity at 50 cents an hour and was appalled at the prospect. But he was a courageous lover, and mumbled something to the effect that it would "sure be the real goods."

The ice cream sodas continued, and in the early Winter Bernie acquired a brown plaid waistcoat and pearl spats and took Mercy to see a melodrama.

The Yuletide passed, and the new year brought to Bernie a raise in salary, from $5.50 to a round $6. Bernie began to get interested in the cost of living, while Mercy got her mother to show her how to make lemon meringue pie.

Then Bernie asked Mercy if she didn't think that the time had come. She did. So he bought a frock coat and a white lawn tie and led her around till they found a near-sighted minister who couldn't see any flaws in Bernie's tale about having cast his first vote.

He married them, but a friend of Bernie's broke the news to his parents, and Bernie was torn from his bride.

Yesterday, when the juvenile bridegroom appeared before Magistrate Dooley, he was guarded by his mother. He and Mercy made pleasant eyes at each other, and the court's heart was touched. The Magistrate adjourned the case until next Wednesday, thinking that matters might be patched up in some way in the meantime.

Bernie's mother, however, says she will seek to have the marriage annuled. This, Bernie and Mercy say, will serve to keep them apart only until he is of age.

TO CALL ON UNDERWRITERS.

They Must Take About 50 Per Cent. of Pennsylvania Issue.

The underwriters of the Pennsylvania Company's one-hundred-million-dollar issue last Spring of 3½ per cent. convertible bonds will be called on on Monday to take over about 50 per cent. of the issue remaining unsold. The securities have not had an easy sale, notwithstanding the fact that at present prices they yield about 4 per cent. and are convertible into Pennsylvania stock at 150, but it is stated that the underwriters will not have actual losses.

The railroad sold the bonds to J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. at 97½, and the underwriting syndicate took them from the bankers at 98½. Enough of the securities have been disposed of at higher prices, it is said, to bring the syndicate out about even, and it is thought that the bonds are likely to find a readier market under the conditions of money that are looked for this Summer.

WANTS HER HOUSE BACK.

Baroness de Graffenried Sues Husband for Reconveyance of Property.

Justice Greenbaum of the Supreme Court directed yesterday that the summons in the suit of the Baroness Gertrude Van Cortlandt de Graffenried against her husband, for the reconveyance to her of a half interest in property in Ninety-fifth Street, near West End Avenue, be served upon him by publication and by mail. The paper will be sent to "Baron Raoul de Graffenried, 23 Quay de Bergeres, Geneva, Switzerland."

The Baroness, in her complaint, says that her husband persuaded her to transfer the property to him, so that he might have the income for the reason that it would humiliate him to receive money directly from his wife. She adds that the Baron promised to pay the household expenses from the income derived from his share of the property, but that he has since refused to do so.

The complaint says that the Baron and Baroness have not lived together since March 1, 1906, and that inasmuch as one condition of the transfer was that it would hold good as long as they did live together, it is no longer effective.

BOY WOULDN'T GO HOME.

Lawyer's Son, Found at West Point, Said Father Abused Him.

Albert S. Nathan, the eleven-year-old son of Lawyer Ralph Nathan, who disappeared from his home, 1,172 Park Avenue, on Wednesday, was found yesterday at West Point and brought back to this city last evening. The boy refused to return to his home and spent the night at the rooms of the Gerry Society.

Young Nathan at West Point presented himself to Lieut. Foy, Assistant Quartermaster of the army post, and told him he wanted to enlist as an artilleryman. Lieut. Foy, after questioning the youngster, learned his name and found out that he had run away from home. He informed his father and also his uncle, Solomon E. Rogers, of 1 West 128th Street. They went to West Point and brought him back.

On the train the boy told his uncle, the latter says, that his father abused him, and that he would not return to his father's house, but was quite willing to go home with his uncle. The elder Nathan then telegraphed Police Headquarters, and a policeman met the train at the 125th Street station. He took the boy to the 126th Street Police Station.

After the youngster had reiterated his refusal to return to his father and his willingness to go with the uncle, Sergeant Lake sent him to the Gerry Society and told uncle and parent that they would have to look to the Children's Court for a settlement of the case.

The uncle said that Nathan's wife died eighteen months ago, leaving four sons. Two of these, Mr. Rogers said, lived with him. Rogers intimated that there was some truth in the boy's story, but the elder Nathan said his son's statement had been inspired by others and that there was a family row on foot and a conspiracy to get the boy away from him.

MRS. IVINS IN COURT.

Wife of ex-Mayoralty Candidate Appears Against Alleged Swindler.

Mrs. William M. Ivins, wife of the Republican candidate for Mayor at the last election, was a witness in the Jefferson Market Court against Thomas O'Keefe, a young man from Brooklyn, who was charged with larceny.

According to the police, O'Keefe has been reaping a harvest by collecting subscriptions for a bogus dinner, supposedly to be given to the American District Telegraph messenger boys. He called on Mrs. Ivins, who, suspecting something wrong, gave him a marked $2 bill, which was found on him when arrested by Detective Sergeants Walsh and Brown.

The police say that O'Keefe collected about $500. Magistrate Steinert held him for trial in Special Sessions in $500 bail.

RAIN IS CHAUFFEUR'S EXCUSE.

Put on Speed to Get Shelter—Got it in the Police Station.

Norbert Horn, 36 years old, a chauffeur, of 343 East Fifty-eighth Street, was held by Magistrate Wahle in the West Side Court yesterday in $100 bail for trial for speeding. He was arrested in Times Square late Thursday afternoon by Roundsman Sackett of the traffic squad, who accused Horn of going at a mile-a-minute rate.

"What excuse have you?" asked the Magistrate.

"It started to rain," replied Horn, "and I was trying to get to a place of shelter."

"You found shelter in a police station?"

"Oh, yes, but not the kind I wanted."

Indicted for Wreck on Elevated.

An indictment for manslaughter in the second degree was returned by the Grand Jury yesterday against Cornelius J. Jackson, the towerman on duty at Ninth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, when, on Sept. 11 last year, an elevated train at that point was thrown from the track with the result that eight persons were killed and twenty injured.

A. R. GOSLIN DENOUNCED AS A WALL STREET FAGIN

Clerks Say He Taught Them to Steal Stock from Employers.

DUNN AND ANOTHER CONFESS

They Tell Their Stories to the District Attorney—Cosmides Is Meanwhile Held in $5,000 Bail.

The bail of Christo Cosmides, the Greek fruit dealer arrested with Charles M. Dunn in connection with the theft of a hundred-share certificate of the United States Steel Corporation, was reduced by Magistrate Wahle, in the West Side Police Court yesterday morning from $12,000 to $3,000, with the consent of Assistant District Attorney Lockwood.

Later in the day, when Herman J. Witte, the Greek's lawyer, appeared with a receipt for $3,000 cash bail from the City Chamberlain, he was informed that Mr. Lockwood had changed his mind and wanted $5,000. The Assistant District Attorney was sent for, and when he arrived Mr. Witte asked him the reason for his change of heart. Mr. Lockwood replied it was due to confessions made by Dunn and Frederick W. Jobelmann.

Mr. Lockwood filed both confessions. Dunn in his statement said he met Goslin when but 16 years old. He was then employed as a clerk by Ridley & Piser, at 60 Broadway. Goslin was a member of the firm, which went out of business two years later. He then went to work for Goslin, traveling about the country and placing stock in bucket shops while Goslin was manipulating Jersey Central in the New York Stock Exchange through McKinney & Co.

In 1900 Dunn said his uncle, Thomas L. C. Dunn, and his father, James L. Dunn, who have a factory at 22-24 Morton Street, Brooklyn, needed funds, and Goslin loaned them money, taking a mortgage on their machinery. Goslin later loaned a thousand dollars additional and took their note. When the mortgage was due Goslin met Dunn and asked him why his father and uncle did not pay the debt. Dunn replied that they were hard pressed for funds, needing every cent they could get hold of. Goslin then took Dunn to a restaurant and proposed that he go to work in some Wall Street broker's house and steal all the stock that he could lay his hands on, especially stocks like Burlington, Metropolitan, and St. Paul.

Dunn went to work for De Coppett & Doremus, and when Goslin threatened foreclosure he stole 100 shares of United States Steel preferred, valued at $10,000 and mailed them to Goslin, who returned the mortgage and the note given to him by the Dunns. Goslin later told Dunn that he had sold the stock for $5,000, and said that his (Dunn's) share was $1,100. He got only $100 from Goslin, who said the mortgage and note made up the balance.

Jobelmann, in his confession, told how he had met Goslin and Cosmides, and how they had induced him to go to Boston to try and get 100 shares of stock that had been taken from a bank in Summerville, Mass., where they had sold it for $7,500. He said that Goslin told him how to steal stock, but he declined to be a party to this game.

Sheriff Hayes yesterday received an attachment for $8,875 against property belonging to Goslin in favor of William W. Tracy and Arthur N. McGeoch, formerly doing business under the name of Tracy & Co., at Milwaukee, Wis. The attachment grew out of the sale of 200 shares of stock some years ago.

ON DUTY IN SLIPPERS.

Detective Roberts's Son Mixed Up the Family's Shoes.

County Detective Roberts appeared at the District Attorney's office wearing slippers yesterday morning. He explained that when dressing he had discovered that his boy, Jimmy, had got his own and his father's shoes mixed up and had departed with one of each. The same odd assortment would not do for the father, for, while Jimmy wears No. 9, his parent, who is 6 feet 2 inches tall, wears No. 11.

Roberts wore his slippers till late in the afternoon, when a messenger reached Jimmy and effected an exchange.

Winter Tourists Returning.

The Royal Mail Liner Atrato, which arrived yesterday, brought a large crowd of cabin passengers who have been wintering in the West Indies. She carried 230 first cabin passengers, and it was found necessary to turn a part of the second cabin into first-class accommodations in order to provide quarters for all. for all.

22 MURDER TRIALS AHEAD.

Long List of Capital Offense Cases Fixed for April.

Michael Bruesch, the burglar who shot and killed Policeman Enright about two years ago, appeared in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday. He was convicted of murder and sentenced to electrocution. After spending twenty-two months in the death house at Sing Sing, Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer, who has fought five years for his life against heavy odds, prepared appeal papers for him with such success that the burglar obtained a new trial and a stay of judgment. Yesterday Justice Dowling fixed April 16 as the date for the new trial.

Ten other prisoners charged with murder were brought over from the Tombs and had their trial dates fixed. Eleven more are in the jail. District Attorney Jerome has obtained an order from the Appellate Division assigning two Justices to duty in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court during April to try them.

Justice O'Gorman will sit in the regular courtroom on the main floor of the Criminal Courts Building and Justice Dowling, continuing the March term, will hold court in a new courtroom, fitted out for the purpose on the fourth floor, adjoining the library of the District Attorney's office.

CARNEGIE'S GIFT TO BATES.

Maine College Gets $50,000 Each from Him and Bartlett Dow.

The fifth annual dinner of the Bates College Alumni Association was held last night at the St. Denis Hotel, at Broadway and Eleventh Street. More than fifty of the wives and sisters of former students were present.

In a letter of regret Andrew Carnegie said that absence from the city was the only thing that prevented his attendance. The speakers were President George C. Chase, Deputy Commissioner E. J. Goodwin, the Rev. F. W. Baldwin of East Orange, the Rev. S. H. Woodrow of Springfield, Mass.; the Rev. Martin Summerhall, and E. N. Emery, the local United States Weather Forecaster.

President Chase announced that Andrew Carnegie had given $50,000 to the college. This was greeted with wild cheering. Then Mr. Chase said that Bartlett Dow, a San Francisco alumnus of Bates, had also given $50,000 to his Alma Mater. This was also greeted with loud applause and college songs were sung for many minutes.

TROUT SEASON OPEN TO-DAY.

Big Rush of Anglers to Long Island Fishing Grounds.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTPORT, L. I., March 30.—All the incoming trains from the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn carried hundreds of anglers to-day, who are eagerly anticipating the opening of the trout-fishing season to-morrow, a date two weeks in advance of the opening up State. Among the arrivals to-day were mostly members of sportsmen's clubs who own extensive preserves in this section and exercise a virtual monopoly.

It is said that the prospects for successful sport are more bright than in many years, and it is believed that many anglers, overzealous, ushered in the season to-day and scored some handsome catches.

PATRICK WITNESSES COMING.

Fourteen Started from Texas Yesterday—The Elusive Valet Jones.

Special to The New York Times.

GALVESTON, Tex., March 30.—Detectives searching for Valet Charles Jones, the chief witness against Patrick in the Rice murder case, received information from authentic sources that he had been seen at Cove, where his parents reside. A search was made for Jones, but he was not found. It is known, however, that the officers have positive evidence that Jones is alive and on American soil.

Fourteen witnesses left here to-day for the Patrick hearing in two parties, one of eight for Patrick and the other six for the prosecution. The State witnesses will testify to Jones having declared on several occasions that he was innocent, but that Patrick would have to prove his own case.

John N. Carlisle Not a Candidate.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., March 30.—John N. Carlisle of this city, Secretary of the Democratic State Committee, who has been mentioned in connection with the Chairmanship of the committee, to-day declared that he would not be a candidate under any circumstances.

Bookbinders to Demand 8-Hour Day.

The announcement was made last evening in this city that the Bookbinders' International Union is making preparations for the enforcement of a general eight-hour demand throughout the country. Strikes will be ordered in all cities where the eight-hour workday is refused. A National convention will soon be held in Washington to prepare to enforce the demand.

QUIT MORRISANIA COURT.

The Building Unsafe, So Prisoners Are Arraigned at Westchester.

As a result of the condition of the building occupied by the Morrisania Court the prisoners usually arraigned in that court were yesterday arraigned in the Westchester Court, in Main Street, Westchester. The Morrisania Court House has been closed by order of the Building Department of the Bronx, and will remain closed until repairs deemed advisable by that department have been made.

As a result of this order all of the court records and books were yesterday hauled to the Westchester Court, and then forty prisoners were treated to a long ride in patrol wagons to Westchester.

President Haffen of the Bronx appeared before the Board of Estimate yesterday and asked for an appropriation to repair the building occupied by the Morrisania Court. He told the board that Magistrate Breen and Justice Tierney had refused to sit in the building until proper repairs had been made: that the wall had sagged and that the building shook.

The board referred the request to committee.

MRS. KAY'S WOUND FATAL.

Young Widow May Have Killed Herself from Grief at Friend's Death.

Mrs. May Kay, the young New Orleans widow who shot herself in her room in the Hotel Alabama on Thursday night, died at St. Vincent's Hospital yesterday morning. The cause of her suicide was said to have been her recent property losses, but Coroner Shrady said yesterday that on Thursday morning a woman had called him up on the telephone and asked him if Mrs. Ruth Dennis, who died on Wednesday at the Hotel Marseilles, had suffered great pain.

On his replying in the affirmative the woman burst into tears, and was able to give her name with difficulty. The Coroner said he thought the inquirer said she was Mrs. Kay. This incident gave rise to the report that Mrs. Kay's action was due to her grief at Mrs. Dennis's death, for the women were friends.

I must say that at my new Brooklyn store, at 380-382 Fulton street (cor. FOOTBALL REVISION TO BE FINISHED TO-DAY

Central Board of Officials Appointed for Next Season.

MORE RULE CHANGES MADE

Minor Alterations and the Fixing of Penalties for Fouls Occupied Committee Last Night.

The meeting of the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, which convened at the Murray Hill Hotel last evening, and will continue in session today, will finish the work of revising the rule code for the playing season next Fall before it adjourns. The entire field was covered at the meeting last evening, and only the final reading and adjustment of discrepancies and a few minor points remain to be fixed to-day.

Last night's session was given over mainly to the question of arranging for a central board of officials to operate during the coming season. The suggestions made by the sub-committee, which were sent broadcast after the last meeting to a number of officials throughout the country, were generally approved, and upward of seventy-five letters were received advising various steps to facilitate the work. A committee of five was named to undertake the duties of the Central Board during 1906, and it was given power to formulate its own plan from the suggestions that have come to it.

This committee consists of Prof. J. J. Babbett of Haverford College, Chairman; Walter Camp of Yale, Prof. L. M. Dennis of Cornell, Prof. J. B. Fine of Princeton, and C. W. Savage of Oberlin. They will appoint the sectional boards that will nominate officials for the various contests and will generally supervise their work on the lines laid down.

Some rule changes were enacted. These dealt in the main with fouls. A rule was passed which provided for the disqualification of a player who should "rough" the full back, while it was provided that the penalty for interference with the centre rush in snapping the ball was fixed at five yards loss of ground. Interference with the centre was prohibited in a rule reading:

> In a scrimmage the snapper-back shall have full and undisturbed possession of the ball. The opponent must neither interefere with the snapper-back nor touch either him or the ball, until the ball shall be actually put in play.

A rule was passed fixing the penalty for a catcher who shall overrun his mark after signaling for a fair catch. It provides:

> If on a fair catch the catcher takes more than two steps after catching the ball, his side must put the ball in play by a scrimmage at a point five yards back of the mark of the catch.

The penalty for tackling below the knees was fixed for 5 yards loss of ground, and for hurdling or coaching from the side lines at 15 yards loss. The provision regarding tackling below the knees was amended to include:

> A tackler who has tackled a runner above the knees shall not be penalized if after such a tackle his arms or hands slip down below the knees.

A change was also made in the rule governing the kicking out after a touch back or safety has been scored. The provisions in the old rule covering a second touch back made before four downs have been played and covering tries for goal on the first down when within the twenty-five-yard line were abrogated and rule made to read:

> A side which has made a touch back or safety must kick out from some point inside the twenty-five-yard line. The kickers' side must be behind the ball when it is kicked and the opponents must be on the twenty-five-yard line or nearer their own goal. Except that if the ball goes out of bounds before striking a player, it must be kicked out again, and if this occurs a second time it shall be given to the opponents as out of bounds on the thirty-five-yard line on the side of the field on which it went out of bounds.

Prof. L. M. Dennis of Cornell occupied the chair, with William T. Reid of Harvard, Walter Camp of Yale, Prof. J. B. Fine of Princeton, Dr. Paul J. Dashiell of Annapolis, Lieut. C. D. Daly of West Point, Prof. J. J. Babbett of Haverford, E. K. Hall of Dartmouth, Prof. C. W. Savage of Oberlin, F. Homer Curtis of the Southern universities, and Dr. Carl S. Williams, representing John C. Bell of Pennsylvania, in attendance. The absentees were Dr. A. A. Stagg of Chicago, Dr. Harry L. Williams of Minnesota, and Prof. J. T. Lees of Nebraska.

These men will meet again this morning at 9:30 o'clock, to continue in session until their work is done.

BIG EXPLOSION THREATENS.

Expert Finds Menace in Hoboken's Blazing Gas Tank.

An expert from Philadelphia, who went to Hoboken yesterday to examine the Public Service Corporation gas tank, which caught fire on Tuesday, says that it may explode to-day or to-morrow.

The tank is still burning, and three lines of hose are constantly playing on it. The expert who investigated said that as soon as the tank accumulates 85 per cent. of oxygen it will burst, and that the explosion will shake Hoboken to its foundations. The firemen who are still squirting water on the blaze shifted positions when they heard what the Philadelphia man said, and last night were plying their lines from points quite a respectable distance from the tank.

It was also learned as a result of the expert's examination that a smaller tank adjoining the one on fire is full of highly explosive oil, and that had it caught fire on Tuesday the damage would have been trebled. The contents of the smaller tank were saved by the firemen, who played streams of water upon it during the fire in order to keep it cool.

BRAVE SAILORS REWARDED.

Gold Medals for Officers and Men of Atlantic Liner Maine.

Capt. R. C. E. Prager and the officers and men of the Atlantic Transport liner Maine who took part in the rescue on Jan. 11 of the Captain and seven men of the wrecked schooner Kipling, were rewarded yesterday morning by the Life Saving Benevolent Association of New York.

The men who received the reward were mustered in the saloon at ten o'clock and the medals were given by W. Irving Comes, Chairman of the association's Committee of Awards, who made a brief speech praising them. The Captain and his Chief Officer responded.

The officers received large gold medals and the petty officers smaller ones while the men received bronze medals. In addition the men who took part in the rescue received $25 in gold.

Will Give McNutt Chance to Deny.

William D. McNutt and Amos W. Jones, the confidence men convicted of swindling Saloonkeeper John Whyatt of 360 Lenox Avenue out of $3,500, were to have been sentenced by Judge Foster in General Sessions yesterday. As McNutt wished to deny that he had swindled David R. Barnett of Newark, N. J., out of $100,000, thus driving Barnett to his death, the sentencing of both prisoners was postponed until May 7 by request of Assistant District Attorney Train.

$8,000 for Loss of Husband.

Hedwig Hacker, widow of Julius Hacker, received a verdict of $8,000 against the O'Rourke Engineering and Construction Company, before Justice O'Gorman in the Supreme Court yesterday, for the loss of her husband, who was killed by an improperly covered blast while working as an engineer for the company last August.

Guggenheimer Succeeds Warburg.

Randolph Guggenheimer, who was President of the old Municipal Council under Mayor Van Wyck, was named for the Board of Education by Mayor McClellan yesterday. He succeeds Felix M. Warburg and was sworn in yesterday afternoon by the Mayor.

NOT AN EGG WAS CRACKED.

A Successful Test of the Elevators in New Hall of Records.

There was a successful test of one of the elevators in the new Hall of Records, now nearing completion, yesterday afternoon. It had been planned that the car was to be cut away from its rope fastenings at the ninth floor and allowed to fall to the bottom of the shaft, and the programme was successfully carried out.

Two dozen eggs were placed on the bottom of the car selected for the test. Just before it was sent on its downward journey a tramp appeared and volunteered to make the trip if he were first fed.

"With a meal inside I'd be glad to die," he said.

The offer was declined, but the tramp went his way 50 cents richer.

At the given signal a workingman cut the supporting ropes and down slid the car, which reached the air cushion at the bottom of the shaft in a few seconds.

There was a report of escaping air, but not an egg was cracked. The only thing that suffered was a portion of the cementing in the basement. This was blown a little bit outward.

The test was declared perfect by all present, the twenty-foot air cushion playing its part at the bottom of the 125-foot drop without a hitch.

W. Frank Defeated Melvin Sheppard at Commerce High School Games.

William Frank of the Irish-American Athletic Club, one the Olympic games athletes, won the mile invitation handicap, the feature event, at the first annual games of the High School of Commerce held last night at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory, Broadway and Sixty-eighth Street. Frank and Sheppard made a thrilling finish, the former winning by less than two yards in the fast time of 4:23 2-5. Sheppard's time was 4:23 4-5, which is the fastest mile ever run in the armory.

The interscholastic relay race created a deal of enthusiasm among the 2,000 schoolboys who were present. Twelve schools were represented and furnished spirited contests in each of the heats. GYMNASTS IN ANNUAL MEET.

Intercollegiate Championships Drag Along Until After Midnight.

The gymnastic team of New York University last night carried off the major portion of the honors in the intercollegiate championship competitions. The meeting was held in the Columbia gymnasium, and owing to the lack of system and bad management the events dragged along until an early hour this morning. Then only a few tired spectators and the fatigued gymnasts were on hand to witness the finish.

Columbia, Harvard, Haverford, Princeton, Rutgers, University of Pennsylvania, Yale, and New York University were represented by teams. As a whole the work of the gymnasts was not up to the standard of previous years, but this was in a measure offset by the fine individual work of several of the collegians.

Princeton's team began scoring heavily in the first event, the horizontal bar, E. W. Mecabe and H. L. Dowd respectively winning first and third places. Mecabe easily surpassed the other men on the bar. He met with a serious accident on his final trial. In making his giant swings he split the palm of his right hand in gripping the bar, as his hands failed to slip around, sticking to the bar because of the friction. The plucky Princetonian did not pause, but went right on. His hand was then dressed and liberally incased in courtplaster strips. A leather hand piece was hastily arranged to cover it, and he took part in the next event, the side-horse.

Harvard and Yale displayed the best work upon the cumbersome side-horse. The first place was won by G. F. Evans of Harvard, with 76 5-10 points. The second and third places went to V. D. Price and D. T. Mason, Jr., of Yale's team. It was the general poise of Evans in his spins and pendulums upon the horse which favorably caught the eyes of the judges.

The flying rings yielded the thrilling competitions of the night, for the gymnasts vied with each other in showing daring and muscle-straining tricks. L. Greenfield of New York University clearly outstripped all of the big field, and as his college mate, S. C. Ketcham, won third place, they placed their college in the lead for the team championship. Greenfield proved a wonder for the manner in which he executed the Maltese cross both with the rings at a stand and flying.

C. A. Stewart of Columbia was first in club swinging, with 26 points; G. P. A. Bragden of New York University and C. A. Woodbury of Harvard tied for second place, with 23 3-6 points.

Before the beginning of the championship contests the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Gymnastic Association was held and the following officers elected: President, G. F. Evans of Harvard; Vice President, E. W. Mecabe of Princeton; Secretary, E. E. Krauss of the University of Pennsylvania; Treasurer, R. C. Masterton of Columbia; Executive Committee, P. R. Carpenter, Harvard; P. A. Druckleib, Yale; J. V. Hawes, Haverford; T. C. Crammer, Princeton, and F. Bradford, University of Pennsylvania.

New Rochelle's Many Yachting Events

Fourteen events are scheduled by the New Rochelle Yacht Club for the season's racing off Echo Bay alone—a fact that may be taken as indicative of the extent of the unusual interest that is being displayed in the game this year. The ocean race for the Brooklyn Cup is most important. Then, besides the open regattas on May 26 and June 30, there will be three club races in July and August, open only to boats in the club fleet and contested over short courses, besides a race to Stratford Shoal and return the first week in August and three short cruises and the week's cruise. The latter will be in July and the short cruises over Decoration Day, Independence Day, and Labor Day.

The cup offered by Sir Thomas Dewar for competition within the club will be awarded on the point system to the boat which on the various cruises scores the most points in the port to port races. Besides this, cups have been donated for competition by Paul Meyerowitz, F. H. Waldorf, E. M. Gill, Henry Meyer, C. W. Voltz, Frank Maier, Henry Dosher, and Henry Andruss.

LIVELY ATHLETIC GAMES FOR SCHOOLBOY TEAMS

Aspirants for College of City of New York Honors Contest.

UPPER CLASS A WINS CUP

Three Thousand Enthusiasts Cheer the Competitors in Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory.

Streaking around the sixteen lap track youthful aspirants for athletic honors yesterday made a record mark for schoolboy games at the old armory of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, Seventh Street and Third Avenue. The occasion was the annual meet of the boys of Townsend Harris Hall, the preparatory school of the College of the City of New York, and the entry list, which threatened to swamp the officials, had to be cut down to working proportions before the first of the events was run. It was sixteen years ago this week that the last indoor games were contested in the old armory, but never in any similar meeting was there more enthusiasm. It was practically a riot of three thousand, and when the boys of Upper A class captured the point trophy the cheers caused the old timbers to creak. This valued cup was offered for the first time by Major Charles Lydecker of the class of 1878.

The boys of Upper A began their scoring of the points in the half-mile run, which C. Brisotti won in a spirited finish, with J. Gross of Lower B. The novice 50-yard dash again brought them to the front with T. L. Furey as the winner, while H. J. Devlin, Upper C, took second place, and I. K. Greenbaum, Upper A, came third.

Upper A scored a total of 83 points, while Lower B was second with 27 points, and Upper C third, with 14 points. The summary:

BOWLERS UP IN ARMS.

Eastern Players Claim That They Were Slighted at Louisville.

Although nothing but preliminaries were talked over for an opposing governing body to the American Bowling Congress by the men who met at the Grand Central Bowling Academy in Brooklyn on Thursday, the movement seems to have struck a popular chord, for players, officials, and alley owners in the Metropolitan District were outspoken in their praises yesterday of the proposed new organization. According to William Cordes, one of the principal promoters, the new body will not be formed with the view of entirely antagonizing the American Bowling Congress, but to make and administer laws that will be fair to all. Two of the principal abuses now claimed by Eastern men, the system of clubs and the composition of the balls, will be corrected in the new organization. There will be no "mushroom" clubs organized for convenience, and the balls will be made of wood entirely.

Opposition to the methods of the American Bowling Congress has been rather virulent ever since the withdrawal of the Eastern men at Buffalo in 1901. From the formation of the congress in 1895, up to that time affairs seemed to have been conducted upon an amicable basis, and the East was honored by having the first President, the late Thomas B. Curtis of Brooklyn, and subsequently Dr. Henry Timm of New York. The election of Langheny as President in 1901, due a great deal, so it was contended, to clubs not regularly organized, was the cause of the break between the East and West, and although the latter has tried pacification measures year after year, there was no complete reconciliation until the New York Bowling Association agreed to abide by the rules of the American Bowling Congress and participate in the tournament at Louisville.

"As was generally expected," said Mr. Cordes yesterday, "our going back to the American Bowling Congress was a mistake. The same old unfair methods prevailed, and we got nothing but kicks in return for our participation in the tournament."

Associated with Mr. Cordes in the formation of a new association is Dr. W. A. Griffith of the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn, who was Chairman of the preliminary meeting; Michael Costa, a prominent alley owner of Philadelphia and Pittsburg; Harry Mills, who was Chairman of the Philadelphia delegation at Louisville, and John G. Floss of Buffalo.

More Rain for Americans.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 30.—Again was Clark Griffith subjected to a wet afternoon, and it is now doubtful whether the Greater New Yorks will be able to play the last game which is scheduled for to-morrow afternoon. Griffith smiles wanly, but keeps his courage. He has not complained. The visitors are scheduled to leave Birmingham on Sunday morning for Atlanta. To-day Griffith gave out a statement, thanking the Birmingham Club for its hospitality, and stating that he hopes to return next year. Griffith said that he was certain of finishing the season in a nice berth, but would not claim the pennant. He expressed delight in his young pitchers, and paid Hogg, Keefe, and Hughes high compliments.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Church Wins Free Entry for Font—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Waite the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday sustained a protest filed by the Holy Name Church of Steubenville, Ohio, against the action of the Collector of Customs at Chicago in levying a 60 per cent. duty on an elaborate font imported for the use of the church. The Collector took the view that the font was a "manufacture of marble," and therefore dutiable, but the board finds that the Treasury official erred and should have returned the article as "statuary," which is provided for in the free list of the tariff.

W. A. Howell wrote a decision for the board overruling a claim filed by Dearberg Brothers of New York regarding the classification of horsehair braids under the Tariff act of 1894. The merchandise was assessed for duty at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem, and was claimed to be assessable at 45 per cent. General Appraiser De Vries wrote a dissenting opinion.

In a decision by Judge Somerville, the board denied a contention raised by M. & K. Gottstein, who objected to the action of the Collector at Port Townsend, Washington, in assessing duty on brandy which, it was charged, never reached this country. According to the importers, the Collector failed to make any allowance for leakage.

The board denied claims filed by Hop Hing & Co. and Wing Wo Tai & Co., Honolulu. The Treasury Department exacted duty on Chinese wine under the provision in the Dingley tariff for "spirits." The importers insisted that the importation came within the meaning of "still wines" as used in the law.

"OUR RIGID, SODDEN" CURRENCY.

Mr. CONANT, a member of the Chamber of Commerce committee upon currency reform, has spoken out in school. A banknote system which many defend, and which some vaunt as the best on earth, seems to him a "rigid, sodden mass." It may be assumed that his colleagues upon the committee who represent the merchants agree with him, but it would be interesting to know what are the views of the National bank representative. It is not meant to suggest that there is any difference of opinion, for there is no basis for the suggestion. But it is necessary to remember that the ground is not clear for a reform upon principle. There are vested interests to consider of the most substantial sort.

There are nearly $500,000,000 2 per cents deposited to secure National bank circulation, and their price would shrink if the demand for them for this purpose were reduced or destroyed. If, by a change in the law, our banknotes were to be put upon a basis of assets, or upon gold, instead of upon debt, the banks depositing the 2 per cents would face a loss of some scores of millions upon them, and a further sum upon bonds bearing a higher rate, but which would hold their price better. And the country at large would have to accommodate itself to seeing its bonds sell below par, for 2 per cents could not command a premium as a simple investment. The latter is a purely sentimental objection, for it is well understood that the premium upon the 2 per cents does not represent a normal credit rating for United States bonds. But the loss to the National banks would be an unjust burden upon them for the general interest.

There can be no objection to putting this argument forward as a ground for equitable relief, but this position ought to be distinguished from defense of our "rigid, sodden mass" of currency upon principle. The prospect seems to be for the preservation of the National banknote system, and the addition to it of some sort of "emergency circulation." But every loan is an emergency loan for the borrower, and why should we have a currency which acts only in emergencies as it ought to act all the time? There can be no reason except the necessity of accommodating ourselves to a situation which is indefensibly bad and difficult to amend.

LAW AND MORALS.

Fast and furious discussion is doubtless the short way to come at the truth, or it would be if all minds were at all times open to the light of truth. Mr. JEROME has been much pitched into for his course in regard to the givers of political contributions out of insurance funds, and, being always capable of giving an account of himself and his acts, he has upon several occasions replied to his critics with no little vivacity and attention to circumstance; insomuch that an acquaintance with both sides of the controversy could have been had only at the cost of neglecting business. Mr. JEROME presented his views upon this and other questions through the columns of THE TIMES yesterday morning. It was not a prepared statement; it was a verbal statement, made with a readiness indicative of knowledge of the subject, and his words were taken down.

We hope that those who have criticised or condemned the District Attorney's expressed opinion that, however reprehensible the gift of policy holders' money to political parties might be, it was not under the law a criminal act, have read his justification, and we venture further to express the hope that this passage, in particular, will receive candid consideration:

> While it may be that all groups of transactions involving some moral wrong should be within the criminal law, it is not a fact. The hysteria which has led to the denunciation of certain transactions as crimes is met by some at the other extreme by endeavoring to justify the same transactions in the forum of morals. Both positions are equally unsound. No right-minded man can become familiar with the great bulk of things shown by the evidence taken before the Armstrong Committee and for a moment justify them in the field of morals.
> And yet not a few of the things most severely condemned are absolutely not within the range of the criminal law.

It is not quite fair, not quite decent after all, to insist that if the Penal Code does not cover these delinquencies it ought to cover them, and then abuse the District Attorney for not making it cover them. In morals the gifts to the Republican campaign funds by insurance companies were absolutely indefensible. But men who think so now were not of that opinion in 1896. The point is, however, that the domain of law and the domain of morals are not one and the same. Morality condemns many things that the law overlooks. As Mr. JEROME is acquainted with the law, and is not unfamiliar with the principles of morality, some more reasonable explanation might have been found for his course than that based upon the assumption of his innate sympathy with crime.

As the soundness of his position has been so fiercely assailed, however, Mr. JEROME has acted wisely in taking steps to secure an adjudication of the question. When the acts of the insurance company officers have been passed upon by a Grand Jury, and, if an indictment be found, after that by a trial jury, the community, or at least the reasonable part of the community, will be in the way of having all its doubts removed.

THE TROUBLE IN NATAL.

Natal is one of the most peculiar of the British provinces in South Africa, having a very large Kaffir population, a very small European population, and a form of government which gives to the latter considerable though not complete independence and responsibility. Population of all sorts has increased rapidly, having nearly doubled in the last dozen years, and now amounts to about 1,100,000. But of this number the Europeans are only 82,542, while the Kaffirs are 877,388, the remainder being Asiatics. Thus it will be seen that the whites, necessarily the ruling class, under suffrage based on ownership or renting of real property, are only one-tenth as numerous as the blacks and less than one-twelfth of the total population. Obviously any serious trouble with the blacks is sure to arouse the utmost excitement among this fraction of whites who are in actual control.

There was trouble undoubtedly serious in February, which was only subdued by calling out the militia, by what was practically the declaration of martial law in the disturbed district, and by the trial and conviction by court-martial of a dozen of the blacks for murder of a white police officer. The Natal Government confirmed this sentence, and on the receipt of an order from the Colonial Office in London to suspend the execution of the sentence, the Ministry instantly resigned. At the request of the Governor the Ministers have consented to hold their offices pending further communication with Lord ELGIN, the Secretary of State for the Colonies. The first act of the Ministers was an extreme one, and it is not surprising that it was so far reconsidered as to leave the way open to an adjustment of the difference with the home Government. On the one hand it is natural for the whites in Natal to feel that their interest in the treatment of the blacks and in the possible conduct of the blacks is controlling and their judgment decisive; on the other hand it is clearly the duty of the home Government to insist on respect for their authority and the general principles they may find it necessary to adopt in the management of the inferior race. The relation of the whites and the blacks is not wholly a local one by any means, since the occurrence of real disorder in the colony could be met only by the aid of the Imperial Government, and there are millions of blacks in the area known as South Africa for dealing with whom the home Government is in the long run accountable. The exact line at which force must be used is not easy to draw, but the home Government must be free to draw it.

The situation in Natal is complicated by the fact that on the western border of the colony lies Basutoland, with its population of some 350,000 natives and but a few whites, while Zululand is a part of the colony of Natal. Among these blacks there has appeared within the last few years a religious movement known as Ethiopeanism, said to be organized by blacks from the United States, and having, perhaps vaguely, for its chief object the realization of the dream of "Africa for the Africans." It is impossible to say what substance there is in this movement. Naturally it is regarded with terror by the more excitable of the small white minority who are literally surrounded by blacks. Should the movement become fanatical and spread, the consequences might be serious enough. The best-informed observers so far regard this as an improbable outcome, chiefly because the African blacks are not homogeneous and have in the past been bitterly jealous one tribe of another. During the recent war the Basutos maintained complete neutrality and the Zulus even sought to secure service in the British Army. Both these races are reported to be disinclined toward intimate intercourse with the Kaffirs. A united movement, therefore, seems unlikely. But it is not impossible, and the actual situation in Natal will be watched with the utmost interest and anxiety.

RUSSIA'S BUSINESS COUNCIL.

The election for the twelve members of the "Council of the Empire" who are to represent the Russian commercial Exchanges, assures the Czar of councilors whose counsel will be of value to him if he will heed it. It equally seems to assure Count WITTE of so many stanch supporters, for these twelve men are of his kind, intelligently interested with him in the industrial development of Russia. They represent manufacturing and mining as well as banking interests, and it may safely be said that a delegation of such men would be useful members of any American Legislature.

It has suited the Czar to constitute the Council of representatives of special classes and interests. Possibly, in the actual situation of Russia, this is the best arrangement that could have been made, and we are probably entitled to believe that it has the weighty sanction of Count WITTE. Provision is made by the direct Imperial appointment of half its members, that the Czar shall not be outvoted. The main use of the Council will thus be that of a consultative body, and these business men will be very valuable in that sense.

The local victory of the "Constitutional Democrats" in the district of St. Petersburg, outside of the city, may or may not be of much significance. But it is rather ominous that the elected delegates have already pledged themselves to demand that the Douma shall hold Count WITTE personally responsible for all "acts of repression" committed since the manifesto of Oct. 30.

THE ENGLISH LABORITES.

The breach between the new Liberal Government and the "Laborites" was, on the part of the Government, compelled. The "Trade Disputes bill," as introduced by the Attorney General, had for its primary object to conciliate the Laborites by redressing everything which could fairly or colorably be described as a grievance arising from the Taff Vale decision. That decision held a trades union pecuniarily responsible for damage done by its members to the property of a railroad against which there was a strike. The proposed law carefully limits this liability, providing that no act of a union shall be unlawful which would be lawful for an individual, expressly declaring the right of "peaceful picketing" as an essential to the right to strike, and giving pecuniary immunity to the union for all acts not done by the express authority of its governing body.

This is as far as any just and reasonable man can ask the Government to go. But it is not far enough to suit the Laborites, whose representatives in the House of Commons unanimously demanded complete immunity for union funds. Trades unions would be thus exempted from the liabilities of all other corporations, and made a class by themselves, above the law applicable to all others. They require that sauce for the goose shall not be sauce for the gander. Of course such a proposal is inadmissible in England or in America. The equal application of the law is all that any honest corporation, whether of laborers or of capitalists, can demand, and all that any just Government will grant. With the assistance of the Irish members, who are reported to be with them, the Laborites may succeed in making temporary trouble for the Ministry. But it is inconceivable that they can ever succeed in a project so repugnant to the human sense of equity.

MANHATTAN BRIDGE.

The new Bridge Commissioner seems to have been ill-advised, and to have misconceived his function. Nobody imagines that he has more technical competency to decide questions of bridge engineering than his predecessor. But many people have been fain to believe that he had more sense. He seems to owe it to himself not to disappoint these people.

Arguing about the comparative merits of the chain bridge and the cable bridge is evidently a pleasing exercise for technical experts. The advantage, if not of argument, of authority is at present overwhelmingly with the advocates of the chain bridge. The question ought clearly to be decided on the "showdown." Assuming the equal efficiency of the two systems, an assumption negatived by Mayor Low's board of experts, which will be the cheaper and the quicker?

This is not a question to be decided by arguing. It is a question to be decided by competitive bids. Which design can be executed for the less money and in the less time? That is clearly what it is Commissioner STEVENSON'S business to ascertain. He has every facility for ascertaining it, since both the chain design and the cable design have been so developed as to admit of competitive bidding. The competitive bidding on the two is the "showdown." It should be clear to Mr. STEVENSON that he really must invite it. By taking any other course, it must be evident to him, he assumes grave responsibilities.

CAREFUL PROCEDURE.

> Within a day or two summonses will be issued against several big corporations, and we shall fight the cases against them to a finish.—Health Commissioner DARLINGTON on the city smoke nuisance.

Dr. DARLINGTON has been quoted as saying that it is "undoubtedly true that if the great powers of the Board of Health were enforced every fire in New York City could be quenched, and then there would be no smoke." No one, of course, including the Health Commissioner, believes that the quenching of all the fires in Greater New York, or even those of the defiant companies, would work even-handed justice. He declares that he is "proceeding carefully" in the courts. Careful procedure is eminently necessary; but in one or two of these cases of flagrant daily violation of orders from the Health Department we think that the careful but decisive exercise of the Commissioner's lawful power of arrest would prove exemplary, healthful, beneficial, and that it would be well received by the community.

RIVERSIDE PARK AGAIN.

We note that the residents of the west side in the neighborhood of 116th to 122d Street are reported to be organizing an energetic and concerted movement for the creation at public expense of a park extending from one of these streets to the other. We criticised this plan when it was first proposed, and, in spite of the fact that it has enlisted the support of a large number of highly respectable and influential citizens, we see no reason for changing our opinion of it.

We freely concede the advantages it would confer on the immediate neighborhood and even on the city at large, in so far as it would add distinctly to the beauty and attractiveness of a conspicuous region. But we cannot regard it as a proper investment of the money of the general taxpayers so long as there are other investments of far greater importance and value demanding attention. Even in the same line there is greater need of appropriations in other quarters. If we are to spend on parks let it be on parks in the congested parts of the town, where multitudes can have access to them and where they are sorely needed. Breathing places and playgrounds for the poor are far better than a stately and costly park in a quarter already favorably situated and equipped. Outside of this special line there are many things we owe to the poorer classes and from which it is not wise, it is not right, to divert several millions of dollars for the beautification of the neighborhood of Barnard College, excellent as that project, taken by itself, undoubtedly is.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Stately, but Stupid. Commissioner BENSEL of the Department of Docks and Ferries, in issuing the order that when writing to him his subordinates must put an "Esq." after his name and end their letters with "very respectfully, your obedient servant," indicated that his course at Oxford did not include much instruction in tact or highly develop his sense of humor. When in England Mr. BENSEL may or may not be an "Esquire." We believe that there the title is claimed as a sort of right by a considerable number of people and is voluntarily accorded to almost anybody not too immediately connected with "trade," but it would not become us to pretend an understanding of the matter. Here "Esquire" is somehow connected with the law, when it has any connection with anything, but its use is extremely uncertain and vagarious, and in any case the idea of demanding it is just a little more than funny—in the direction of the absurd or ridiculous. By origin the word should include an intimation of youth or inferiority and therefore be undesirable by any grown man not willing to admit himself the poor relation of somebody really important. As for "very respectfully, your obedient servant," that does very well for anybody who likes it, and is no sillier on last analysis, perhaps, than the simpler "yours," or "yours truly," but its use under orders is very distinctly unpleasant to ordinary American sensibilities, and we are something between sure and hopeful that Mr. BENSEL will not get many letters signed with the formula to which he has given his official sanction. It is almost impossible to understand why a man should invite the laughter of his fellows by issuing a command of this sort. There is so much unavoidable trouble in the world that it is the very height of unwisdom unnecessarily to increase the amount. It is pretty near the very depth of folly to excite derision by a fussy insistence upon trifles. Mr. BENSEL'S subordinates, probably without an exception, now have the consciousness of having more sense, in this one particular, than their chief, and that is much worse for discipline than any common or likely informality in the addressing of letters to the head of the Department of Docks and Ferries. Those subordinates very properly consider themselves the servants, obedient or other, of anybody except the public that pays their wages. Some of them will resent the order and the rest will jeer at it. Either course, unfortunately for Mr. BENSEL'S peace of mind, will be fairly well justified.

Postage Stamps and the Weather. Assistant Postmaster General MADDEN has not infrequently astonished and irritated members of the public who have had occasion to consult him about peculiarities of the Postal Service and of the officials who conduct it, but his explanation of the recent failure of stamps to stick to the letters upon which they have been affixed is for queerness just a little in advance of anything he has ever said before. The stamps fall off, he says, not because there is anything wrong with the supposedly adhesive compound with which their backs are painted, but because there has lately been something "peculiar" about the weather! Well, it is a fact that the weather of the past Winter has not been exactly commonplace, but it was the Winter, not the weather, that was unfamiliar, and we have yet to hear that the composition of the atmosphere has not been much what it always has been. No comets have impinged upon the earth to scatter corrosive vapors, and even the most meticulous of the astrologers over on Third Avenue have noted no alarming congregation of the planets. Mr. MADDEN declares that the gum which won't stick is exactly like the gum which always did stick. As a mere proposition this is in every way satisfactory, being definite, brief, and simple. The only real fault with it is that it can't be true. The weather has been precisely what weather always is, except that it has been a little misplaced, and there is no reason at all for supposing that stamp gum would care anything about that. For the misplacement has not gone to the extent of having Summer weather in Winter; we merely had for a while a prematurely early Spring. It seems to us that Mr. MADDEN had better think again over this problem of the deciduous stamp—had better give due weight to the probability, the very high probability, that when gum doesn't work after its gummy kind there is something wrong about it, and not a mysterious wrongness, either.

More Kind Than Enlightening. As was inevitable, Mrs. CRAIGIE, returned to London after a visit to this country, has been lecturing about our likenesses and unlikenesses to her own people. She is much kinder than our critics used to be in other days, a fact which may prove either that critics or Americans have changed, but while it would be difficult to deny that she could have seen exactly what she describes, it would not be at all hard to maintain that what she saw was certain Americans, and not "the Americans," upon which she discoursed. In other words, Mrs. CRAIGIE, like most foreign visitors, has argued from a few particulars to a general which does not exist. Take, for instance, her statement that American men "spend money on their wives and daughters, but with the tacit understanding that the wives and daughters shall ask no questions, and, above all, offer no advice." That is a rule with so many exceptions that the exceptions might just as well be called the rule and the rule the exceptions. When conditions are the same, we imagine, the American wife knows as much about her husband's business as does the English wife, and the English wife as little as her American sister. It is less the custom here than there, perhaps, for the wife to be the husband's assistant in business, but the difference is rather one of the business than of the people, and businesses of the same kind are conducted in much the same way in the two countries. The most curious thing said by Mrs. CRAIGIE was that we combined the temperament of the past with the advantages of the present. That seems to mean something, but just what, it would be hard to say.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The Capitol guide was telling two New England school teachers in the Senate gallery interesting things about the Senators below.

"There are several of them," he said, "that have eaten too many society dinners and drunk too much firewater."

"Oh, how dreadful in our public men!" said one of the teachers. "But there is handsome Senator Lodge. He doesn't drink, does he?"

"Oh, no," replied the guide. "He is a teetotaler. He even thins his water."

The friend of the common people, John Wesley Gaines, went on the warpath this afternoon against the commercial agents sent abroad by the Secretary of Commerce to study and report on trade conditions with a view to advancing American foreign trade. He declared that such legislation was paternalistic and designed to afford somebody a job.

"Why study trade conditions in order to give somebody a job?" thundered Gaines. "Why, in my district there are 200,000 people who need a job. No, 300,000," added Gaines hastily, for an inaccuracy or error in figures is abhorrent to his precise mind.

The House, however, by a large majority, authorized the commercial agents to go on their nefarious way.

Miss Lulu Miller, a pretty and blooming schoolma'am from Toledo, about 20 years old, went to gaze upon the President the other day, convoyed by Representative Cole of her home town. While they were waiting for the President to come in she sat down in a chair. Mr. Cole hurriedly told her that it was the President's own chair. At that moment in walked Mr. Roosevelt.

"This young lady has been sitting in your chair," said Mr. Cole.

"I shall always feel honored when I sit in that chair in the future," said the President.

"It is an honor to sit in the seat of the mighty," said Miss Miller.

One of the Ohio Congressmen got a letter to-day from a constituent asking him to send a copy of "the latest amendment to the Constitution."

"I have a copy printed in 1896," said the writer, "and I want one that is up to date."

BREAKFAST FOR 13.7 CENTS.

A Housekeeper Would Like to Know the Teachers College Marketman.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was much interested in reading in this morning's edition of THE TIMES the article entitled "Breakfast for 13.7 Cents." As I am a housekeeper with no large amount of money at my command I am naturally interested in all efforts after economy. I think the girls taking the domestic science course at Teachers College are to be congratulated not for their knowledge of weights and measures or their keen insight into fractions, but for the market where they purchase their supplies. He who owns this market must indeed be a Christian gentleman to sell a haddock for 14 cents and apples for baking at 6 cents.

I am ready to acknowledge that the proprietor of my market is a veritable heathen, for he will part with no haddock for less than 28 cents and asks 18 cents a quart for apples to bake. I am sorry that the students feel that they have been extravagant in spending 14 cents for haddock and I wonder what meat they would have purchased for less. Surely it would not have been the "fatted calf," alluded to in the Scriptures, but a sort of "domestic science fry."

It is in no spirit of sarcasm that I write, but rather to advise all who would go to housekeeping to find the address of the market patronized by the Teachers College before they take the fatal leap.

HOUSEKEEPER.

Brooklyn, March 26, 1906.

THE VERSATILE KAISER.

Makes Speeches and Relates His Experiences in Armor.

On Monday morning, March 12, the German Kaiser arrived in Wilhelmshaven on board the battleship Kaiser Wilhelm II. At 10 o'clock he swore in the naval recruits and made a short speech urging the men to remember the great deeds of the German people

The day before he delivered a lecture on old armor at the Castle in Berlin before five sculptors and several Court officials. Of this episode the Berlin correspondent of The London Chronicle writes, it will be remembered that some time ago his Majesty announced his intention to place five bronze statues of the Princes of Orange on the terrace in front of the Schloss. The Kaiser is a thorough master of the history of the most brilliant period of the House of Orange, and as he is descended from this house he decided to set up these statues in front of his Berlin residence.

The five sculptors who appeared had been commissioned to make statues, and came with plaster models of their work. It was these five models which supplied the Kaiser with the text for his lecture. Among other interesting things said by his Majesty was his remark that he once himself fastened on armor with the object of seeing whether he could move freely. He could not, and he came to the conclusion that, although men of a former age wore this heavy harness, they were not as strong as modern men or capable of so much endurance.

Practical Reform.

From The Chicago Tribune.

"Senator," asked the reporter, "is there likely to be any reform legislation in the near future?"

"Probably not," answered the eminent statesman, "but the conviction is growing that there ought to be a change in the form of administering the oath in courts of justice."

"In what respect?"

"Well, it is felt that a witness should be sworn merely to tell the truth and nothing but the truth. Telling the whole truth is not only unnecessary in most cases, but is sometimes highly injudicious."

ARTISTIC PHILOSOPHY.

Jef Leempoels Depicts the Wretchedness of Great Painters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An article on the art page of last Sunday's issue, in which your critic was kind enough to refer to my little exhibition at Knoedler's, has interested me very much. I agree heartily with its general point of view, which I may characterize as artistic philosophy. Yes, your critic is perfectly right, we do usually paint somewhat hurriedly and superficially, just as if nature, the master of us all, also made things hurriedly and incompletely.

Just think of what a miracle of mechanism a figure is! What a miracle of mechanism and expression is an eye! And ask yourself whether it is not somewhat overweening in pride on the part of an artist to pretend to render an object with a sweep of the brush suddenly applied in a moment of inspiration.

The great artists who were also deep thinkers—Dürer and Leonardo da Vinci, not to speak of others—were they not geniuses though they were wretched because they could not get nearer to nature? The former wrote that an artist, no matter how great he might be, should be very respectful toward nature in his works and look on nature with all his eyes, all his naiveté, just like a child, and not treat her according to his whim, like a master and dominator. The other, Leonardo da Vinci, after three years of effort and devotion, in order to realize the Joconda in the Louvre, which passes universally for an immortal masterpiece, he threw away his palette in despair at his inability to achieve a more complete work.

Think also of the incalculable number of sketches, drawings, studies of all kinds which artists who carried on the grand traditions executed before beginning a definitive work. For they did not work for the ephemeral fashion of the day, but for eternity. And as your critic very truly says, one cannot live with an empty, noisy work. It is known that a work quickly made is quickly seen—and forgot!

And in corroboration of what we both believe I find in an authoritative article in Le Journal of Paris of March 14, which I received in to-day's mail, over the signature of Gustave Geffroy, one of the leaders of art criticism in Paris, the following statement:

"An artist is a man who ought to remain all his life a pupil—I mean a sensitive scholar—always anxious to understand better and learn more."

MANNERS AND THE CRITIC.

Mary Mortimer Maxwell's Observations and Others Discussed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Nature certainly dropped us upon the wrong continent. Not only do we agree with "An Englishwoman in New York," in her comments upon American manners and customs, but these comments fill a long-consuming distaste for and dissent from the "tricks and manners" of our own sex in this country.

The habits of the other are not now under discussion. The American husband does not own himself, nor his wife, nor his children, nor anything that is his.

F. W. H.

Tarrytown, N. Y., March 29, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note with interest the fears of "The Southern Woman" that, owing to the defense of our liege lords by a Miss Mary Mortimer Maxwell, (undoubtedly a spinster,) she ("The Southern Woman") fears our men may assume the role of "abused angels."

Allay your fears. So long as the New York men have such "gauche" manners, particularly the habit of staring at and attempting flirtations with anything in woman's garb, they bar themselves from such a role.

Having lived abroad for many years, I was shocked upon my return to find our "ideal" man had "left" New York, and that what remained was shockingly crude and spoiled.

The actual moral standard in the capitals of Europe and South America may be broader than ours, but the men of those countries know how to conduct themselves in public places.

A READER.

New York, March 29, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am an American daughter, an American wife, an American mother, and an American grandmother! I have seen the tender consideration on the part of the American husband and the gentle love of the American wife for both husband and children, relations which in no wise conflict.

I say God be thanked for the noble men and women who have been reared by the American wife and mother, and all honor to the American husband and father who has been her stay and loving support.

AN AMERICAN.

New York, March 25, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of to-day "A Southern Woman" vouchsafes the information that "the lack of manners of the New York man in the car strikes me particularly."

It may be of interest to state that I came up in the car with "A Southern Woman" last night. Although there probably were seats in the front and rear of the train, she entered the most crowded part, knowing full well there was a seat there for her, to wit, mine. She took up a position in front of me, and feebly reached for the strap. When she secured it she dingle-dangled therefrom, swaying helplessly back and forth every time the train started or stopped, looking appealingly down at me meanwhile. She stamped on my feet, she poked her elbow into my paper, she jabbed my pet corn with her umbrella, she dropped her copy of "East Lynne" in my lap, and, in short, committed a hundred and thirty-nine different atrocities, until I surrendered, and, meekly picking up my bird cage, my leg of lamb, my watering pot, and my lamp shade—I live slightly out of the city—I gave her the seat.

Do you think that was gallantry? Well, it wasn't. It was cowardice, downright cowardice, and I hated myself for doing it. She didn't mind being the centre of a scene, but I did. By the way, I think she thanked me for the seat.

THOROUGHLY DISGUSTED.

New York, March 29, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to the five questions of "Disillusioned," in your issue of to-day, as to how many American-born women can do various kinds of cooking experience teaches me that the answers are:

Toast bacon properly, 40 per cent.
Broil meat, 80 per cent.
Make piecrust, 55 per cent.
Bake tea biscuit, 90 per cent.
Make a cup of coffee, 60 per cent.

The young women brought up to marry millionaires are of a class who seldom have to cook, but can if put to it. We are a wise people, and bring up our girls so that they can both cook and earn a living in other ways.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to express my appreciation of the splendid service you give in your paper. It is so generally good all around that I can hardly discriminate. It is the best and greatest daily newspaper in America.

IN THE MORAL CEMETERY?

Why Is There No Hitting Back by Men Whose Character Is Assailed?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Among the lost arts we Americans may include the art of self-defense. The most remarkable feature of all these terrific attacks on character, now so prevalent, is that nothing follows. One used to think that when a man was hit he would hit back; but to-day the Tarbells, the Lawsons, the Hugheses and the rest of the character wreckers strike no answering spark.

Do you hear the dull thud of defense? Absolute silence. Macaulay wrote a terrific "yellow" essay on Barriere, but no reply followed—because Barriere was dead. Are our prominent men morally dead?

COSTA RICANS LAW ABIDING.

Consul General Ulloa Describes Conditions in That Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last evening's and this morning's papers published some sensational articles about Costa Rican politics, and, as the statements made are not only unjust but unfair to the Government I have the honor to represent here as Consul General, I request you to publish in your valuable newspaper the true state of affairs which I have the pleasure of expressing in this letter.

Don Ascension Esquivel, the actual President of Costa Rica, is a very honorable man and one of our foremost statesmen. His term of office, which began on the 8th of May, 1902, expires on May 8 next. He does not intend to continue in office, and all he wants is to preserve public order and to guarantee the constitutional right for the election of President and Deputies to Congress, which is exercised in Costa Rica every four years.

We do not believe in revolution in Costa Rica; the last one and the largest one we ever had took place in 1870, and since then elections have been held regularly and peacefully. The revolution of 1870 was nothing in comparison to the smallest of your street riots or strikes.

According to our laws, the primary elections took place in November last, and of the five candidates for the Presidency, Mr. Cleto Gongalez Viquez obtained the largest number of votes, 23,422, against 38,032, divided among the other four candidates. Some of the members of the political parties of Mr. Fernandez, Mr. Soto, and Mr. Ziniga tried to obtain by force that which they could not get legally, and organized a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of Mr. Esquivel and to prevent the election of Mr. Gongalez Viquez, who is the candidate of the majority, and in whose party are included the greater percentage of the best Costa Ricans.

The Government of Mr. Esquivel was aware of the plans of the conspirators, and by timely action prevented their success, and assured public order, giving ample guarantees to all the law-abiding citizens. As a result a few Costa Ricans were exiled from the country, and as everything is quiet there now the secondary elections will take place on the 1st of April next.

We do not rule things by military force in Costa Rica, as is clearly demonstrated by the fact that we have three times as many teachers in our public schools as soldiers in our standing army. We are peace-abiding people, and we exert ourselves in the development of agriculture and industry. We try to march as fast as we can in the path of the nations which lead in all kinds of progress, as can be easily demonstrated by our statistics.

Life and property are religiously respected in Costa Rica, and we never have had during our history as a nation a single case of a foreign claim for abuses of any kind.

JUAN J. ULLOA,
Consul General of Costa Rica to the United States.

New York, March 29, 1906.

What Is the Matter with Him?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer is aware of the fact that THE TIMES is in no sense a physical culture journal, but in such matters one sometimes gets better satisfaction, through your correspondents than through all the health publications and doctors in existence. That is the writer's excuse for seeking such advice through your columns. For five years I have not known what it is to feel refreshed from sleep upon awakening in the morning, but always feel as though I could sleep soundly all day. Often during the afternoon I find difficulty in keeping awake at my desk. Aside from this trouble, my general health is very good. Perhaps some reader who has been "there" can give me some light as to the cause of my trouble and suggest a remedy.

WEARY WAKENER.

New York, March 30, 1906.

An Interrogation of Size.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Board of Education's rule prohibiting children from attending its lectures is outrageous. Dr. J. F. Terriberry is fully justified in making a complaint about his children being excluded.

I am a boy of 16 years of age and am rather small for my age, being 4 feet 11 inches in height. On the bulletins announcing the lectures are the words: "School Children Not Admitted." I am not attending school, but because of my size I am not admitted.

I hope there will be some improvement in this order which will allow those who work to enter without producing a working certificate. I wish to get some knowledge.

The Seventh Avenue Cars.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with much interest recent editorials in the newspapers relative to the management of the Seventh Avenue car line. The service on this line is vile and a menace to the public, instead of a convenience.

The number of cars is insufficient, and those that do operate on this line are draughty, dirty, and indecent for public service. At the transferring points one is obliged to wait sometimes from fifteen to twenty minutes for cars in either direction.

I quite agree with the reader's article in Tuesday's TIMES, that "it is high time for the people to act."

SILENT NIGHT.

In dreamy realms of poetry there is a kind of night
That fills poetic natures with inordinate delight.
It's balmy as the dickens, softly lingers o'er the lea,
And is filled with nothing doing to a scandalous degree.

For stanza after stanza the moon is on the job,
Abetted by a night wind with a complicated sob,
While, 'mid the awful silence, silence plentiful and deep,
The world at large is wholly and aggressively asleep.

I once blew in on silence as bad as that, or worse;
Ten thousand bards ecstatic were catching it in verse.
At once I made two noises, three sounds and half a din—
The world woke up and thanked me and asked me to step in.

PERILS THAT WOMEN FIND IN ATHLETICS

Dr. Sargent Warns Them Against Emulating Men in Sports.

DANGERS OF COMPETITION

Let Women Stick to Lighter and Graceful Forms of Exercise, Says Harvard's Physical Director.

According to opinions expressed by authorities who addressed the Public School Physical Training Society at a mass meeting held last evening at the hall of the Board of Education in Fifty-ninth Street, woman for her own good should not strive to emulate man in the more strenuous forms of athletics, particularly competitive games, and should pursue physical training merely for recreation and pleasure.

These views were expressed at the first mass meeting on athletics for women that has ever been held in this country, and they are likely to affect the action of the educational authorities of this city, who intend to devote considerable attention to the question of athletics for women.

City Supt. Maxwell, who acted as Chairman of the meeting, got back briefly at some of his fads and frills critics.

"Some time ago," he said, "authorities of the financial department attacked the so-called fads and frills. I know not if physical training is a fad or a frill. But I do know that when the matter was referred to the people of this city they declared that progress should not be delayed, and there was no greater outburst in favor of any movement than that in favor of physical training. The people favor physical training because they see we are trying to give the child, hemmed in as he is in this city, an opportunity to develop physically."

Dr. Dudley Sargent, Physical Director at Harvard University, was the principal speaker. He struck the keynote of the evening in a discussion of "What athletic games, if any, are injurious for women in the form in which they are played by men?" Dr. Sargent said:

"In physical education women should not be expected to excel in physical exercises which are adapted to men, nor should they be required to teach athletics to men and boys, as is the case in some of the schools in the West. Such a requirement is not only injurious to the women, but equally injurious to the men. Let woman rather confine herself to the lighter and more graceful forms of gymnastics and athletics, and make herself supreme along these lines as she has already done in aesthetic dancing. Let her know enough about the rougher sports to be the sympathetic admirer of men and boys in their efforts to be strong, vigorous, and heroic.

"While admiring and applauding all there is in athletics which tends to make boys courageous and manly, let her not hesitate to condemn all that tends to make them mean, vicious, and cowardly. Let woman use her influence in trying to raise football and some of the rougher athletic games from their barbaric stage to a standard more in keeping with our present civilization, and she will do more for the moral and physical welfare of herself and the community than she could possibly do by entering the arena as a competitor in these contests."

The forms of gymnastics to which woman should confine herself Dr. Sargent classified thus: All forms of dancing, calisthenics, and light gymnastics, archery, lawn tennis, swimming, field hockey, lacrosse, sprint running, bicycling, rowing, canoeing, golf, skating, fencing, and all gymnastic plays and games. These were the athletic exercises and games, he thought, to which women were best adapted and in which they were most likely to excel.

Among the athletic sports and games that would be likely to prove injurious to most women, if played in the form in which they are played by men, Dr. Sargent particularly mentioned football, ice hockey, basket ball, boxing, pole vaulting, heavy gymnastics. These games prove injurious to women, he said, because of the limitations imposed upon her by her physical configuration, the tendency to become masculine in form and character if she tries to excel in masculine pursuits, and her inability to bear a prolonged mental and physical strain.

Nevertheless, he declared these sports and games could be so modified as to meet the peculiar requirements of woman, with the result that all of them could be played by her with reasonable hope of physical, mental, and moral development.

In his discussion of "Athletics from a Biological Viewpoint," Dr. Luther H. Gulick, President of the society, struck substantially the same note as Dr. Sargent by saying:

"I believe that athletics for women should for the present be restricted to sport within the school; that it should be used for recreation and pleasure; that the strenuous training of teams tends to be damaging to both body and mind, and that public general competition emphasizes qualities that are, on the whole, unnecessary and undesirable in women. Let us, then, have athletics for recreation, but not for serious public competition."

In the course of the day demonstrations of elementary and high school gymnastics, games, and athletics were given for the benefit of the members of the society. In the morning, at Public School No. 6, Madison Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street, of which Miss Katherine D. Blake and M. J. Thompson are Principals, a demonstration of regular physical training in the elementary schools was given, under the direction of Miss Jessie H. Bancroft, Assistant Director of Physical Training.

In the afternoon, at the Wadleigh High School, 114th Street, west of Seventh Avenue, an exhibition of athletics for girls, including indoor baseball, indoor hockey, and putting the shot, was given by the members of the Wadleigh Athletic Association.

HARLAN NOT TO RETIRE.

Justice Hopes to be on the Bench for Many Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The report was published to-day that Justice Harlan had promised, at a church meeting last night, to resign from the Supreme Court and give his attention to church work if certain conditions were complied with.

"I have made no such announcement," said Justice Harlan to-night. "It is true that I have quite often expressed my interest in the scheme for erecting a church at the National capital and have expressed my willingness to do all in my power to bring success to such a movement. But I never have promised that I would leave the bench on that account.

"I am in just that frame of mind on the whole subject that I can retire without any particular regret and without becoming lonesome in my life. My work is agreeable to me, and it may be that I will remain on the bench all my natural life, or at least until I am warned by those near me that the time has come for me to quit. I hope that it is many years off."

BIG AMUSEMENT DEAL.

Thompson & Dundy to Establish a Resort at Fort George.

Thompson & Dundy, proprietors of the New York Hippodrome and Luna Park, announced yesterday that they had obtained a twenty-year lease of the Jennings estate, comprising 100 city lots, at Fort George, where they will establish an immense amusement enterprise unlike anything in existence and to be known as Vanity Fair. The property overlooks the Harlem River.

The twenty-year lease is divided into three periods of equal duration, with a yearly rental of $20,000 for the first, $30,000 for the second, and $40,000 for the third period, making an average yearly rental of $30,000.

When questioned last night Frederic Thompson stated that the firm's plans were entirely embryonic at the present time.

"We have had our eyes on this property for some time," he said, "as we have always believed that the upper end of Manhattan Island is splendidly adapted to a high-class amusement resort, embracing, as it does, an immense population, which hitherto has never had a place such as we intend to establish, where the Summer and Winter evenings could be pleasantly spent. We have leased this property as a speculation, intending to make from year to year the improvements Mr. Dundy and I can afford.

"The amusement palace we propose to build will differ in character from anything in existence, and will be constructed exclusively by Thompson & Dundy."

TO CANCEL AMPHION LICENSE.

Clergyman's Suit, Based on Sunday Shows, Greatly Interests Managers.

Complaint that the manager of the Amphion Theatre in Brooklyn had disobeyed the law regulating Sunday performances was made yesterday before Justice Southerland in the Supreme Court by the Rev. Dr. William S. Chase. With this was coupled a demand that the license of the theatre be revoked.

The complaint made by the clergyman is under Section 1,476 of the charter, which forbids Sunday performances, and not only provides for revocation of a license on conviction, but also prevents an appeal.

Ex-Judge A. J. Dittenhoefer, representing the defendants, said yesterday that the Amphion case was, without doubt, the most serious one yet brought in the matter of Sunday entertainment in theatres. He contended that the complaint should be brought by the city through the Corporation Counsel, and not by an outsider, and he disputed the jurisdiction of the court, raising the point that the Penal Code supersedes the charter provision. The Penal Code provides punishment for violation of the Sunday law, but does not take as radical a course as the charter. A conviction is appealable under the Penal Code, and there is no forfeiture of license.

Theatrical managers all over the city who feel that the fate of Sunday entertainments is in the balance are watching the case with great interest. Justice Southerland directed counsel to submit briefs next Monday.

ACTORS BUY REAL ESTATE.

Hopper and Daniels Now Long Island Property Holders.

De Wolf Hopper and Frank Daniels yesterday purchased jointly from the Rickert-Finlay Real Estate Company the old Douglas Manor and estate on Long Island, near Hempstead Bay. The real estate covers 143 city lots, and the price paid was $110,000. The comedians will build homes for themselves there, and hold the rest of the land for speculation.

Mr. Daniels has been very successful in real estate ventures in the past, but this is Mr. Hopper's first essay in the field. The new-made partners are contemplating the purchase of another tract on Long Island near Long Beach, the estimated cost of which is $40,000.

MR. MANSFIELD AS GLOSTER.

A Vivid and Compelling Portrait of the Bloody Tyrant.

Richard Mansfield acted the Duke of Gloster at the New Amsterdam Theatre last night, again employing his modified and now tolerably familiar version of the combined Cibber and Shakespeare "Richard III."

As an acting achievement Mr. Mansfield's Gloster stands in the foremost rank of his creations, compelling admiration alike as a study in character and in dramatic expressiveness. This Gloster has little of the traditional violence, and in its subtle blending of moods, its steadily cumulative power, and magnificent physchological suggestion, it must be regarded as one of the most proficient and satisfying examples of poetic acting today before the public.

Beginning in a note of whimsical cynicism, it passes naturally into a deeper key of cold, malignant, and astute evil, energetic, resourceful, conscienceless, and overpowering. There is a steady crescendo up to the moment of the vision on Bosworth Field; then body and mind, seemingly drained of their power, unite in a final conflict; but it is the conflict of desperation. The brute man has given way to the brute beast, and the creature that faces Richmond on the field is more like some hard-pressed, hunted animal than human.

Mr. Mansfield's Richard, like his Shylock, is a great achievement in Shakespearean acting, and deserves the appreciative testimony reserved for histrionic art at its very best.

Circus Young Woman to Show Why She Doesn't Dislocate Her Neck.

Mlle. Octavie La Tour, who sits in the automobile that turns a somersault in the air twice a day at the Barnum & Bailey Circus, will give a private acrobatic exhibition at the Garden this morning.

The press agent assures the public that many persons have demanded to be informed how the young woman is able to endure the shock of her performance without dislocating her neck. This morning she will try to demonstrate the principles of relaxation and rigidity which she employs in the automobile somersault.

NINE FIRMS COMPETE FOR NEW THEATRE PLANS

Rules for the Architects Approved by Committee.

$750 FOR PLANS NOT USED

Theatre Will Have Seating Capacity for 2,000—Stage to be 85 by 100 Feet.

The rules to govern the competition for the selection of an architect for New Theatre, have been approved by the founders and a building committee named with power to engage the successful competitor.

The committee includes Charles T. Barney, Otto H. Kahn, Harry Payne Whitney, Eliot Gregory, and H. R. Winthrop. Upon its invitation these architects have agreed to participate in the competition: Barney & Chapman, Carrere & Hastings, Delano & Aldrich, J. H. Freedlander, Hoppin, Koen & Huntington, George B. Post & Sons, Robertson & Potter, Trowbridge & Livingston, and Warren & Wetmore. No other architects will be allowed to compete, except in the event of the retirement of one of the original competitors, who are to be paid $750 each for their plans in case they are not accepted.

This jury has been named by the Building Committee to prepare a programme of the competition, see to its management, and make the award: Charles T. Barney, Otto H. Kahn, H. R. Winthrop, Heinrich Conried, Stanford White, Donn Barber, and Edgar V. Seeler. The successful architect will be compensated on the basis of 6 per cent. on the total cost of the theatre.

The jury will meet the architects at Mr. Barney's residence this morning. The drawings are to be delivered not later than April 21, and the jury will endeavor to report its decision to the Building Committee by May 1.

The New Theatre is to stand on the block fronting Central Park West, between Sixty-second and Sixty-third Streets. It is intended to conform to the Continental type of theatre, in which provision is made for a foyer, grand staircases, ample retiring and cloak rooms, smoking rooms, entrances, elevators, a restaurant, a confectionery store, and a florist's shop.

The plans provide for a stage 85 feet deep by about 100 feet wide. The height from the level of the stage to the loft is to be 108 feet, divided by fly galleries. The stage itself is to be on a level with the sidewalk to facilitate the entrance of scenery. The width of the proscenium arch is to be about 45 feet, and its height about 40 feet.

The auditorium is to be arranged with a parquet, two tiers of boxes, and two or three galleries above the boxes. The seating capacity is to be about 2,000. A portion of the roof is to enclosed under glass as a palm garden. There will also be a room for use as a dramatic school.

SPANKING LED TO WEDDING.

An Adventure Wherein Appears Another Blessing in Disguise.

Mrs. Maria Pissasegella of 308 East 105th Street spanked her 18-year-old daughter Julia two weeks ago for borrowing some money without her knowledge. She took the girl across her knee and laid on with a slipper until both mother and daughter were tired. Then Julia departed into the night.

The girl stayed with friends for a day or two, and got work in a cigar factory. One night she met Joseph Parodi of 1,452 Third Avenue, a young waiter, on the street. She ran up to him and straightway fell to weeping on his shoulder.

"Oh, Joe," she sobbed, "mother spanked me and I ran away. You know I love you, Joe, and perhaps you can tell me what to do."

Joe's advice was short and to the point. "Let's get married, Julia," he said. "I'm sure you don't love me half as much as I do you."

They got married forthwith, and Joe took his bride home. Yesterday somebody whispered something to Mrs. Pissasegella that made her frown. She threw a shawl over her head and started out for a policeman. Joe was arrested on the charge of abduction and the young couple, the angry mother, and many chattering friends went to the Harlem Court.

The young bride pleaded for her husband and told Magistrate Crane the whole story. He said he thought it a very pretty romance. When the mother learned that her daughter was married the frown left her brow.

"It's a queer way to start a wedding—with a spanking," she said.

The charge against Parodi was dismissed, and, followed by the court's blessing, the young couple left the court, the mother and her friends chattering after them.

STAFF DINES THE GOVERNOR.

What Was Sung Is Known, but What Was Said Is Not.

Gov. Higgins last night was the guest of honor at a dinner tendered him by the members of his staff at the University Club. It was strictly a private affair.

The Governor arrived from Albany at 8 o'clock and went to the club immediately. The menu card exhibited the following verses, which were sung to the tune of "Nobody Works But Father":

We love to love the Governor.
 We love the Empire State;
How much we love each other
 'Tis idle to relate.
Excelsior's our motto—
 Excelsior's the stuff;
It may be nice in other States, but New York's good enough;
 You bet your sabre.

We all go to work but the General—
 He sits 'round all day.
He only has to run the Guard
 And send the staff their pay.
He writes us very seldom,
 Then only has to say:
"Travel enjoined is for the State,"
 The staff turns up next day;
You bet your sabre.

All the members of the Governor's staff were present, and every person present was in full uniform except the Governor.

URGE ACTION IN CONGO.

Massachusetts Governor and Officials Appeal to President.

BOSTON, March 30.—A petition relating to conditions in the Congo Free State, signed by many of the officials of this State, was forwarded to President Roosevelt to-night.

The signers are headed by Gov. Curtis Guild, Jr., and include Lieut. Gov. Draper, all the members of the Executive Council, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, and a large majority of the members of both branches of the Legislature.

Besides heading the petition, Gov. Guild wrote a personal letter to the President strongly indorsing it.

The petition declares that intolerable wrongs are being perpetrated in the Congo region, and urges the immediate consideration of such forms of protest and influence as may fittingly be used by the American people for the promotion of just international procedure.

BURGLARS TOOK THE DOG.

Busy Marauders in the Bronx Made a Clean Sweep.

Burglars were busy in the Bronx Tuesday morning. They visited three places and secured a lot of silverware, liquors, and cigars. In one home they stole the watch dog.

This was in the three-story brick residence of John Waters, 678 East 134th Street, where an entrance was effected through a rear door. In the dining room the buglars found an Edison phonograph, a dress suit case containing 50 records, and "Teddy," a watch dog, which was presented by Mr. Waters to his son a few days previously. If the dog made any noise when picked up by the intruders none of the family heard it.

At the home of W. L. Byrnes at 702 East 134th Street, the burglars got away with $1,500 worth of silverware and a Persian lamb coat belonging to Mr. Byrnes's daughter, Adelaide. At John Eckler's saloon, 143 Alexander Avenue, liquors and cigars were taken.

ISAAC TOWNSEND SMITH DEAD

He Was the Union League Club's Oldest Member.

Isaac Townsend Smith, oldest member of the Union League Club and a man identified with mercantile and banking interests of New York for at least half a century, died yesterday of pneumonia at his home, 14 East Sixtieth Street. He is survived by his daughter, Mrs. George B. Loring, with whom he lived at the time of his death.

Mr. Smith was known as the oldest Consul in the world. He was born in Boston, March 12, 1813. After a primary education in the schools of Boston he attended Partridge's Military School at Middletown, Conn., and the Norwich University, of which he was the oldest living degree graduate at the time of his death. He married a daughter of Judge Putnam of the Supreme Court of the State of Massachusetts.

Mr. Smith early entered commercial life as a supercargo. He made voyages to Java, Manila, Singapore, China, and South America, and then settled in this city as a ship owner.

He was one of the incorporators of the Metropolitan Savings Bank of this city, and was for many years its President. He was also a Commissioner of Immigration for the State of New York and a Presidential Elector in 1864, when Abraham Lincoln was re-elected.

For the past half century Mr. Smith was in intimate touch with the Siamese Government as its Financial Agent, Consul, and Consul General.

As a shipowner, with knowledge of the Orient, he first came in touch with Siam in 1852 when he was asked to prepare models and drawings of two ships needed by Siam at that time.

He prepared the plans and had the machinery built in this country. To transport this machinery became a problem, and A. A. Low, the father of the ex-Mayor, managed to provide him with the transportation facilities. When the Crown Prince of Siam visited this city the then Mayor Low, Mr. Smith, and the grandson of the King, who had ordered Mr. Smith to build his ships for him, sat at the same table.

Mr. Smith celebrated his ninety-third birthday anniversary on March 12. Joseph H. Choate, Gen. Horace Porter, and other prominent men called to congratulate him, while letters were received from President Roosevelt and many other leading men.

The funeral services will be held at the Madison Avenue Baptist Church to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

GEORGIA WELLES DEAD.

Was Leading Woman in "The Clansman"—Victim of Appendicitis.

Miss Georgia Welles, leading woman of "The Clansman," the play of Thomas Dixon, Jr., died at the General Memorial Hospital yesterday from the effects of an operation for appendicitis performed on March 21.

Owing to the fact that Miss Welles had delayed the operation for three days, her physicians held out but little hope for her, and she was informed a week ago that she would die. She was stricken with what was diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning in Baltimore on the Saturday night prior to the day of the operation. She returned to New York, and on the following Monday evening appeared in her part at the Harlem Opera House, but the next day was obliged to stop work. On Wednesday her sister, who had lived with her in West 102d Street, insisted that she should go to the hospital.

Miss Welles made her first appearance with the Murray Hill Stock Company, playing ingénue rôles. The following season she was leading woman with Dustin Farnum in "The Virginian." For one season she was leading woman for Louis Mann. Her funeral will take place from her late residence to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The interment will be at Woodlawn.

A Story in Five Chapters

I.

What form of human capacity now yields the largest return in money?

That question was put to the head of the Freuch branch of the Rothschild banking house.

His answer was: "Concentration."

II.

Mental dissipation means weakness and failure; mental concentration means power and success.

The newspaper habit is producing mental dissipation. The eye flits from headline to headline like a capricious butterfly.

We get a mass of unrelated facts and undigested knowledge. We know of everything; we know nothing.

III.

This condition has produced a remedy.

A new school of periodical literature has been evolved that aims to co-ordinate the news of the world; to set facts in their relations; to tell what they mean; to discriminate, select, reproduce, and interpret; to give all sides and to make one-half the world understand how the other half think.

This school is ably represented by such valuable periodicals as The Review of Reviews, The Literary Digest, Public Opinion, and the oldest and yet newest of them all, Current Literature.

IV.

Current Literature is the oldest in the sense of being first in the field. It inaugurated the school. It is the newest because, under the new editorship of Edward J. Wheeler, it represents the latest developments of that school.

It has poise, brilliancy, human interest, vitality; and the public are finding it out. In four months its subscription list has increased more than fourfold.

V.

The April number of Current Literature is just out. To read it is a mental tonic; it widens the reader's view, strengthens his grasp, quickens his interest, and tones up his whole intellectual system. All newsstands.

HOPES TO SPAN THE SEA.

De Forest Company Aims at Wireless Traffic with Great Britain.

The De Forest Wireless Telegraph system is trying to establish permanent communication between the United States and Great Britain.

C. C. Galbraith, General Manager of the company, said yesterday that the whole project was yet in an experimental stage, but that the coast of Ireland had been reached in a preliminary sense and that experiments were being made every day, in the hope that the operators in America could reach a "pitch" for the instruments which might make communication with the other side a substantial reality.

"On this side of the Atlantic," he said, "we have established stations at Ottawa, Manhattan Beach, Key West, and New Orleans, all representing a graduated increase of distance from our stations on the west coast of Ireland and on the coast of Scotland. Kites are being used in making experiments. We have only gone far enough to try the 'tunes' and 'pitches' of our instruments. We change the 'tune' every five minutes in our experiments, in the hope of getting a material sympathy between the two sides. This will come in time, we feel sure."

JOCKEY MILLER HISSED FOR HIS POOR RIDING

Hocus Pocus Not a Factor in Her Race at Benning.

BIVOUAC WINS IN A DRIVE

Three Favorites and Three Outsiders First in Light Rain and on Heavy Track.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—A card that promised excellent sport attracted a large crowd to the races at Benning to-day, despite the inclement weather. A light rain, which began to fall last night, continued during the greater part of the afternoon. In consequence the track was as heavy as it has been at any time during the week. Notwithstanding the bad conditions, however, the races as a whole were the best thus far of the meeting. Three heavily played favorites and three outsiders won, and all of the latter had plenty of supporters.

The best race of the day was the third. Hocus Pocus was the favorite, partly on account of her fine race on Tuesday and partly on account of her jockey, Miller. Tickle was a strong second favorite. Bivouac, never better than 8 to 1, made all the running, and in a drive won from Tickle in 1:16 for the six furlongs. It was a rather startling reversal of form, as Bivouac was beaten by Tickle on Tuesday in the same kind of going in 1:19. Hocus Pocus was not a factor, and Miller was hissed for his work when he rode back to the stand.

Chieftain won the first race in a hard drive from Brush Up. Blue Coat showed in front first, but was beaten at the turn into the stretch. Chieftain and Brush Up fought it out to the finish, but the former lasted the longest. Belmont's Scarlet and Maroon was in front practically all the way in the second race, Woodwitch being easily the best of the bunch. This, too, tells the story of the fourth, as Optical, always a hot favorite, won as he pleased. In a stirring drive High Brush nipped the place from Radical, which tired in the stretch.

Reidmoore had little difficulty in accounting for the fifth race, Delphie being able to do no better than second, with the strongly touted Workman in the ruck. Bill Curtis gave the old Duke of Kendall a beating in the sixth, the weight being too much for the veteran. "Pa" Daly got into the money with Sailor Boy. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upword; five and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Chieftan, 105 pounds, (T. Burns,) 8 to 5 and 4 to 5, won; Brush Up, 101, (McDaniel,) 5 to 1 and 8 to 5, second; Blue Coat, 106, (Robbins,) 25 to 1 and 10 to 1, third. Time—1:10. Echodale, Loricate, Hyperion, Lady Kispar, Monte Carlo, Paul Clifford, Foxy, and Baby Willie also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For maiden fillies, two years old; half mile, old course. Woodwitch, 105 pounds, (McDaniel,) even and 3 to 5, won; Bath Maria, 105, (Miller,) 7 to 5 and 3 to 5, second; Havana, 105, (T. Burns,) 12 to 1 and 5 to 1, third. Time—0:51. Mode, Mammymoo, Estelle H., Norwina, Willetta, Eminola, Windfall, Josephine L. Daly, and Wabash Queen also ran.

THIRD RACE.—For mares, three years old and upward; six furlongs, Columbia course. Bivouac, 89 pounds, (C. Morris,) 8 to 1 and 8 to 5, won; Tickle, 99, (McDaniel,) 6 to 5 and out, second; Society Bud, 92, (Chandler,) 30 to 1 and 4 to 1, third. Time—1:16. Go To Win and Hocus Pocus also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—For maidens, three years old; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Optical, 109 pounds, (W. Knapp,) 3 to 5 and out, won; High Brush, 112, (McDaniel,) 4 to 1 and 7 to 5, second; Radical, 112, (D. O'Connor,) 10 to 1 and 3 to 1, third. Time—1:26. W. W. Pierce, Lady Georgia, Donna, and Flatteress also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Reidmoore, 93 pounds, (Noone,) 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; Delphie, 107, (Powers,) 8 to 5 and 3 to 5, second; Jack McKeon, 109, (Miller,) 4 to 1 and 6 to 5, third. Time—1:30. Workman and Merlingo also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; one mile, Columbia course. Bill Curtis, 98 pounds, (Romanelli,) 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; Duke of Kendall, 116, (Helgersen,) 8 to 5 and 3 to 5, second; Sailor Boy, 103, (McDaniel,) 6 to 1 and 2½ to 1, third. Time—1:44 1-5. Yorkshire Lad, Caronal, Northville, Arsenal, and Bizzy Izzy also ran.

THE "GRAND NATIONAL" RUN.

Prince Hatzfeldt's Ascetic's Silver First at Good Odds.

LIVERPOOL, March 30.—The Grand National Steeplechase, of 2,750 sovereigns, a handicap for five years old and upward, about four miles and 850 yards, was run to-day at the Liverpool Spring meeting and was won by Prince Hatzfeldt's Ascetic's Silver. Red Lad was second, and Aunt May third. Twenty-three horses started.

Phil May, owned by "Mr. Cotton," (A. B. Gwathmey of New York,) raised the hopes of his supporters for a brief period. He speedily took the lead and piloted the field to Valentine's Brook. The favorite, "John M. P.," fell, and shortly afterward Oatlands took command.

Half way through the second round Prince Hatzfeldt's Ascetic's Silver, ridden by an amateur, the Hon A. Hastings, drew to the front, and making the remainder of the running, won by ten lengths. Two lengths separated second and third. The three placed horses were all outsiders. The betting against them was respectively 20 to 1, 33 to 1, and 25 to 1.

Swimmers Go Abroad To-day.

C. M. Daniels, the New York Athletic Club swimmer, and Marquand Schwartz of the Missouri Athletic Club, will sail on the New York for Europe to-day in advance of the rest of the American team en route for the Olympic Games at Athens. The pair will go direct to Paris, where they will take several days' practice to recover from the effect of their long idleness on board ship. From Paris they will go on to Naples and continue their practice there, awaiting the rest of the American team, accompanying the main body from there to Athens.

TRAINING AT GRAVESEND.

Horses Had Brisk Gallops in the Early Morning.

The trainers who were out early with their horses yesterday caught things just right at the Gravesend track, and had the benefit of fair conditions for exercising before the morning rain had any great effect on the going. Practically all the work that was done by the Long Island trainers was at Gravesend, however, the busiest establishment represented in the morning gallops being the stable handled by Fred Burlew.

The most notable horses that worked in the course of the day were the two Carter Handicap horses, Roseben and Jacquin. Roseben went out swinging under a strong pull, and could hardly be restrained to the moderate pace that was set for him, seven-furlong move in 1:41¼. Jacquin, looking to be in rugged health and rapidly approaching fitness for racing, covered seven furlongs in 1:45.

'Chaser Good and Plenty Retired.

Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., owner of the most successful stable of steeplechase horses that ever ran in one interest in America, has definitely determined that his famous steeplechase horse Good and Plenty, unbeaten last season, and the winner of the Whitney Memorial Cup and the New York Steeplechase Stakes, shall not race this season because of an ailing foot.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Work on the new jockey quarters at the Coney Island Jockey Club's Sheepshead Bay track has been completed. The structure stands close beside the race course, between the saddling paddock and chute out of which mile races are started, and the riders in their new quarters will be far removed from any connection with the crowds and tip seekers. The arrangement, with the new plan of uniformed valets, will make complete isolation for jockeys at the track.

The registration of a lease of two horses for a single race has been made with The Jockey Club by William Garth to Pierre Lorillard, Mr. Lorillard to get the benefit of the unusual lease this afternoon in the running of the Oxnard Dinner Stakes at Washington. The lease of running qualities for this race only privileges Mr. Lorillard to name and start either of the two-year-olds, Town Topics and Flip.

The status of the Walden Stable, successor to the stable that was raced last season for the estate of R. W. Walden, has been determined by the registration of a partnership with The Jockey Club, with three partners, Mrs. R. W. Walden, R. J. Walden, and W. W. Walden having equal interests in a stable of eight horses, one the three-year-old Changeable, and the others all two-year-olds.

The Columbia Stable, the most successful establishment that has represented Washington on the turf in several years, has been reduced by seven head through the leasing to William Garth of the steeplechase horse Docter Swarz and six two-year-olds.

A new Aste as associate with A. L. Aste, the bootblack turfman, has appeared on the turf in the announcement in the current number of The Racing Calendar of a partnership between A. L. and A. I. Aste, with one-half interest each in the seven horses of the Aste stable, these comprising the four-year-old Alwin, the three-year-old Hooray, and five two-year-olds.

Four stakes to be run at the Pimlico meeting, Baltimore, of the Maryland Jockey Club in April will close to-day. The big events of the stake schedule are the Clabaugh Memorial Cup, four and a half furlongs, for two-year-olds, and the Amateur Cup, one mile on the flat, for horses ridden by gentlemen jockeys.

The entries for the stakes of the inaugural meeting on the New England Breeders' Club track at Salem, N. H., have been announced, with a liberal list of nominations for twenty-five stakes, the chief fixture being the $5,000 New England Handicap at one mile and a furlong, for three-year-olds and upward.

AUTOISTS FAVOR TAX BY MOTOR CAR WEIGHT

Long Island Club Now Favors West End Association Bill.

SLIGHT CHANGES ADOPTED

Commission Will Bring State Annual Revenue of $250,000 and Members Serve Without Salary.

A long conference was held yesterday by the Governors of the Automobile Club of America upon automobile legislation in this State. All of the bills now before the Legislature were discussed at length, and it was definitely decided to support the L'Hommedieu bill, which provides for the taxation of all automobiles registered in this State on the basis of $1 per 100 pounds above the first 500 pounds. In other words 500 pounds is exempt from taxation. The proceeds are to be devoted entirely to the improvement of highways, so that automobilists will at the same time be contributing to the maintenance of good roads.

Winthrop E. Scarritt, W. W. Niles, and S. M. Butler, the committee apointed by the club to attend the hearing Wednesday at Albany, presented an exhaustive report of their conference with members of other clubs throughout the State upon the provisions of the Stanley bill. The legislative hearing was postponed until next Wednesday. Owing to the inability of some members of the same committee to attend next week, President Dave Hennen Morris was requested to represent the club at that time.

The Governors yesterday, as they did Tuesday, authorized the representatives to use their discretion in favoring or opposing the Stanley bill. This bill has attracted perhaps greater interest than any other automobile bill at Albany this session, owing to the fact that it was introduced through the efforts of the West End Association of this city. The bill was practically drawn up by members of the Governing Board of the Automobile Club of America, but owing to influence brought to bear by the clubs up the State the club here decided not to introduce the bill, allowing the present law to have another year's trial. Since the West End Association took the matter up in the endeavor to secure reasonable and more just automobile legislation than is possible under the existing laws, owners of motor cars have studied the bill with considerable care, and it is being received with more favorable consideration.

At the conference in Albany between the various automobile club representatives it was discovered that a number of the delegates had little accurate knowledge of what the bill really means. This is the bill that establishes an Automobile Commission to have general supervision of motoring, grant and forfeit licenses, and discipline reckless drivers. It also provides for a uniform speed limit of twenty miles an hour all over the State under reasonable conditions.

The conference has already resulted in some important changes of opinion. The Long Island Automobile Club delegates went to Albany primed to oppose the bill. Dr. Richardson, their spokesman, after studying the bill and becoming better informed upon its reasonable features, stated plainly before he left Albany that he would favor it. On his return the Long Island Club Directors met and discussed the matter, with the result that the club is now a strong supporter of the bill.

John C. Coleman, counsel for the West End Association, who was mainly instrumental for the introduction of the bill, said yesterday that his association was determined to exert its utmost to secure the passage of the bill. One or two minor changes have been made. One of the most important now provides that any chauffeur or other person using a motor vehicle without the permission of the owner is guilty of a misdemeanor. Another change makes it possible for an automobilist when arrested to furnish an indemnity bond by a guarantee or indemnity company as security for bail.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Charles J. Glidden, the world-touring automobilist, writes from Ceylon that he has just concluded a tour of 477 miles with his wife in that island south of India. His present tour since he landed in India last December has covered 5,391 miles, 509 miles being in Burmah. His total mileage by motor car during his four years' touring is 30,491.

The control of five additional automobile patents has just been secured by the Associated Patents Company, which is affiliated with the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers. These patents include improvements upon gears, clutches, and other mechanical contrivances now in use on the best cars.

Sidney S. Gorham, Secretary of the American Automobile Association, will return to this city from Chicago on Tuesday. President Farson will also come to New York during the week and will be present at the Directors' meeting on Thursday. Paul Deming, Chairman of the Touring Committee, will probably announce his committee and hold his first meeting during the same week.

With the election of a number of new members by the Motor Boat Club of Amerfca next month, the total membership will reach close to the hundred mark. Among them are many prominent automobilists who will own motor boats for the first time this season.

One of the new Thomas cars has been entered in several of the Atlantic City automobile races late in April. It will compete in the leading touring car events and will probably enter one or two of the special events for racing cars.

Barney Oldfield, in his latest utterances on the subject of track racing, claims that this type of automobile sport will not entirely die out, because Americans are so anxious to see a circular track race where there is some danger of killing a driver or two. Whatever the spectators may like, it is a fact that the drivers are not coming forward eagerly for track racing, and beyond a few minor events of that character track racing will practically be dead this season.

A number of interesting runs has just been arranged by the New York Motor Cycle Club for the coming season. The opening event will be held on April 22 with the Spring Century run over the Patchogue course, L. I. A hill-climbing contest will be held on Decoration Day, and on July 4 a touring contest will start with Rochester for its destination. A number of other short and long distance runs will be held during the season closing in October. C. W. Nason is President of the club and A. J. Bendix Captain. The club quarters are at 10 West Sixtieth Street.

Knowles Defeats Daly at Pool.

E. Knowles, handicapped at 100, and Phil Daly, Jr., who had 85 to make, were the contestants in the amateur pool tournament at the Broadway Billiard Academy last night. Knowles played a good, steady game, and won by 100 to 63. He made a high run of 24 and had only one scratch. Daly also had only one scratch, but his best contribution was only 14. To-night the players will be H. Downs (100) and W. Croll (125.)

GIANTS LEAVE MEMPHIS.

McGraw Unable to Dispose Of Players Takes All to Louisville.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, March 30.—The New York National League players saw the last of Tennessee rains to-day. Thirty men, who have been in training here when the weather permitted since March 1, left to-night for Louisville, after Manager McGraw failed in his attempt to cancel the two games scheduled in that city. McGraw heard reports of continued cold weather north of the Tennessee State line, and rather than remain idle in Louisville he figured on remaining here, trusting to a let-up of local rains. George Tebeau, the Louisville club owner, however, insisted on the Giants exhibiting themselves to the "fans" here, stating that the Kentuckians would be greatly disappointed at their absence. The Giants filled two sleepers on the Illinois Central Limited leaving at 8:40 o'clock, and are due in Louisville bright and early Saturday morning.

Sales of several players were expected before the departure, as several Southern League clubs have sought Pitchers Elliott and the younger Mathewson, Catcher Marshall, and others, who have been "subbing" in the play. McGraw, however, stated that he could not get the other National and American League clubs to waive claim on the players, and rather than loose title to them outright he will continue to carry them, and probably land at the Polo Grounds for the opening game with abundance of material. The sale of Graham to Memphis and Hall to Baltimore is all that has been announced.

The Giants left with a clean bill of health. Mathewson, Bresnahan, McGinnity, and Strang, who have been the only ailing ones during the month's stay, are free from complaints now.

MANHASSET CUP TANGLE.

Challenge May Come from Atlantic Yacht Club To-day.

The indecision relative to the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club's Challenge Cup will be resolved to-day, when the time limit for challenging for the cup expires. When the club determined to try to effect a change in the interpretation of the deed of gift to make the race one for the 27-foot class instead of for the thirty-three, the American Yacht Club, the holders, naturally resisted the effort. It threw the cup winner, Mimosa III., out of the race, legislating her effectively out of existence, to all intents and purposes. When the consent of the American Yacht Club to make the change could not be secured, the matter was brought to the attention of the Long Island Yacht Racing association, which had the previous year refused to interfere in determining the class of boats to race, in hope that they would reverse themselves, but the matter was laid on the table, shelving it for the year. It appeared as though no challenge would be sent, and the race go again to Mimosa III. by default, meaning that the crack 33-footer would likely not be put in commission this season. With no race for the cup, there was a chance of changing to the 27-foot class next year.

Commodore Trenor L. Park of the American Yacht Club may receive informal notice of a challenge to-day, with the formal defi to follow, with conditions and dates to be settled later. The notice, if sent, would come from the Atlantic Yacht Club on behalf of Vivian II., which is the sister ship of Mimosa III., the only boat about New York able to give the Sound racer a contest, and which is in a similar position on Gravesend Bay to that in which Mimosa III. finds herself on the Sound—without a competitor in her class. It is Mr. Vernon's intention to race the boat on the Sound during race week at Larchmont, and probably elsewhere, and he is anxious to pit her against Mimosa III.

COLUMBIA'S NEW CAPTAINS.

Post Resigns as Leader of the Oarsmen—Hockey Election.

Acting upon his physician's advice, H. B. Post, 1907 Law, has resigned his captaincy of the Columbia crew. Post has been an active athlete ever since he entered college, but has had some trouble with his heart. During the last few weeks the weakness has so affected him that he has been advised to stop active work for several months at least.

Gerald S. O'Loughlin, 1906 Law, was elected to succeed Post as 'Varsity Captain. This is the second time that O'Loughlin has led the Blue and White oarsmen.

D. H. Armstrong, 1907 Law, has been elected Captain of the Columbia hockey team for the season 1906-7. Armstrong was one of Columbia's football stars last Fall, and he is now out for an infield position on the 'Varsity baseball team.

H. T. Aplington, 1907 College, was elected manager.

Sutton Wins and Loses in Billiards.

George Sutton, who recently returned to this city after a long sojourn in Paris, played two games at 18.2 balk-line billiards yesterday at Hoppe's billiard rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street. In the afternoon he was defeated by Tom Gallagher in a 400-point game by 35 points. Gallagher made an average of 14 8-28 and had high runs of 60, 67, and 66. Sutton scored 365, but he eclipsed Gallagher in high runs, making one of 102 points. His average was 13 1-28. In the evening Sutton defeated F. Harer by 400 points to 117. Sutton averaged 23 9-17, and his best run was 73.

Strike News Ignored by Market—Banks Lose Heavily.

Wall Street was indisposed yesterday to consider the coal incident as closed by the declaration of a strike in the bituminous fields and an order for the suspension of work in the anthracite district pending further negotiations. It plainly preferred to believe that President Roosevelt, having been asked by the bituminous operators and miners to appoint a commission to examine the differences existing between these factions in an endeavor to bring about an agreement, would gladly seize the occasion to use his good offices to this end, and an outcome similar to that in the anthracite disturbance of 1902 was cheerfully predicted. Beyond this encouragement was found in the offer of 80 per cent. of the bituminous operators, according to President Robbins of the Pittsburg Coal Company, and 50 per cent., according to President Mitchell, to put into force the 1903 wage scale at their properties, an offer which it will be difficult for the miners to refuse if they desire to have the public's sympathy, since a refusal to operate the mines of owners who are willing to pay the wage demanded is open to only one interpretation, and that a decidedly unpleasant one. There were presented, therefore, two avenues of escape from the distress which the declaration of a strike in the bituminous regions might otherwise have caused Wall Street, the one in the well-grounded belief in the President's ability to bring about peace, and the other in the hope that a strike would be so far from comprehensive that business, while hampered, of course, would not be seriously crippled. In the anthracite situation also there was found matter for similar encouragement from the Wall Street point of view, the order for the suspension of work in these districts, coupled with a request for further negotiations, being construed as shrewd tactics on the part of the miners, the outcome of which was not necessarily a definite strike. And here again cheer was inspired by the well-disseminated information regarding the large supplies of coal stored by the different companies, a situation which might well lead to a suspension of work during the Summer months, strike or no strike.

Opening prices on the Stock Exchange were reflective of the momentary anxiety bred by the over-night news on the coal situation, and the declines, which ran in some cases, notably in Reading, to a point or more, found additional explanation in the rather heavy sales in this market by London, which seemed unable to grasp the finer interpretations of the situation of local speculators. This spell of depression was a matter of a short time only, and by noon the market was well on its way in the upward movement, which ran on to the close of the day, when prices in many instances were at their highest point. The strength in Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, the former advancing 1⅞ points and the latter 1⅛ points, coupled with similar gains in Northern Pacific and firmness in Great Northern, revived reports bearing on the long-standing ore deal, although nothing definite in this connection came to light. The strength, however, was general, and gains of a point or more were made by many active issues. The trading was again, in the main, professional.

Some of the day's optimism was bred, doubtless, by the fact that although loans arranged carried over until Monday, call money rose to only 7¾ per cent., but offsetting this favorable factor were the preliminary returns of the week's currency movements, indicating a cash loss of some $6,000,000 by the local banks. This heavy drain compares with a gain of $1,098,000 at this time a week ago, and is due to the movement of funds to the interior, presumably for dividend and interest payments, and to the losses to the Government through the Sub-Treasury, these in turn following heavy intakings at the Custom House, the funds thus obtained going completely out of the possession of the banks and into the Sub-Treasury, which in this relation has been well described as a safe deposit vault. These various movements, of course, make the outlook for to-day's bank statement one of doubt, although some offset is provided in the fact that last week's gold arrivals of $1,000,000 will count fully in to-day's return. In connection with the gold movement the fact that by Berlin $5,000,000 gold was offered to local bankers yesterday on very favorable terms is highly important.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 30.—Money was in strong demand in the market to-day, despite the recent borrowing from the Bank of England. Discounts were easy.

Trading at the opening of the Stock Exchange was dull and the movements were trifling. The market rallied later and closed easy. Consols were slightly lower on the announcement that $50,000,000 of Irish land stock will be issued in 1906.

Americans opened dull, recovered, and reacted later, owing to the coal situation in the United States. Prices closed at the worst quotations of the day, especially in the case of United States Steel.

Foreigners were dull. Japanese were quietly firm.

Kaffirs eased a fraction, but recovered.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104⅜.

Bar silver steady at 30d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.37; Lisbon, 4.50.

$5,000,000 IN GOLD OFFERED.

Berlin Tender Likely to Have a Favorable Influence Here.

Gold to the amount of $5,000,000 was offered yesterday from Berlin to bankers in this city. The fact that such a large amount was offered to New York bankers following the several engagements of gold that have already been made in Europe for New York account, was regarded yesterday as significant of the willingness of the European markets to meet freely the American demand for gold. The fact that so much gold could be had in Berlin at favorable prices was regarded, moreover, as likely to prove a most favorable influence upon monetary conditions at this centre.

The gold which has already been obtained from Berlin, as well as that which was offered from that city yesterday, is gold which has been exported from Russia to Berlin. It has all been under the control of the Mendelsohns owing to their close associations with the Russian Government. Whether or not any of the gold which was offered yesterday will be taken for New York account was not made known yesterday.

The opinion was expressed by some bankers to whom the offer came that there was a fair chance of at least a large part of the $5,000,000 being taken. A fact which militated against an actual engagement yesterday was the firmer tone which prevailed in the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling which had shown a declining tendency for some days rose 5 points to 4.8530.

While this advance in itself was not important it indicated apparently a lessening of the supply of exchange which had served to depress rates the earlier part of the week. Any sharp up-turn in exchange rates would of course bring to naught any plans which bankers may entertain to take part or all of the $5,000,000 which was offered yesterday from Berlin. There were large gold arrivals in London yesterday, amounting to nearly $4,000,000, but the price put on it prevented any of this gold being taken for import to New York.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—Philadelphia Rapid Transit loomed up as the active leader of the local market to-day, advancing over a point. Rumors current purporting to give the cause, included an improvement in the local political situation and the belief that the much-talked-of competition of independent companies will hardly materialize, the Street beginning to understand that, with so few short riders as Philadelphia has, a rival line, unless it has its own feeders, will not pay, and is not therefore likely to attract much outside capital. Philadelphia Electric and United Gas Improvement were firm in sympathy, but not very active.

The anthracite issues, after weakness at the opening, rallied, but were not heavily dealt in. Erie and Brooklyn Rapid Transit were both bought by local commission houses. Electric Storage Battery was heavy and General Asphalt preferred was off 1½ per cent.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 30.—Trading was moderately active to-day. Transactions were confined principally to the usually active and speculative list. United Railways issues were the features, changing hands freely at fractional changes. The general tone of the market was weak. In the stock list, trading was not large in volume. IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Carnegie Company Announces an Increase of $2 a Ton.

The scarcity of steel which has been apparent in recent trade returns has had definite recognition from the producers. The Carnegie Steel Company, according to Pittsburg advices, has announced an increase of $2 a ton, and will charge $28 a ton for sheet and tin bars after April 1.

It is estimated that the aggregate steel rail business on the books of the six leading rail mills which form the steel pool is 2,800,000 tons, and this total is being swelled by new orders daily. It is confidently predicted that the year's output will exceed 3,200,000 tons. The Steel Corporation, it is said, is negotiating with the Pig Iron Association for the purchase of 15,000 tons of Bessemer iron for April delivery, and this is looked to by producers to strengthen the market. On the general pig iron situation Rogers, Brown & Co. have this to say:

"Buyers universally admit that their demands for the last half of the year will be heavy, and that they must come into the market again before long. They continue to hope, however, that the enormous furnace output will influence sellers to abandon their present stubborn position as to prices and are waiting until the last moment in the hopes of getting some slight concessions before placing their orders.

Henry Stanley Haskins has been admitted to partnership in the firm of Lathrop & Smith.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company next month the question of reducing the Directorate from fifteen to nine will be passed on. CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

Estimates of the loss in cash resulting from the known movements of money varied yesterday from about $5,500,000 to $6,200,000. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper amounted to $5,093,500, but this was partly offset by receipts of new gold. The movements to and from the interior resulted in an estimated loss of about $2,000,000. The opinion expressed by some bankers yesterday was that the loss in cash which it is expected the banks will report to-day will probably be offset, to a very large extent, at least, if not entirely, by reductions in loans and deposits.

Discussing the week's movements of currency The Wall Street Journal says in its issue of to-day:

> The reported movements of currency this week indicate a loss in cash held by the banks of $6,171,400. They received from the interior $5,109,800, and sent to the interior $7,577,200, including $1,815,000 National banknotes sent to Washington for redemption. The loss to the interior was $2,467,400.
>
> Receipts of new gold were $1,499,500, namely: $697,700 gold imports, $737,200 on New York Assay Office checks, $23,400 on San Francisco Mint checks, and $41,200 on Seattle Assay Office checks. Gold exports were $110,000 in coin to Colon.
>
> Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $18,047,500. Payments by the banks to Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption funds, &c., were $23,141,000. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $5,093,500. The total loss to the interior, $2,467,400; by gold exports, $110,000, and on Sub-Treasury operations proper, $5,093,500 was $7,670,900. Deducting from this the gain from new gold, $1,499,500, the net loss was $6,171,400.
>
> Receipts of currency from the interior were about $1,778,000 less than in the preceding week, while shipments were about $1,291,000 more. Receipts were chiefly from near-by points and the South. Apparently remittances on account of April disbursements were nearly all made in previous weeks. Shipments were mainly to Boston and Philadelphia, about $3,000,000 going to Boston. These shipments may have been to meet requisitions from country correspondents. There were, however, no important shipments from New York to the West.
>
> The large loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was caused by the transfer of internal revenue collections, payments to the 5 per cent. fund, and transfers of silver coin to correspondents. The amount of such transfers made in anticipation of the suspension of free transportation after March 31 was $672,000, more than double the ordinary weekly average. Customs collections increased to $4,157,300 from $3,766,300 in the preceding week, while pension payments fell off to $698,000 from $1,929,000 in the preceding week.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The complacency with which the stock market received the strike news yesterday morning seemed to justify the prediction that once the issue came Wall Street would set it down immediately on the side of things which have reached their worst and must, therefore, mend, instead of regarding it any longer as a bearish factor. The only stock that broke sharply on the opening was Reading, which subsequently recovered. It was reported from the floor that certain brokers had appeared in Reading at the opening with instructions, evidently, to make it sell as low as they could. The lowest prices of the day were made in the first half hour, and afterward the market became spotty, or irregular, with activity most pronounced on the bull side of specialties, notably Brooklyn Rapid Transit. On all price recessions, at the opening and at later intervals, the volume of trading fell off. After 1 o'clock the market gathered strength slowly, and in the last hour became very strong under the leadership of Union Pacific, which reached the highest price at which it has sold since the break from above 160.

⁂

As to the anthracite strike, Wall Street takes its cue from the operators, who all along have viewed the probability of a struggle with perfect equanimity. They have immense reserves of coal, probably 10,000,000 tons, that can be accounted for. It has been stated that there are 1,000,000 tons in the Harbor of New York. It has been a very poor season in the coal trade, owing to the mildness of the Winter, and it is easy to suppose that the operators would welcome conditions under which a great surplus of coal could be worked off at a handsome profit. In addition to this the operators are anxious, it is said, to measure their strength with that of the labor organizations at a time when the danger of having to yield to political pressure, as on previous occasions, is at a minimum. A somewhat less cheerful view, it may be admitted, is taken of the bituminous situation.

⁂

Traders who attacked the market on the opening yesterday found a good deal more resistance than they expected, and were compelled later to repurchase their stocks at a loss. There was no general selling pressure.

⁂

It is reported that several prominent capitalists have repurchased in the last fortnight the Steel common which they sold 5 points higher in fear of a coal strike.

⁂

The continuous buying of Chicago Northwestern common has aroused a good deal of curiosity. Brokers who have been watching the stock declare that it is being steadily accumulated, and it is asserted further that the buying has been for the account of the Union Pacific people. A speculative movement in Northwestern common at this time would be about the most malapropos thing imaginable, owing to the high price at which it is selling and the cost of operating in it with money worth what it is. The conclusion, therefore, that the stock has been advancing on bona fide buying seems almost irresistible.

⁂

The most prominent feature of the market in the afternoon was the strength of the Harriman stocks, both Union Pacific and Southern Pacific. Union Pacific advanced 1⅞ per cent., to 156⅝, and Southern Pacific 1⅜ per cent., to 69⅛. The ease with which Southern Pacific advanced disclosed a small floating supply of stock, which could have resulted only from continuous accumulation on lower levels. Union Pacific was by far the most active stock in the list, dominating the rest of the market. On the opening it declined to 153⅛, but quickly recovered to the level of 155, where it rested until about midday, when the buying became somewhat more assertive. The high point for the stock on Thursday was 155¾. It advanced slowly to that figure again, and then, on crossing 156, it became very active. Lots of 100, 200, and 300 shares gave way to amounts of much greater size, and for the space of half an hour the stock dominated the market in its old manner. The excitement abruptly subsided, but the stock held its gain, closing at the top eighth. Southern Pacific, in the meantime, had enjoyed a corresponding advance.

Arose rumors in the afternoon of an impending announcement which would explain the strength and activity of the Harriman stocks, of conferences then in progress, &c., none of which apparently had the slightest basis in fact. It would be impossible to say whether these rumors were started purposely to affect the market or originated themselves. Rumors do on occasions originate spontaneously, so to speak. Activity and strength for which there is no apparent reason suddenly develop in the market, and people demand to know what it is all about. If no information is forthcoming, brokers are expected to guess the cause of certain market effects, and they make the best guesses they can, perhaps without any idea that what they have merely surmised will presently appear in the form of a positive rumor. Any one who knows how loosely information and conjecture are exchanged in Wall Street must be surprised, not that there is so much misleading comment, but that comment on the whole is as trustworthy as it is. Union Pacific abruptly becomes very active. Thirty or forty inquiries are immediately dispatched by telephone to the floor. "What's putting Union Pacific up?" "Is there any news on Union?" "Who is buying Union and why?" The floor broker, who, perhaps, has not been in the Union Pacific crowd during the last half hour, hurries over there and asks the first man he meets what is doing; this man tells him what another has said, what the specialist thinks, or what a heavy trader has surmised, and presently a flood of gossip about Union Pacific is going out over the telephone wires. What one man has merely guessed becomes another's conviction, &c. But people want gossip, and they get it.

⁂

Immediately after a meeting of the Directors on Thursday a selling movement started in Consolidated Gas. The Directors did not meet to act on the dividend, the time for such action not yet having arrived, but the announcement that they had not considered the dividend seemed to serve as a bear argument on the stock. It rallied sharply at the end of about an hour's selling. Yesterday it broke again. Wall Street takes a view of the matter which probably has not prevailed outside. It argues that the Consolidated Gas Company may be expected to put the worst possible face upon its affairs while contesting the eighty-cent gas law. A prominent house that has taken a good deal of interest in the matter says that as soon as the law goes into effect the company undoubtedly will contest it, and adds: "Their main contention will be that it is actually confiscatory, and that should it be put into effect they will be unable to pay dividends on the stock, or, at least, to pay any reasonable dividends. To make this plea effective it will be necessary for the company to show that they intend to reduce the dividend, and if the attorney for the State can show that the company believes that it can pay even 4 per cent. on the stock it is highly improbable that the plea of confiscation will be very effective."

⁂

Barron says that people who are selling copper short on futures are several months ahead of the procession and are likely to run up against a sharp corner in the spot commodity.

⁂

The crowd that has had control of the market in Brooklyn Rapid Transit deserves some credit for its skillful handling of the stock. There are very few issues that have survived the trials and uncertainties of the last two months with an equal degree of confidence. The speculation has been kept sweet and active both ways, there has been a good market for the stock at all times, and the bull pool evidently is in a comfortable position still. Irrespective of the intrinsic merits of a security, speculators appreciate the kind of market that has been kept for Brooklyn Rapid Transit throughout the decline, and will trade with greater confidence in such a stock than in one that has been permitted to go stale. The bull campaign in Brooklyn has evidently been resumed, and traders are willing to tail on. The stock was made very prominent yesterday forenoon, reaching 87¾. Its high point was 94⅛ in January. Brooklyn Rapid Transit generally bulls to some advantage in the Spring. Mr. Keene is supposed to be active in the stock.

There has been a considerable short interest in the market, especially in the coaler stocks and the Steel shares, intending to cover on the announcement of a coal strike. A certain amount of buying yesterday must have been of this character.

It has been decided, in case of formal default, to form a committee of five, consisting of two members from New England, one from New York, one from Pennsylvania, and one from the Central West.

A bear raid on the July option was the feature of early trading at the cotton ring yesterday. Opening at 11.01, two points under the previous close, the price was forced down to 10.93. Some liquidation came out under the pressure. Theodore Price issued a bulletin reasserting his conviction that prices must go up enough to restrict the consumption to the supply, which he still believed to be insufficient. This brought the South and West into the market. Wire houses were heavy buyers, Wall Street took a good deal of cotton, and a covering movement set in among the shorts, which became general. The rally extended to an advance of 20 points, July selling up to 11.13, closing at 11.12. Trading was not so heavy in the May option as of late. The latter month opened three points off at 11.08, sold down to 11.03, advanced to 11.25, and closed at 11.23. Spot cotton was unchanged at 11.70 for middling, against 8.15 last year.

The Siberian Railroad has now been opened for commercial use. This, it was said yesterday, will enable the new Russian-Asiatic cotton crop to be moved to the mills. The yield, it is said, amounts to about 500,000 bales, being the largest ever raised in that territory. The weakness in Liverpool may have come from this source. Spot cotton there declined 2 points, with sales of 10,000 bales, 9,000 of which were American cotton. The future market opened 3 to 4 points lower and closed 7 points down.

The in sight movement for the week amounts to 135,982 bales. These figures compare more favorably with the corresponding weeks movement of 145,194 bales out of the 10,750,000-bale crop of 1902-03 than the same week's movement of 263,865 bales last year, when the crop was 14,000,000 bales; 9,366,055 bales have come into sight since Sept. 1, against the 1902-03 comparative figures, which are 9,636,203 bales. Last year 10,720,160 bales came into sight up to this date.

Port receipts were 11,959 bales, against 23,349 bales last week and 48,328 bales last year. Exports were 7,194 bales. Receipts in the interior for the week were 62,145 bales, against 65,723 bales last week and 139,557 bales last year. Shipments, 89,282 bales, against 92,266 bales last week and 142,318 bales last year. Stocks, 477,652 bales, against 505,035 bales last week and 535,978 bales last year. Estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 3,000 to 3,500 bales, against 2,115 bales last week and 8,986 bales last year; New Orleans, 7,000 to 8,500 bales, against 4,870 bales last week and 3,321 bales last year; Galveston, 4,000 to 5,000 bales, against 3,539 bales last week and 4,435 bales last year. Bombay receipts for the week were 66,000 bales, against 67,000 bales last year. Since Jan. 1, 1,229,000 bales, against 1,123,000 bales last year. Afloat, 10,000 bales, against 20,000 bales last year. Shipments, 34,000 bales, against 13,000 bales last year. Since Jan. 1, 364,000 bales, against 167,000 bales last year.

Cotton Opinions.

BAILY & MONTGOMERY.—We cannot but feel that prices are now as high as warranted, and believe that sales on bulges will be the best course to follow for the present.

ATWOOD VIOLETT & CO.—Our cable from Bremen of a recount of stock indicates that the loss in the world's visible supply to-morrow for the present week will be extreme.

T. A. Mc INTYRE & CO.—The market is likely to continue under the domination of the in-and-out operations of the large local market interests who seem to be merely scalping the market on a large scale. We would rather advise adhering to simply a trader's position for moderate turns.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—We believe higher prices will be in order.

A. O. BROWN & CO.—The only admissible conclusion from a due consideration of the bullish factors would seem to be that prices are destined to seek a higher level.

WORLD'S SUPPLY OF COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, March 30.—Secretary Hester's statement of the world's visible supply of cotton, issued to-day, shows the total visible to be 4,653,496 bales, against 4,788,974 last week and 4,228,126 last year. Of this the total of American cotton is 3,122,496, against 3,301,974 last week and 3,009,126 last year, and of all other kinds, including Egypt, Brazil, India, &c., 1,531,000, against 1,487,000 last week and 1,219,000 last year.

Of the world's visible supply of cotton there is now afloat and held in Great Britain and Continental Europe 2,209,000 bales, against 2,060,000 last year; Egypt, 174,000, against 206,000 last year; in India, 970,000, against 740,000 last year, and in the United States, 1,300,000 against 1,213,000 last year and 791,000 year before last.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market was rather narrow all day as to its speculative side, but developed fair strength, and at the close was ⅛@¼c above the previous night. An important factor of the day's firmness was the strength at outside points. The cable news had little effect either way, as changes were unimportant. There was an advance of 5 to 10 points at Paris, but Budapest came 2 points lower, Berlin was partly ¼ mark down, and Liverpool net unchanged. The export trade was light, consisting of 14 loads. No. 2 red wheat in New York closed 85c, elevator, and 88⅝c. nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 88⅞c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The fluctuations in corn were unusually narrow, the local market showing a partial ⅛c net advance. Bulls appeared to be in control of the market, nevertheless, and easily sustained it in face of heavy Argentine shipments, rather liberal receipts, light clearances, and disappointing weekly exports, according to Bradstreet's. The primary movement consisted of 453,000 bushels, compared with 644,000 bushels last year. The principal bull arguments, aside from the influential support, were very light offerings and the absence of any important country acceptances. Liverpool was ⅛d lower, and export business amounted to 3 loads. No. 2 corn in New York was quoted 54½c, elevator, and 52c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 53c, and No. 2 yellow, 53c, free on board, afloat.

PRODUCE BROKERS BALK.

Decide to Discontinue Negotiations with the Consolidated Exchange.

The plan of the Consolidated Exchange brokers to sell out their rights in the valuable property at Broadway and Exchange Place and move to larger and cheaper quarters was unexpectedly checked yesterday by a sudden decision of the Board of Managers of the Produce Exchange to discontinue negotiations for a lease of part of their big floor space.

The "Little Board of Brokers" and the Produce Exchange have been at odds for some months past, and the action of the Produce Exchange management in refusing the Consolidated's offer of $30,000 a year for one-third of its trading floor is likely to intensify the hard feeling in both Exchanges.

Meanwhile it does not comfort the old-timers in the "Little Board" to know that the refusal of the Produce Exchange was directly brought about by the refusal of their ancient and opulent enemy, the Stock Exchange, to allow the produce brokers to continue their direct wire service to Stock Exchange houses if members of the "Little Board" were permitted in the building at Bowling Green.

About seventy members of the Produce Exchange have Stock Exchange connections. Yesterday's break with the Consolidated Exchange means that they won out against the more numerous but less active faction. The decision was reached after a meeting of the Board of Managers, which considered the returns of a postal card canvass of the members. The returns stood 700 years against 540 nays, but it was decided to consider the standing as well as the numbers of the voters, and the result was a resolution that since "certain trade interests would be adversely affected by the lease to an extent outweighing the benefits to be derived" the deal should be called off.

As soon as the news of the board's action reached the Consolidated Exchange President Randolph called a meeting of the Building Committee, which decided that the only thing to do for the present was to call a halt in the negotiations to sell out.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 30.—Call funds are a shade firmer, but otherwise the local money market is practically unchanged. Call loans, 5¼@6 per cent.; time loans on collateral, 4¾@5¼ per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 5¼@5½ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 5 per cent.; New York funds, 5c discount and par; clearings, $23,015,126; balances, $2,254,709; Sub-Treasury debit, $21,248.

To-day was a quiet one in the local copper shares, and fluctuations were within narrow limits. United Copper lost about a point, but later regained most of the loss. Amalgamated gained over a point on New York orders. Balance of coppers show very little change from Thursday's close. In the miscellaneous issues United States Oil was the feature, gaining over a point on coal strike developments and holding strong at the advance. American Pneumatic lost a fraction. The close was quiet, but strong at an advance over the low figures for the day.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Some uncertainty in the general business situation is reported by the journals of the leading mercantile agencies. Dun's Review says:

"Trade reports are still somewhat irregular, owing to widely differing weather conditions and uneasiness regarding the labor situation. In some sections of the country Spring trade is facilitated by satisfactory temperature, but at other points cold and storms retard distribution of seasonable merchandise. Manufacturing plants are not reducing output, but the future contains an element of disturbance in the numerous demands for higher wages. Outdoor work is rapidly increasing, and preparations are being made for a record-breaking year in building and agriculture. Clothing manufacturers and wholesale dry goods houses are especially busy. Soft roads retard the movement of grain to market and impede the return traffic in merchandise at many interior points, but this is a seasonable condition, just as it is customary for dry goods jobbing sales to diminish at this time."

Bradstreet's says:

"Hope is expressed that the coal strike will be localized to some extent, and will not materially interfere with industry, which seems fairly well supplied with fuel. There are reports that Spring planting is interfered with West and South, but later advices point to planting actively beginning in the Southwest, and from the Winter wheat belt uniformly favorable dispatches are received.

⁂

Detailed dispatches show variations in trade reports accordingly as different cities and sections are considered. Thus the late storms and heavy rains have benefited Pacific Coast crops, and trade advices thence are very good. With clearing weather advices from the Northwest are also better. In parts of the Central West heavy rains have affected country roads and retail buying. At the East unsettled weather is also a feature, but it is noted that there is rather more doing at leading Eastern cities, with more confident buying. The week's trade as a whole will run below that of a year ago, which was bright and warm, but the quarter's trade will run considerably ahead of the first three months of 1905.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Stocks Steady in Sluggish Market.

Prices Reflect the Firm Tone of the Exchange—Inter.-Met. Stocks and Bonds Active.

Though trading was extremely dull on the curb yesterday, the market reflected the strength of the Exchange and prices ruled firm. Transactions in the industrial list amounted to only 4,100 shares, and coppers were duller than in the slowest of the recent slow markets. The most interesting feature of the day's selling was the strength and activity of the Interborough-Metropolitan stocks and bonds. The common stock gained 1⅛ points on the day's trading in 3,800 shares, closing at 53. The preferred closed at 88, ½ point up, after selling of 1,500, and the bonds sold, $321,000, from 90½ up to 90⅞.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

GUGGENHEIMS' PLANS.

They Will Develop Recently Purchased Properties for the Present.

Rumors of indefinite extensions of the Guggenheim interests in the Nevada and Utah copper districts have been industriously floated in the curb market ever since the Guggenheim brothers went on their recent trip of observation to the West. Daniel Guggenheim was asked yesterday for an outline of the results of the trip and of the Guggenheim plans.

He said that only two properties, the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company and the Utah Copper Company, had been brought under their direction. It has been persistently stated in dispatches from the West that the Guggenheims had paid $20 a share for their interest in the former company. The figure was nearer $12.50, Mr. Guggenheim said. This is the price at which their options on the stock were taken up. Neither company will be producing for about a year and a half.

"We will devote ourselves for the present," Mr. Guggenheim said, "to developing the mines, installing new machinery, and proper concentrators, so as to bring the cost of production down to the minimum. Then we expect to get 25,000 tons of copper a year from each."

PARSONS WANTS TO SEE ODELL DISTRICT PLAN

He Was Not Planning to Oust Any One, He Says.

BUT SOME LEADERS MUST GO

They Don't Like It, but They Can't Buck the Constitution, Observes the Chairman.

Congressman Herbert Parsons, President of the Republican County Committee, issued a formal statement yesterday commenting on the Odell conference of district leaders the day before at the Fifth Avenue Hotel when twenty-two Odell leaders laid out an apportionment plan for the new Senate and Assembly districts, entirely ignoring the tentative apportionment which Parsons and his friends previously had made.

"There seems to have been some idea," declared Mr. Parsons, "that my plan would oust some Odell district leaders. I had no such idea and was not planning to oust anybody. I invited suggestions from everybody and my plan is open to inspection. I shall not call a meeting of the Executive Committee to act on the matter until the gentlemen who met yesterday have had a chance to work out their idea.

"The meeting of leaders at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday did seem to me unfriendly. I attributed it partly to unjustified suspicion and partly to the fact that those present had not wrestled with the problem of reapportionment as have some of the sub-committee and I. I will be very glad if those present yesterday will draw up a map and let us see it to gain suggestions from it. They have seen our tentative plans, let them show us theirs; that is fair.

"Under the Constitution, 'each Senate district shall contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants, excluding aliens.' Each Assembly District must be part of a Senate district, and no Assembly district 'shall contain a greater excess in population over an adjoining district of the same Senate district than the population of the block therein adjoining such Assembly district.' If, therefore, all Senate districts have to be of the same size, and one Assembly district cannot be larger than another Assembly district, all Assembly districts have to be of the same size and population.

"Under the reapportionment there will be thirty-five Assembly districts; there are now thirty-six leaders. There must be one less leader, therefore, under the reapportionment. In the Bronx there are now three district leaders; under the reapportionment there will be substantially five Assembly districts there, which means five district leaders. Two more district leaders, therefore, must go from somewhere.

"The Nineteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, and Thirty-first Districts now have four district leaders, but contain a population which is sufficient for more than six Assembly districts. There will, therefore, be two new district leaders there. In other words, this accounts for the displacement of five district leaders. Naturally, most of those who may be displaced do not like the idea, but they cannot buck against figures and the Constitution."

Chairman Parsons repeated emphatically that he had no intention of resigning the Chairmanship of the County Committee.

Forgot to File Marriage Certificate.

THE TIMES was informed yesterday that the belated filing of the certificate of marriage in the case of Osmond Harvey Shreiner of 51 Cambridge Street, Brooklyn, who was married to Miss Mary Lauderdale of Philadelphia on Oct. 2, 1905, was not due to any desire to keep their marriage secret, but to an oversight on the part of the clergyman who performed the ceremony. Announcement of the marriage was made in the Brooklyn papers on Oct. 6 last year.

CRANE SCOLDS DETECTIVES.

They Had Rearrested a Man the Magistrate Had Just Discharged.

Magistrate Crane read the riot act in the Harlem Court yesterday to Detectives Cavane and Dondero of Detective Sergeant Petrosino's Italian squad. The two detectives aroused the Magistrate's ire by rearresting on the Court House steps a man the Magistrate had just discharged.

The prisoner was Benedetto Lopariano of 305 East 107th Street. He was accused of felonious assault alleged to have been committed on Dec. 9 last year. The complainant, Cirino Coroniti, of 307 East 107th Street, testified that in a fight at the corner of 106th Street and Second Avenue Lopariano had stabbed him.

Lopariano admitted the stabbing, but said it had been committed in self-defense. Magistrate Crane then dismissed the complaint on the ground that the complainant's testimony was too vague and was uncorroborated.

Then the two detectives grew angry and told the Magistrate he had no right to discharge the prisoner. After they had been rebuked severely for interfering with the Magistrate, they followed Lopariano out on the Court House steps and arrested him again. As soon as Magistrate Crane heard of this he sent first a lawyer and next a court officer to order the two sleuths back with their prisoner, but they failed to find them.

The detectives took their prisoner first to the District Attorney's office and later before Magistrate Moss in the Tombs Court in a futile effort to have Magistrate Crane's decision reversed. Magistrate Moss directed them to take their prisoner back to the Harlem Court forthwith. When they appeared there Magistrate Crane discharged Lopariano, and then, turning to the two detectives, said:

"What right have you to try to reverse my decision. Why should you take this case farther after I had discharged the man? It was a high-handed outrage upon this court and upon the defendant."

Cavane and Dondero attempted no reply, but the complainant's counsel attempted to justify their action, and was ordered out of court when he would not desist.

Charles E. Le Barbier, Lopariano's counsel said he intended to prefer charges against the two detectives.

A FIELD FOR PHILANTHROPY.

Ahearn Wants a Fund for Families of Firemen Who Die on Duty.

Borough President Ahearn requests that wealthy philanthropists establish a hero fund out of which moneys can be taken for the families of fire heroes who lose their lives in the performance of their duties. He referred especially to the death of Capt. Walsh and the firemen killed at the fire this week at Bedford and Downing Streets.

"I understand," he said, "that steps already have been taken by the firemen of New York to raise by subscription and by the sale of tickets for a benefit, a fund for the relief of the widows, children, and parents of their dead comrades. It seems a pity that such action should be left to those least able to sustain any expense of this kind, and whose salaries are not more than sufficient to meet the needs of their own families.

It would be a kindly act if our wealthy philanthropists would come forward in such an emergency and, out of their millions, provide a fund from which a sum might be paid to the widows, children, and parents of these dead heroes. To the extent of my ability I have done what I could in such matters by having enacted into law, while a member of the State Senate, a bill allowing $1,000 to the widow and $700 to the dependent parents of any fireman killed in the discharge of his duty.

EAST SIDERS LAUD REARDON.

Merchants Praise County Detective for Cleaning Up Evil Resorts.

After Essex Market Court had adjourned yesterday a delegation from the East Side Merchants' Association marched into the court room and presented to Edward J. Reardon, County Detective and head of District Attorney Jerome's staff of detectives, a set of resolutions in which the work he has done in cleaning up the east side was lauded. Magistrate Walsh presided at the presentation.

The Magistrate paid a high tribute to the work done by Mr. Reardon. Joseph Mitchell made the presentation and spoke of the manner in which Reardon had cleaned up various resorts and of his arrest of pickpockets.

Detective Reardon said that the work that he had done was in pursuance of orders from District Attorney Jerome, and that he intended to keep up the work.

ACTRESS'S TWO HUSBANDS.

The First Helps the Second to Get a Decree of Annulment.

Two husbands of Cora Belle Adams, an actress, who is known on the stage as Cora Belle, appeared in the Supreme Court yesterday and gave testimony before Justice Leventritt relative to their marriage.

A decree annulling the marriage of Edwin Adams, the second husband, who is a Broadway automobile manufacturer, was then granted.

The first husband is George Frederick Baker of Mount Washington, Md. He testified to the facts of his marriage, and said the two children born of the union are living in Baltimore. The marriage took place on Dec. 6, 1889. He said he came to testify at the solicitation and expense of Adams.

It was said on behalf of the woman that she believed Baker dead when she married Adams.

MUST CLEAR WOODBURY OR SEND HIM TO JAIL

No Middle Course, Mayor Says, in Street Cleaning Inquiry.

$10,000 FOR INVESTIGATORS

And More If Needed—The Aldermen Vote $238,000 for Street Repairs—More Salaries Increased.

After weeks of delay the Aldermanic committee to investigate the Department of Street Cleaning yesterday got $10,000 from the Board of Estimate to prosecute its work. The original resolution called for $25,000, but the Mayor had the sum reduced, explaining that the committee could come back later if more was needed.

"They have got to send Woodbury to State prison or vindicate him," declared the Mayor, referring to the committee which is to make the investigation.

When the appropriation resolution for $25,000 came up, Borough President Ahearn wanted to know why so much money was needed. The Mayor said that the committee should have every cent it needed to make a thorough investigation. Alderman Meyers said he did not know what amount would be needed, but that there would have to be process servers, stenographers, and counsel.

"We must prepare to pay counsel," said Mr. Meyers, "but I understand there is a contention that the Aldermen can employ no counsel except by designation from the Corporation Counsel's office. We believe if we select counsel the Corporation Counsel will name him to conduct the inquiry, and a transfer of the appropriation you make to us will furnish the required money for that designation."

"I have had a talk with the Corporation Counsel," said the Mayor, "and you will have no difficulty in that regard."

There was a short wait for President Cromwell, a unanimous vote being needed for a revenue bond appropriation. When President Cromwell arrived, Mayor McClellan continued:

"It seems right that the Mayor should speak on this matter. Very serious charges have been made against one of my Commissioners, and one of my friends. If the charges are true, Commissioner Woodbury is certainly unfit to hold office, and it is a question in my mind if he should not go to State prison. In justice to the Mayor and in justice to Commissioner Woodbury, he should be found guilty or vindicated. I desire to join with the Aldermen in making the investigation as thorough as possible. I believe the Aldermen are actuated only by the fairest intentions, and that the investigation is bound to be for the good of the city."

"I can assure the board," Mr. Meyers replied, "that we are actuated only by motives that the whole city must approve. We expect at the very least to show that there have been great abuses, and we expect to show that the department, in any event, could be run far more economically."

"How much do you want to begin with? Will $5,000 do?"

"We thought that $15,000—"

"Under this resolution you can come back for the balance of the $25,000 any time you need it," said the Mayor.

"Very well, then," replied Mr. Meyers; "split the difference with us and give us $10,000."

"The Mayor put the resolution to appropriate $10,000, and it was adopted unanimously. Alderman Grifenhagen, Chairman of the sub-committee which is to conduct the investigation, was in the Council Chamber during the debate. He said that the committee will submit the name of a lawyer to Mr. Delany within a week, and that the examination of witnesses will be started within ten days.

During the session of the board, Borough President Coler of Brooklyn admitted that many of his engineers were "no good," and pledged himself to suspend enough of them to pay for an $8,000 consulting engineer if the board would authorize the appointment. Under this condition the board agreed to allow the Borough President the desired $8,000 consulting engineer.

Acting on resolutions of the Board of Aldermen, the board appropriated $238,000 special revenue bonds for President Ahearn to repair asphalt streets, $70,000 to meet deficiencies in the appropriation made last year for the Charities Department, and $21,000 to enable President Coler to meet the demands of the "prevailing rate of wages" law. They appropriated in corporate stock $70,000 for improvements in the grounds of the New York Botanical Garden and $250,000 for construction and improvements in the Zoological Garden. Commissioner Kennedy got $50,000 for resoiling trees in Prospect Park, $35,000 for new parks, and $20,000 for care of the trees in the streets of Brooklyn.

Controller Metz was authorized to establish grades of $1,650 and $1,800 for six Inspectors in the Finance Department. He declared that his Inspectors saved the city at least $600,000 in the last three months by exposing the sewer frauds, and that unless he was able to promote the men, other departments, which pay more, would take them from him.

The Mayor said he voted the increases with hesitation. Salary increases were growing too frequent. A dozen or more applications from department heads for salary increases and other needs were referred to the Controller. One from the Health Department asked $306,000 for a Summer corps of Medical Inspectors, supplies, and contingencies.

WITHERBEE BURGLARS, MAYBE

Police Get Two Men, One Having Burglar's Implements.

On suspicion that they were concerned in recent burglaries in the lower Fifth Avenue district, including the robbery at the residence of Mrs. Frank S. Witherbee at 4 Fifth Avenue Tuesday night, when $10,000 worth of jewelry was stolen, two men were arraigned in Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday by Detectives Fitzgerald, Holahan, and Conway of the Mercer Street Station. Magistrate Steinert remanded them to the station for forty-eight hours to give the detectives time to investigate.

The prisoners call themselves William Rossel of 70 East 113th Street and Robert McDonald of 120 Christopher Street. Rossel, the detectives say, has served terms in the House of Refuge and Sing Sing for burglary. McDonald had burglars' tools on him when arrested, according to the police.

Fitzgerald says he had seen Rossel hanging about Washington Square, and saw him there on the night of the Witherbee burglary. The two were arrested at West Broadway and Bleecker Street after a struggle.

Most men like to see the new Spring things, even though they're not ready to buy.

That's why everything's ready for real Spring weather—light overcoats and suits, light in color as well as weight; soft hats and neckwear in delicate Spring shades.

And it's odd how often men who just intend to get a line on Spring styles are so attracted that they won't risk delay in laying in their line of Spring wearables.

FRENCH CARICATURE.

M. Paul Gaultier's New Brochure, "Le Rire et la Caricature," with a Preface by M. Sully Prudhomme.

By EDWARD CARY.

THERE is a certain suggestion of "coals to Newcastle" in the thought of a new book on French caricature. It is a subject that has been abundantly treated, as, indeed, it has most attractively invited treatment. The mere bibliography of the subject would, in detail, occupy a volume. Only a year ago a catalogue of the lithographic work of Daumier alone was published, which filled 800 large pages and, though it was sold at the not too modest price of 60 francs, is no longer to be had, save by chance. The list of works relating solely to the same artist, or including references to him, in Arsène Alexandre's "Life" runs to threescore numbers. Gavarni, the contemporary of Daumier, and, in a sense, his mate in posthumous fame, has been treated with almost equal elaboration. And these are but single examples of the extensive scale on which French writers have dealt with French caricature. Yet, despite the mass to which it is added, the little brochure of M. Paul Gaultier, "Le Rire et la Caricature," (Paris, Hachette et Cie.) will doubtless find its place, especially as it is preceded by a kindly and ingenious preface from the pen of M. Sully Prudhomme, who commands favor with his public by more titles than one, and in this instance rather emphatically vouches for the originality as well as for the value and the charm of his friend the author.

⁂

IT is to be premised for M. Gaultier that "le rire" has for him and for his readers a connotation somewhat different from that which can be rendered by our simple English word "laughter." It implies not merely the act of laughing, but the faculty by virtue of which we laugh, and the writer devotes a good deal of attention to its psychologic relations. He holds himself bound to render an explanation of the reasons why we laugh—or why his fellow countrymen laugh—at caricature, an explanation developed at too great length to be fairly summarized, even in the space here at command. Suffice it to say that in the long run M. Gaultier's notion seems to be that we laugh at caricature because it tickles our vanity with the impression of our superiority in the features selected for caricature. He intimates that even when our noses are not really straighter, or our abdomens more shapely, than those presented by the pencil of the caricaturist, we are happily unconscious of the fact. Whether we are better off than the victims of this pencil or not, it appears that a glow of self-approval is kindled by the ridiculous attitudes of our fellow-beings, and thence we laugh. "The proof," says M. Gaultier, "is found in the fact that the vainest persons are the most sensitive to caricature, and find the greatest charm in it, because they are most agreeably flattered by it." As psychology, that may pass; the present writer does not pretend to authority on that point. As observation it appears to him defective and mistaken, but as he has for many years been exceptionally sensitive to amusement by caricature, there is perhaps a reflex—or whatever you call it—influence of vanity in his dissent from this sweeping conclusion.

⁂

HOWEVER, apart from his theory of laughter and its causes in connection with caricature, M. Gaultier renders a real service in his analysis of the work of three representative French caricaturists, Daumier, Gavarni, and Forain, and in his comments on contemporary caricature. Broadly, he classes the first as an artist, the second as a realist, and the third as a pessimist; but this rough classification by no means indicates the value of his criticism, which is detailed, acute, and sympathetic. He does especial justice to the character and ideals of Daumier, one of the most elevated, serious, and gifted of modern French artists, not only to his powers, but to his admirable spirit, his essential humaneness, his catholicity, his invincible devotion. It is proof of M. Gaultier's qualifications for criticism that he is not less scrupulously fair to Gavarni, in whom he finds quite a different type of talent and of character, and to Forain, who differs radically from both, and is immeasurably more brutal than either. For all these and for the contemporary caricaturists whom he discusses, the writer finds an ingenious justification for their ridicule of the types and the individuals attacked by them, in the theory that this ridicule is but the assertion and the defense of the ideals violated by those to whom it is addressed. He finds that caricature appeals less and less to the laughter of men, that it becomes more and more satirical and pessimistic, and that its movement in this sense is in harmony with that of literature and of society.

⁂

NATURALISM and realism, as they find expression in modern fiction and in modern plastic and pictorial art, press out the laughter-exciting element from caricature and stamp it with the current discouragement. And this tendency is reinforced by democracy, which effaces personalities and leaves but classes or types for the caricaturist to present. But though M. Gaultier's own opinion of modern society is much more despairing than seems necessary from the American point of view, he sees in the prevailing discontent and gloom the evidence of an "ideal offended," toward which there must be a steady, if not a hopeful, reaction.

If, on the whole, it is not easy to praise the philosophy of M. Gaultier, and if his theories seem somewhat barren and arbitrary, there remains in his little volume a great deal that is interesting by which the student of French contemporary life may distinctly profit.

MODERNITY OF EURIPIDES.

Mr. Loeb's Translation of Prof. Decharme's Scholarly Study of the Life and Works of the Most Modern of the Three Great Greek Tragic Authors.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

GEORGE S. HELLMAN, A. M.

EVER since Schlegel renewed, after many centuries, the vicious attack which Aristophanes began against Euripides, there have been many critics, German, French, and English, to take up the cudgels for and against. We know, however, of no analysis of the character and work of Euripides that is, all things considered, as thorough, impartial, and convincing as that made by Paul Decharme, whose recent death has robbed the Faculté des Lettres at Paris of one of its most cultured professors. His volume, admirably translated by Mr. James Loeb, seems to omit no passage, indeed no single verse, in the great mass of Euripidean drama that may serve to cast an added ray of light on the subject of his investigation; but in addition to the scholar's capacity for patient detail, M. Decharme is possessed of that larger point of view which enables an author to observe and to make patent the significant truths in the field of his research.

Some of these truths concerning Euripides are especially interesting to us of to-day. Our age is preeminently skeptical, in both the Greek and the derivative modern sense of that word—an age of inquiry and doubt—of advancing science and hesitant religion. While the parallel must not be carried too far, it may be pointed out that the philosophers and sophists of the days of Euripides weakened, by means of rational and scientific analysis, the foundations of the Greek faith in the ancient myths, much as the post-Kantian and post-Darwinian thinkers have disturbed those religious beliefs whose invulnerability in the days of Milton made possible a "Paradise Lost," and whose weakening gave rise in our own times to an "In Memoriam."

So swiftly had the spirit of the age changed in the years following the Persian wars that Aeschylus, with his unswerving reverence for traditional belief, seems centuries removed from the ironic and skeptical Euripides, although only a few decades separated the creation of the greatest works of these two authors. The former represents the religious faith of a people jealous of their legendary heritage; the latter, giving voice to nascent opinions that became the convictions of posterity, and, at the same time, representing life from a more human, if less lofty, point of view, created characters whose appeal to the sympathies is more direct; in this respect differing also from Sophocles, the poet whose ideal types ever remain a little above the level of actual existence. In Euripides we are everywhere struck with the vicissitudes of human life; and the results of love and passion and wrong, and the general inevitability of things, with the consequent helplessness of man remind us of a play like Ibsen's "Ghosts" or a dramatic novel like Sudermann's "Geschwister." The Aeschylean element of an avenging god, and the Sophoclean element of supreme moral law, have given place to the non-committal presentation of the baffling tragedy of human life itself. Euripides, like his predecessors, had recourse to the old legends for the subject of his dramas, but in his hands the characters lost their remoteness and their dignity, and became vital men and women submitting alone to that Fate whose ways he portrayed but did not attempt to justify on any divine or moral basis.

Prof. Decharme portrays Euripides as a man of serious temperament, something of a recluse, and, on the whole, melancholy. Although eighty-eight of his dramas were presented during his lifetime, only four times was he awarded the first prize in the dramatic contests. The sun of popular success shone fully only after his death, and did not warm and irradiate his life. His influence, traceable in later art and philosophy, was lessened at the beginning by his guarded iconoclasm, the sophistical spirit which may be found, for example, in Jason's reply to the reproaches of Medea. Although his moral sayings were taken up by the early Fathers of the Church, he neither believed nor exemplified the great Socratic principle that morality is inseparable from knowledge. He loved to shock his audience with audacious phrases, much as (to compare the great with the small) Bernard Shaw does nowadays. "Zeus, whoso Zeus is," one of his characters is made to say, thus robbing the primal figure in the Greek religion of his divine personality. Nor less, in connection with the ever-absorbing questions of death, liberty, and marriage, was he averse to startling epigrams and comparatively novel theories. More than any other of the great tragedians Euripides is modern in the handling of these themes. The democratic note and the individualistic point of view, preeminently characteristic of the literature of the last hundred years, are patent in his dramas. The nobleman is the honest man, was his belief in the age of helots; and such a phrase as "noble slaves," which we might look to find in Burns or Swinburne, is an antithetical but no less forcible Euripidean tenet. Swinburnian, also, in many respects might be called his satire on women and his attitude toward marriage, greatly the result, no doubt, of his own unhappy experience, and thus emphatically illustrative of the element of individualism in his writings.

A NOBLER light is thrown on Euripides when his political views come under consideration, for here, although such plays as the "Suppliants" and "The Children of Herakles" breathe the spirit of patriotism, we find him the advocate of wide humanitarianism. His has been called "a kind of cosmopolitanism of wisdom," that which regards the whole earth as the brave man's fatherland. This is the kind of cosmopolitanism that we of to-day commend in our philosophers and ethicists, and try to further in our peace congresses, although we still furnish funds to battling nations, and Europe stands tiptoe on the verge of war. Indeed most of the strident modern problems, save those of industrialism, are adumbrated or clearly outlined in the Euripidean drama, while his deep interest in death, the greatest problem of human life, is much nearer to our day than that of Athens. We can readily imagine him joining Zola and Flaubert and the de Goncourts in their weekly meetings, where nothing was spoken of but death, woman, and beauty. For the discussion of this last theme, also, Euripides was well qualified. The beauty of his language has been the delight of Milton, Racine, Goethe, and Byron; while the radicalism of his thought is paralleled by his innovations in connection with spectacular beauty, and his scenic attempts to procure magical effects make him an illustrious predecessor of the stage managers of to-day.

⁂

IT would be unfair to end this review without emphasizing its incompleteness. There has been no attempt to do more than to indicate the points of contact where Euripides comes specially in touch with modern interest. A more scholarly critique would have to examine closely Prof. Decharme's treatment of the dramatic art in Euripides—his choice of subjects, his dramatic situations, the rôle of the chorus, the lyrics, and, above all, the action itself; nor would the scholar be content with so slight a notice of the philosophical, political, and social views of the poet. Such a critique would, we believe, expose no fallacy in Prof. Decharme's analysis or presentation. If there were adverse comment, it would be only of a negative nature. It might be said that in a work of this kind, where the drama of one of the world's very great authors is so thoroughly studied in its philosophical, literary, and technical aspects, there might well be a concluding chapter in which the carefully garnered evidence would be summed up in corroboration of those fundamental truths which underlie the masterpieces of literature. The point of view of comparative criticism, so illuminatingly taken in such a volume as Prof. Courthope's "Life in Poetry," is especially worth while in connection with Euripides. Granting he was "decadent" in his penchant for novelty, (a trait that is the hallmark of most "decadent" writers,) and, to some extent also, in the "immorality" of many of his subjects, yet his beautifully written dramas are so remarkable for their presentation of types that he takes lasting rank with the immortal band of authors whose delineation of character testifies to the universal emotions of mankind and to that oneness of human nature which, transcending the ages, remains the basis of all art. TSCHAIKOWSKY AND JOHANNES BRAHMS.

Rosa Newmarch's Abridgment of Modeste Tschaikowsky's "Colossal Monument" to His Gifted Brother's Genius—Florence May's Life of Brahms and Mr. Lawrence Erb's.*

RICHARD ALDRICH.

THIS is an abridgment of the "colossal monument," "The Life and Letters of Peter Ilich Tschaikowsky," which Modeste Tschaikowsky raised to his brother's memory. It is very true, as Mrs. Newmarch suggests, that it would be unreasonable to expect of any nation but his own a hero worship so devout that it could assimilate a "Tschaikowskiad" of three big volumes—two in the German edition, which was itself lightened of about a third of the original contents. Mrs. Newmarch has retained quite enough to give a complete view of Tschaikowsky's life and activities, even his intimate relations.

It is a remarkably interesting story. In many portions it becomes almost an autobiography, through the copious detail that Tschaikowsky himself supplies in his correspondence. Beethoven was a great letter writer—or rather a note writer; Schumann expressed himself abundantly to many correspondents; so did Mendelssohn. But no musician, perhaps not even Wagner, ever unburdened himself quite so freely and fully in letters and diaries as did Tschaikowsky. As he himself wrote to his publisher, he "flooded the world with his correspondence."

There are several curious and interesting episodes in the composer's life that are explained—yet not fully explained—in this volume. There was his marriage. A woman for whom, apparently, he had no great regard, fell in love with him after he himself had loved in vain Desirée Artôt, a poetical and passionate dramatic singer, devoid of personal beauty, who, after coming to an understanding with him, suddenly and without a word of explanation, married another. In 1877 he married Antonina Milioukov—"rash and foolish step," his brother called it, for which from the very beginning he had to pay the penalty. They soon separated—"a few days longer and I should have gone mad," wrote Peter Ilich to Frau von Meck.

⁂

HIS relations to this latter remarkable woman have already become one of the most famous episodes in musical biography. She was a widow with a large family, wealthy; an "anchorite" she called herself; and was one to such a degree that, though Tschaikowsky's niece married her son, he and his sister scarcely once saw her, never exchanged a word, scarcely a casual greeting; and when Tschaikowsky met her in a crowd, it was as a total stranger. Yet for thirteen years they carried on an intimate and voluminous correspondence, in which Tschaikowsky opened his heart to her concerning all his artistic aspirations and personal feelings, and she showed herself the appreciative and understanding friend. And Frau von Meck had a great influence over his creative activity by bestowing on him an annual income that made him independent of drudgery and able to devote all his time to his best work. It is a wonderful and touching chapter in the life of a great man. There is something ideal in this relationship and its fruits that is all too rarely met with in the world. The letters of Tschaikowsky to his friend are among the most illuminating and profoundly interesting revelations of a great artist's aims and aspirations and methods that we possess. They range from the general to the particular, and they throw much light on his methods of composition, and on the special ideas he elaborated in many of his works. One of the most significant is that giving his opinion of the young Russian school—of Rimsky Korsakoff, whose early lack of theoretical training he describes; of Cui, "a gifted amateur"; of Borodin, whose talent has come to nothing through want of teaching, and who "cannot write a bar without assistance"; of Moussorgsky, whose nature was narrow and coarse; of Balakireff, the greatest talent of the whole circle, whose talent was early extinguished by his excessive piety.

THE end of this long and ideal friendship was distressing to Tschaikowsky, but he misunderstood and misinterpreted the reasons for it, which were the ravages of a terrible nervous disease upon Frau von Meck's life that changed her relations not only to him, but to others also.

The book is full of Tschaikowsky's views and judgments on others and their music—Wagner and Brahms, especially, neither of whom he liked, though his judgments on Brahms varied somewhat; on Grieg, Liszt, von Bülow, and many another contemporary. He registers his likes and dislikes of the classics, among whom, for him, Mozart overshadowed all others. Beethoven he did not love; the music of his last period he "hated"; yet again at another time he admired it. Bach he did not regard as a great genius; he liked some things of Haydn's.

One of the most amusing portions of this volume for Americans to read is that describing his visit to this country in 1891; how he was besieged, bored, irritated, amused, pleased, and entertained by various people and experiences. Of the people he speaks with cheerful frankness, often calling them by name. The temptation to quote constantly recurs through the book. The voluminous letters, the simple and sympathetic narrative, give the impression of an absolutely honest, candid, and ingenuous, high-minded idealist; a genius often troubled with doubts as to his own powers. As we read the book admiration for the musician is merged in love for this man of inexpressible charm and haunting pathos.

TWO BOOKS ON BRAHMS.

THE period of reminiscence is merging into the period of biography in the case of Brahms. He died nine years ago. Max Kalbeck's voluminous and quasi-official biography is half way finished; now comes an elaborate two-volume life, by an Englishwoman, Florence May, who lays no claim to either literary or musical distinction, but whose chief qualification was a personal acquaintance with Brahms as a student and an ardent admiration for the man and his music. Mr. Erb, a Brooklyn writer, contributes to the "Master Musicians Series" a useful compilation of the facts of Brahms's life, views of his personality, and an account of his music.

Miss May's attitude is far from judicial. She is a passionate partisan of her subject, who is her hero. She regards him with the veneration of a pupil for a master; for she studied the piano with him for a considerable period. Much of the book is written from a purely personal point of view, and this has an interest and value of its own. There is also the result of no little research. She has much to say about Brahms's appearance and manner when she first met him at Frau Schumann's house; he was in the prime of life, thirty-eight years old.

> He was of the blonde type of German, with fair, straight hair, which he wore rather long and brushed back from his temples. His face was clean shaven. His most striking physical characteristic was the grand head, with its magnificent intellectual forehead, but the blue eyes were also remarkable from their expression of intense mental concentration. This was accentuated by a constant habit he had of thrusting the rather thick under lip over the upper and keeping it compressed there, reminding one of the mouth in some of the portraits of Beethoven. His nose was finely formed. Feet and hands were small, the fingers without "cushions."

His demeanor was a mixture of sociability and reserve; a difficult man to know. He was simple and unaffected, referring to his compositions most rarely. His playing, when Miss May heard it first, was utterly ineffective and quite disappointing—he was not in the mood. Soon afterward she heard him play as if inspired. Miss May once urged him to go to England to make his compositions known. "It is for that they are printed," he answered decidedly, and thereby gave an insight into a side of his character that many lesser men do not share with him. Miss May does not wish to rhapsodize, but she found that he united in himself "each and every quality that might be supposed to exist in an absolutely ideal teacher of the pianoforte, without having a single modifying drawback."

OF her experience with him as a teacher her account is extremely interesting, though she does not succeed in her desire to avoid rhapsody. Under the circumstances she is pardonable. In these lessons it was "an exquisite nature" that was revealed to her. Even at that time, she was told, he could be rough and bitter. In later years he was by no means always gentle; and this roughness was doubtless for the purpose of protecting his time against celebrity hunters and even his friends. Some of it, she thinks, was also to cover his acute sensibility of temperament, of which he stood a little in dread. When Miss May met him in Vienna years later he had not only greatly aged, but had gained the happy sunshiny look of one who had realized his purpose.

She is soon done with her own memories, and attacks the task of the biographer. She has gone into this with the greatest detail. There is no other book in English in which the life of Brahms is so minutely recounted. She has also gone into much detail about persons and things that are brought into contact with Brahms's life; and she spends much space upon critical estimates of his works. These estimates are, naturally, those of a strong partisan; but they are not without value and suggestiveness. She tells much about the circumstances attending the composition and first production of many of these compositions that is interesting. A somewhat surprising feature is the large acquaintance she has shown with the first performances in America. Thus the first public performance of the trio, Op. 8, "to the lasting musical distinction of America," was in New York, by Dr. Mason in 1855. The second serenade for small orchestra was first performed here in February, 1862, by the Philharmonic Society. The biographer says:

> This early appreciation of the composer's genius in America has proved to have been neither accidental nor transitory. It grew steadily year by year with the general growth of interest in musical art, and his works, great and small, were welcomed as they appeared, and performed—often, it must be said, from pirated editions in the earlier days—with ever-increasing success.

The story of Brahms's life is not a striking one. His adventures, so far as he had any, either personal or intellectual, were chiefly confined to his earlier days. But the personality, many sided and sometimes seemingly contradictory, was a strong and imposing one. Miss May, though she may have softened it in some particulars and can never see any other side than his of matters which were much debated, has given a characteristic picture of it.

⁂

MR. J. LAWRENCE ERB may be commended for the skillful compilation he has made, in his short life of Brahms, of the useful lists of works, chronologies, and brief comments. His biography is not marked by originality, either of research or of critical views; but it will fill a place that has not exactly been filled in English.

A New German Biography of Clara Schumann—The Oxford History, Vol. II.*

THE first volume of Prof. Litzmann's biography of Clara Schumann appeared three years ago. This second volume continues the story through her married life, and leaves forty years of her later career still to be covered. This extension of his plan is accounted for by the fact that it is really a double biography and must necessarily cover in these years Schumann's life, as well as his wife's. It is the period of "Summer sunshine and rain," of ripening powers, of the early approach of autumnal darkness and night, through the oncoming of the madness that destroyed the composer's powers, and finally ended his life prematurely.

In this as in the previous volume, the biographer has had the inestimable advantage of access to the diaries kept by Frau Schumann and her husband, that have not been utilized for this purpose before. There has been no momentous event in the life of either disclosed, but a much clearer view of the many minor joys and sorrows that affected them and their doings, and especially of the oncoming of Schumann's illness, is gained than has hitherto been vouchsafed. No such intimate relations with them has been possible as those in which the reader of this biography is put.

⁂

THESE diaries were kept by the two in one book that Schumann presented to his wife on the day of the marriage; a book in which each was to write for a week, alternating with the other. They were to put down all that touched their married life; their desires and hopes, the requests that they had to make of each other; a criticism of their artistic doings, character sketches of artists whom they met. There is much that is interesting, amusing, touching in this self-disclosure; but the chief impression is a tragic one, through the constant recurrence of physical disability and mental gloom that came upon Schumann, the interruption it made to his work, the burden it put upon his wife. The picture differs largely in its color from that generally painted of the golden days of unalloyed happiness that the couple are supposed to have enjoyed in the years immediately following their marriage. Clara was urged to renew her public career largely through the necessity of adding to her husband's income; they even thought for a brief time, in 1842, of a journey together to America, for the purpose that has attracted other artists hither, to "get rich quick." The problems of the partings of the two were perplexing; there were anxieties for the daily bread.

THEIR removal to Dresden, then to Düsseldorf, brought many vexations, smaller worries, and greater troubles. The story of them is, in fact, rather depressing. The devotion of the wife is brought clearly to view in these pages; through all her anxieties, and even the hurt that her husband not infrequently gave her through his caustic criticism of her playing, even when the public was most enthusiastic. There are some interesting glimpses of other musicians and of the views the couple held of them. They were divided about Berlioz, who heard Schumann's quintet and two of his quartets, and had not much to say in their favor; whereupon Clara writes: "He is cold, unsympathetic, grim. Not an artist such as I love. Robert thinks differently, and has quite taken him to his heart, which I cannot understand." Schumann's opinion of Wagner is well known, but an entry in the book (1846) emphasizes it:

> "He possesses an enormous 'gift of gab,' is full of overwhelming ideas; you can't listen to him long. He wished to explain to the public Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, which is to be given on Palm Sunday, by means of a kind of programme with quotations from Goethe's 'Faust.' I could not agree with him."

Liszt appears here several times, but much sympathy with one so diametrically opposed to both the Schumanns cannot be expected from them. He asked to hear Schumann's D minor trio, on a visit to Dresden, and they gave a party for him, at which he was two hours late. They played the trio, and he praised it, but remarked that the quintet was "too Leipzig-y." Then he played, and Clara gets her revenge by remarking that it was so bad she wanted to leave the room. Finally Liszt had the tactlessness—rather surprising in that seasoned man of the world—to begin praising Meyerbeer at the expense of Mendelssohn. Schumann broke out then: Meyerbeer was a babe compared with Mendelssohn; Liszt had better keep still—and then really did leave the room. Whereupon Liszt remarked to Clara: "Tell your husband that he is the only man in the world from whom I would take such words." Which closes the record of this agreeable evening. "Liszt at the piano," writes Clara elsewhere, "when he is animated, gives a glimpse of a genius, but only a glimpse. No more music, but like a demoniac roaring."

⁂

HOW sharp Frau Clara could be on occasion is shown by her reply to Félicien David, the French composer, to whom, when in Vienna, she had sent her autograph album to write in. What he wrote was highly complimentary, but perhaps a bit patronizing, as of one whose place in the artistic world he did not fully realize. For this she sent him this charming acknowledgement:

> Mme. Schumann not having asked for a testimonial in her album, thanks M. David for his good will and begs him to accept the assurance of her perfect esteem.

The details of Schumann's life include more and more the manifestations of his oncoming collapse and the anxieties of the wife; yet she was unconscious till the very end of their real significance. Nor does she see in his compositions any falling off of creative power. Her loyalty of judgment is pathetic. All the troubles which in Dresden, and still more in Düsseldorf, arose from his incompetency as a conductor were for her the result of mean intrigue and calculating hostility. There are many interesting details about the friendship of Joachim and the coming of Brahms, that so stirred Schumann's last days; and there is a fully detailed account of the long tragedy of his end.

THE second volume of the Oxford History of Music appears at about the same time with the sixth, (already reviewed,) and completes the scheme of the work as it was laid down at its inception. Prof. Wooldridge continues the subject with which he began the work, which relates to the earliest developments of European music, music as we understand it—for the music of the Greeks and Orientals, more or less dim and vague and certainly wholly alien to our conceptions, has been omitted from the scope of the Oxford History. This second volume brings the subject nearer to our sympathies than the first, but it is still a difficult and almost wholly antiquarian branch, this mediaeval development. Only at the end, where he reaches the music of Palestrina and Orlando di Lasso, does the historian touch upon music that appeals at all to modern sympathies.

At the outset we are beset with some of the most puzzling devices of mediaeval school musicians, the extraordinary complications of notation, especially as to rhythm. The value of these things lay in the enlargement of the materials of music in the middle of the fourteenth century. Conjoined with this was the invention of the "musica ficta," or the use of chromatic alteration. It is interesting to note, in pursuing the subject of "discant" and "faulx bourdon," how some of the authorities of the Church as far back as the twelfth century were raising the same kind of objections to the music in the Church as are raised now. John of Salisbury wrote:

> The admiring simple souls of the congregation are of necessity depraved—in the very presence of the Lord, in the sacred recesses themselves of the sanctuary—by the riot of the wantoning voice, by its eager ostentation, and by the womanish affectation in the mincing of notes and sentences.

And this resulted in the prohibition of discant, (or extempore ornamentation of the plain song,) though it could not be suppressed long. Prof. Wooldridge follows out the development of the different schools, beginning with the English, of which Dunstable was the head; the French, with Dufay, and the Netherland, with Okeghem and Josquin Desprées—the day of the extraordinary cultivation of musical subtleties and ingenuities.

⁂

TO the company of other European nations, even including Poland, as leaders in the cultivation of music must now be admitted Spain. Her claims were formerly disallowed, but the discovery in 1890 of a manuscript in the royal palace at Madrid—"a most remarkable document"—containing between 400 and 500 songs by sixty-four native composers named and others anonymous, has furnished reason for giving the Spanish musicians a place of their own. Their school had a brief existence—the last decade of the fifteenth and first twenty years of the sixteenth centuries mark its limits—but that it was intensely vigorous and independent can be amply shown.

Then comes the great period of the perfection of the polyphonic style and the union of all schools in an entire agreement with respect to the forms in which this perfection is made manifest. Lasso, Wilbye—whom Prof. Wooldridge chooses as the leader of the English group—and Palestrina are the men whom he considers at length. His method is to use very copious musical illustration, including, frequently, entire compositions; and, indeed, quite half the book is given over to these examples, which are all pointed in modern notation and in the familiar clefs. The book gives an admirably clear and well-proportioned treatment of this epoch in musical art, and for those who would look deeper than the ordinary summaries of it, Prof. Wooldridge's history, a work of first-hand investigation, is perhaps the best, as it is the most recent, existing in English.

The Political Science Quarterly.

The Political Science Quarterly for March deals with many of the questions now before the public in an enlightening manner. A. B. Stickney, a railroad lawyer of standing, discusses the "Legislative Regulation of Railroad Rates," admitting the need of some regulation, but declaring that further study of the subject is needed before a rate law is passed; P. L. Allen discusses proposed ballot changes in their relation to the independent vote, and Prof. Goodnow and Mr. C. H. Hartshorne discuss the municipal ownership question in two papers, which are of considerable interest. There are other timely papers, and many reviews and appreciations of important books.

The sale of the library and original cartoons of the late Thomas Nast is set down for Monday and Tuesday afternoons at the Merwin-Clayton Sales Company rooms in East Twentieth Street. Nast was not a collector, but among his books are presentation copies of good qualities. His cartoons, however, are likely to prove of equal interest. Among them are the originals of some famous ones, dating from the Tammany ring time to the artist's death. There are many autographs in the collection and signed photographs.

THE EVASION.

BY

EUGENIA BROOKS FROTHINGHAM.

Romance and reform, a point of honor weakly evaded and quixotically regarded, the life of the idle rich, and the bitter problems of socialism and reform are brought face to face in this brilliant novel. Two of the leading characters, young men of the North Shore set of Boston, love the same girl, but the outcome is by no means the usual one.

Miss Frothingham gives a keen, convincing picture of the society life of to-day, and the book possesses an imaginative vitality in the conception of the situations, and a natural intensity in the characters that make it an extremely engrossing story—one not to be put down unfinished.

The orders for "The Evasion" have exhausted the large first edition and have made a second printing necessary before publication.

HUMAN PASSIONS IN DARTMOOR.

A Study of the Newest and Best Novel of Eden Phillpotts, "The Portreeve."

IN "The Portreeve" (Macmillan) Mr. Eden Phillpotts makes no departure from the purpose which has been evident in his work from the beginning—the loving interpretation of the Dartmoor landscape and of the human beings that live out their lives within reach of its potent influence; but the superiority of this to all his previous novels is marked enough to lead to a quite new and higher estimate of its author and a new placing of him among the names that stand for definite and worthy accomplishment. By keeping at the one subject that plainly absorbs his interest and is as plainly a matter of his most intimate and accurate knowledge, Mr. Phillpotts is gradually evolving a study of Dartmoor that bids fair some day to be nearly as perfect a piece of literary art as is the Wessex of Thomas Hardy. Each new volume in the series has shown a long advance over its predecessor in mastery of technique, in the power and interest of the plot, in skill of characterization; and "The Portreeve," far nearer the Hardy level than he has ever reached before, is undoubtedly the best work Mr. Phillpotts has done so far. In fact the whole spirit and trend of "The Portreeve" suggest comparison with such character studies as "The Mayor of Casterbridge" or "The Return of the Native" rather than with any of Mr. Phillpotts's own previous books. There is the same sombre realism that Mr. Hardy stands for, the same relentless pursuit of human weakness to its logical outcome, the same frank treatment of elemental natures, and a certain measure certainly of the same dramatic intensity and power. There is the constant reminder of the other writer, but it is all in a lower, weaker key, and ends by convincing one that there is still a greatness in Mr. Hardy that the younger man will never reach, improve as he may upon his own efforts. Hardy is still the master, though "The Portreeve" proves that he may have a worthy successor.

⁂

IN the present plot and its development nothing new or startling is offered. The story concerns the fortunes of a few humble folk in the little Devon village of Bridgetstowe; but it is the secret of Mr. Phillpotts's strength that he can take such simple human ingredients as these and out of them fashion a drama that excites intensest interest from the first page to the last, thrills with its vivid portrayal of human passions and emotions, and delights with its brilliance, wit, and obvious truth to nature. He has done all this in "The Portreeve," taking for his text the world-old complication—two men in love with one woman, two women of widely different natures in love with one man. One woman's love is of the kind that easily turns to hatred, and pursues its object with relentless cruelty and venom, and thus, in his little group of four people, the author finds all the elements for a sombre tragedy. Perhaps a half dozen other characters are added, but there is not one that is not essential to the development of the parts played by these four, and the succeeding chapters, with steadily growing force, carry them all on with the inevitableness of fate to the tragic end. In most striking proof of Mr. Phillpotts's intensity of purpose in his latest novel is the surprisingly small space given by him to those wonderful descriptions of Dartmoor scenery which have always played so dominant a rôle in his former stories. In "The Portreeve" the background of bleak moorland and mountain, homely valley, and ever-changing aspect of sky and atmosphere is so skillfully and beautifully worked in as to throw into prominence the characters placed against it, not obscure them, as in "The River" and "Children of the Mist," it so often seemed to do. He has learned to gain effects with fewer tiresome details, but it is our opinion that an even further conversion to the impressionistic school will add immensely to the force and vigor of his style. "The Portreeve" is never tedious, but there are perilous passages that make one remember the tediousness of "The River."

MR. PHILLPOTTS has often contrasted his calm Devon landscapes with events the reverse of peaceful and human hearts torn by conflicting motives, but never has quite such a lurid spirit ruled his plots as lends life and color to this tumultuous narrative of Dodd Wolferstan's career; and it must be admitted that whatever weakness the story exhibits is due to the melodramatic figure into which Mr. Philipotts has allowed the leading woman to develop. All the rest of the characters are credible and real—their acts follow logically from the qualities with which their author has endowed them, and their lives unfold with convincing naturalness; but Primrose Horn neither fits into the life that Mr. Phillpotts otherwise draws so vividly, nor does she resemble any kind of woman made familiar by experience. The story needed something to act the part of an irresistible destiny in Wolferstan's life, and apparently the author manufactured her fiendish nature to fit the need. She is so crude and unconvincing a product of the imagination, however, that it speaks much for Mr. Philipotts's ability that he prevents her from doing more damage to his work than she does.

But he has not failed in any of his other characters. Het Yelland is a marvelously truthful portrait of a certain type of woman, and Dicky Barkell and his old father are the most delightful studies in human nature as it sometimes manifests itself in the peasant class. Their cynical comments on things in general are deliciously humorous, and, like those of Mr. Dooley, have the added attraction of being terribly true. The story ends in darkness and failure for all concerned, but it is an ending toward which the reader feels the same acquiescence as when such horrors really befall in life. The writer has not betrayed his characters; they have but worked out their inevitable destiny, and they must abide by it.

FOR JEWISH CHILDREN

THERE is—there used to be more of it—a sort of juvenile reading matter much approved by the spiritual guides of youth, and known as the Sunday school story. Sunday is, of course, a feast distinctly Christian; but if the word Sabbath be used instead of Sunday—and many good Calvinists prefer the Scriptural term—there is no reason why the designation should not be extended to cover the case of the volume now before us. This volume is entitled "A Modern Esther and Other Stories for Jewish Children." It is written by Emily Goldsmith Gerson, illustrated by C. T. Furman, and published in Philadelphia by Julius H. Greenstone.

As in the case of the Christian Sunday school story, the author's object is not so much fiction as the encouragement of piety and the teaching of the simpler lessons of the faith to which she belongs, to show how pleasant and profitable it is—in the end—to do those things which are commanded, how faith and honesty and kindness win their sure reward, and how wickedness is punished. The method, if not strictly scientific, may be defended by saying that it isn't necessary to confuse the very young with the exceptions, and it is a method with the weight of much tradition behind it. Naturally, the stories are of extreme artlessness—but all of us in our time have read stories of like artlessness not without eager ears and open eyes. We were not born with any intuition of the triumph of good in concrete cases, and until we had learned the invariable rule of Sunday school stories, we always trembled to the very end for the good and pious little boy or girl, who for some curious reason—not being ourselves noticeably good or pious—had our sympathy. We glowed over their reward, too—the finding of the lost child, the enriching of the poor one. Do not children, even when they play soldiers with bits of painted paper or leaden toys, distinguish the opposing battalions into "bad ones" and "good ones," and do not the good ones always win in the end? Surely.

So the children of excellent Jewish parents may read here of Esther, who was a rabbi's daughter in Russia and born in the feast of Purim, and how, when she was quite a little girl, she saved her people from massacre at the hands of the cruel Russians. They may read again of the amiable Cohens, who were a cheerful, industrious family not overrich, and lost a most necessary sum of money, and found it providentially again in time to pay off the mortgage. Another tale is of a hard old woman softened by a good grandchild; another of a foundling and an erring daughter forgiven; yet another about a fellow who toiled and dreamed over a wondrous invention. The circumstance that the thing the gentleman worked upon—and finally made go, of course—appears from the author's telling to have been a perpetual motion machine—or at least an engine that just naturally went of itself—will not, perhaps, bother the youngster who reads. Anyhow, there is a moral of patience and charity involved, with interweavings of sentiment connected with Jewish sacred seasons. Indeed, most of the stories hover tenderly about some feast of the children of Israel, just as the Christian Sunday school story was apt to show you a glow of Christmas candles and a glimpse of the Christmas tree vouchsafed through the window to the waif in the snow outside, or to waft you the smell of Easter lilies lovingly borne into some poor dwelling or hospital ward where Jimmy the newsboy lay with a fever or both legs cut off by a trolley car.

Macmillan Imports.

Upon his return from England, George P. Brett, President of The Macmillan Company, brought with him some new books. Among them are: Bram Stoker's "Life of Sir Henry Irving"; a biography of Lord Leighton, in two volumes, by Mrs. Russell Barrington; "Vacation Rambles in London," a new book by E. V. Lucas, author of "A Wanderer in Holland," &c.; the authorized "Life" of Walter Crane, with many new illustrations; Stephen Phillips's new drama, "Harold"; a revised and enlarged edition of Mutcher's "History of Modern Painting"; a description of "The Fair Hills of Ireland," by Stephen Gwynn, for which Hugh Thomson has made many pictures; an edition of Turgenev's novels, in fifteen volumes, and a cheaper edition of George Brandes's "Main Currents in Nineteenth Century Literature."

LETITIA.

IN the region of gentle sentiment Mr. Roy Rolfe Gilson has a pleasing little corner of his own, where the flowers of romance and innocence are nursed with extreme tenderness, yet where the affection of the gardener for his sprouts is not without a saving sanity. Mr. Gilson's newest fancy—which he calls a novel—is named "Miss Primrose," (Harpers,) and suggests rather than tells a very sad, pretty story of maiden purity. The supposed teller of this story pieces together the earlier past from his small-boyish recollections of a gentle girl who dwelt across the hedges with the crippled old scholar, her father, and that method gives quite naturally (what by other methods might be hard to get) an Arcadian simplicity and vagueness to the pictures of Miss Primrose's youth and her one love affair. Dr. Primrose was an Englishman, an old Rugby boy, a minister of religion in a little New England village, and now superannuated—a gentle dreamer, who wrote verses on classical subjects—verses which were conveyed to the village printer by his daughter, Letitia, and only published in the village paper. Fragile old doctor and gruff old printer are both charming pictures, and there are flashes of school days and memories of boyish dreamings over immortal Tom Brown, of Summer hours on the hills, when the small boy (ignorant of many deep matters) was guide to Letitia Primrose and a blond young man from England, who came and—went away.

Afterward the grown-up boy traces the course of the older Letitia's life—Letitia as a schoolma'am, Letitia in those strange exalted moods of aging spinsters, Letitia brought back to earth and utterly womanly in the face of Fate and need of comfort, Letitia confronting matters whereof her invincible innocence furnishes her no understanding, and wherein her loves (for that reason) shone brightly even upon Magdalen. For Letitia is of the utterly pure in heart who walk unspotted through the world, and Mr. Gilson takes her once in a while into places where perfectly proper maiden ladies of more sophistication would never be seen. One such place in particular, and the picture of it—a house of mirth, and Letitia standing calm-eyed on the threshold talking with one in silken raiment and golden hair (had not Letitia taught her as a school girl?)—is a really wonderful bit. There are other bits not conveying contrasts so poignant, perhaps, but quite as true and quite as delicately arranged, but delicacy, so wonderful a weapon sometimes, may be overdone, and the story as a whole is rather cloying in spite of Mr. Gilson's quaint humor and real feeling for that nameless charm of humanity which is so inextricably woven of foibles and virtues, strength and weakness, ignorance and knowledge, wisdom and folly.

"Lady Baltimore" gives a picture of American life as genuinely alive as that in "The Virginian," though in scenes as different as may be. Mr. Wister has exchanged the open plains for the streets of a city that is historic; and delightful women, young and old, take the place of the rollicking cowboys of the frontier. His whole tone of delicious, delicate comedy adds to the charm of his new departure.

EVOLUTION.

Dr. Saleeby's Account of Spencer's Synthetic Philosophy and What Evolution Has Done for It.

DR. CALEB WILLIAMS SALEEBY is one of those exceedingly rare persons who can make the exposition of science at once clear and enlivening. He has taken as his task the popularization and extension of evolutionary doctrines of the late Herbert Spencer, and his latest book, "Evolution, The Master-Key," (Harper's,) is astonishingly good reading—taking the word good as connoting at once entertainment and edification. For in the first place Dr. Saleeby has mastered his subject and knows what he wants to explain. In the second place, having to a high degree the ideal scientist's candor, he makes no attempt to explain what he doesn't know. Finally he has a style lucid, incisive, exact, and boldly individual, and, considering his scientific enthusiasm, a sense of humor remarkably sane. Now and again his expressions are startlingly picturesque, not to say daring; but chiefly he reasons with you in good temper—and in plain words. His indignations are mainly intellectual.

We may quote Dr. Saleeby's own words of introduction. He says:

> My object is not to reduce the many and ponderous volumes of the synthetic philosophy to brief and popular form, for that task has already been admirably performed by Prof. Hudson in his "Philosophy of Herbert Spencer." Rather do I write in the attempt to justify my conviction that the philosophy of universal and ordered change is far more easily demonstrated to-day than ever before. Since "First Principles" was written new sciences, such as the comparative study of religions, comparative mythology, comparative ethics, comparative psychology, astro-physics, and physical chemistry, have come into being, each of which deals in effect with evolution in one or another form. My purpose, then, is to demonstrate the truth of the philosophy of evolution or change in the light of human knowledge in the first lustrum of the twentieth century.

SPECIAL use is made of course of the new light cast by the discoveries connected with radium—the discoveries which have resolved the atom into parts, made a superstition of the "elements," and reduced to one the laws of the conservation of matter and of energy, which most of us learned laboriously enough at college. We did not know then that matter itself was a mere manifestation of electrical energy, though certain of the wise suspected it. Dr. Saleeby's setting forth of all this (with the inferences to be drawn from it) is such as a wayfaring man may read, and read eagerly, and understandingly. As for the "popularization" of Spencer, which the doctor formally repudiates, that, nevertheless, is a part of his work. It is a necessary incident of the primary task of fortifying the Spencerian doctrine by enlarging the applications—at least, when one speaks to an audience of laymen. And Dr. Saleeby's book is addressed to laymen—he never forgets that it is addressed to laymen. For instance, he is prepared to admit the value to a philosopher—even Spencer—of a "gift of phrase making," and thereto quotes Stevenson's "Man lives not by bread alone, but chiefly by catchwords." Indeed, Dr. Saleeby is very fond of quoting Stevenson to crown a scientific theory with a glory of words; he borrows that phrase of his, the "vital putrefaction of the dust," to shadow forth the notion of the dim beginning in lifeless matter of that life whose complement is death and corruption. He quotes Shelley, too, in his excellent chapter on the evolution of morality, and St. Paul and others of the saints. But that is later. Now he has chapters on cosmic evolution, on atomic evolution, on the origin of life, the evolutionary theory of it, the progress of that theory, the misapprehensions of it, the contributors to it and some of its enemies.

At this point Dr. Saleeby pays his respects to the late Marquis of Salisbury and Mr. Arthur James Balfour, as later (when he has occasion to remark upon those who keep their religion in one pocket and their science in the other) he has something to say of Mr. Gladstone. He is careful to make it clear that the survival of the fittest does not mean the survival of the best, (morally, intellectually, or physically,) but the best adapted to the given environment, and he is equally careful to show what a vast multitude of influences (from bacilli to parents and guardians) environment covers. He adds what has been done by the latest biologists (or biometricians, rather) to fortify the Spencerian doctrines in this matter, and altogether furnishes the plain citizen with much white light upon a subject so often and so fearsomely abused and darkened by prejudiced and ignorant commentators.

THE chapter on the evolution of the mind is another excellent chapter. Therein, by the way, it is remarked that "the attention which the evolutionary psychology has directed to the child has added a new interest to the possession of a baby," and further that the same psychology "has served to elucidate and explain the mental differences between man and woman in a fashion which previous theories have never been able to emulate"—which is as may be.

Again, Dr. Saleeby does well with his discussion of the human will, both the classification of the subject at large and the defense of his own doctrine of determinism as not destructive of, but as actually the very foundation stone of moral responsibility. Whereat libertarians may stare. In the absence of these gentlemen the argument seems conclusive.

The second section of the book is concerned with evolution in society, and first of all with the evolution of religion. Dr. Saleeby's preferred origin of religion, like his master's, is in ancestor worship, and he is clear that the relation of religion and morals (which are older than any religion) is accidental merely. Not only so, but the relation even now is not, as he sees it, very close. As to monogamous marriage, he thinks differently from Nietzche, Bernard Shaw, and George Meredith about that. Evolution, in his view, rather, points to that fashion of mating as conducive to fitness.

Another section is devoted to the evolution of morality, through the primitive altruism of parent and offspring, beginning with the simplest forms. And it is here that Dr. Saleeby is most movingly eloquent, and that he quotes whole stanzas of Shelley, and, anti-religionist as he is, texts from St. Paul. His chapter on optimism—which he distinguishes as gastric, emotional, and rational—is one of his best, as is that in which he traces the development of his own profession (of medicine) and that of the priest from a common origin. The section on Evolution and the Religion of the Future is eloquent if not quite satisfying, and the consideration of the Unknowable not more a weaving of words than in the case of other philosophers who tackle that tremendous subject.

PAUL AND FIAMMETTA.

IF anybody is so blasé that the smell of English hedgerows and hawthorn do not appeal to him, the best place for him is one or other of Dante's limbos.

But we are not talking to such; we are only reminding the favored ones who do know what the love of home, field, and flowers and house pets is that if they will they can find a refreshing little story about these things in Mrs. Harker's book, "Concerning Paul and Fiammetta." (Scribners.) If there were not so many odious little excrescences of associations lately sprung up about that word temperament we would say Paul and Fiammetta were both generously endowed with it. As it is we know that Fiammetta's vagaries are excused many times because her father was a poet, while as for Paul's "curusness" the best that could be done was to remark that he harked back to a certain old Oxford uncle who was possessed of a passion for books so great as to collect a great library and then leave it to the Bodleian.

Fiammetta, with her blue frocks and her ways that seemed so odd until she got into some middle-aged mullioned window or some cathedral where the souls of men of long ago seemed still to breathe, was precisely the right sort of child to come into the good, quiet English squire's family.

When you come to know the gracious mother, the once-in-a-great-while profane but so generally splendid English father, and genuinely healthy and true-hearted little quartet, Harry, Paul, Janey, and Lucy, not to mention the dogs, Whisky and Soda, Ailsa, Gyp, and Thor, you no longer wonder that Mr. Glyn should have sent Fiammetta to stay a year with them—no, the only wonder is a mere poet should have such common sense.

We think there is a deal of fallacy mixed with that old adage, "A happy life—no history." Some day we may consider this is passé as many another old adage. Anyhow, the chronicle of Fiammetta's year in what she herself calls a place "so spaceful and full of roses," has very little of dullness in it, and so much of happiness that the only unhappiness comes at the end, when the children have to lend her back to her rightful father for a while.

A FRENCHWOMAN IN AMERICA.

The Flattering Estimate of Our Institutions and Some of Our Eminent Personages Formed by Mlle. Therese Vianzone.*

MLLE THERESE VIANZONE, who spent several months in America two years ago, has now published her impressions in a volume of letters, written at the time, to a friend in Paris, Mme. Le Paulmier. Through European friends in the diplomatic corps at Washington, and American friendships contracted abroad, especially in diplomatic circles at St. Petersburg, Mlle Vianzone came to America under exceptionally favorable circumstances for making delightful acquaintances at the White House, where the hero of San Juan seems to have surrendered at discretion. As visible trophies of the victory came first an unsolicited photograph of the President, sent to her a few days after their first meeting, and later the privilege of gracing her volume, when it should appear, with this photograph, one of Mrs. Roosevelt, and still another of the entire family. To Mrs. Roosevelt, with her own permission, is addressed the dedicatory epistle, closing with the words:

> The too short moments which the President and you, my dear Madame, have kindly been willing to grant me, will count among my most delightful memories of the United States. And I shall be happy if, in reading this unpretentious volume, you realize, when you yourselves are mentioned, the admiration which the wife, the husband, and the mother inspire in me.

The temerity to ask the privilege of this dedication came to Mlle. Vianzone during a visit to the White House itself as "une inspiration subite"; Mrs. Roosevelt immediately replied, "Ce sera un grand honneur," and the President, of course, "parait enchanté," under the thin French dress of which one readily detects the author's rendering of the President's characteristic "De-lighted!"

⁂

MLLE. VIANZONE'S reciprocal contribution for the knowledge of American life secured while here took the form of lectures on such subjects as "The Women Victims of the French Revolution," "Mme. de Staël," and "The Difference Between the Genius of Corneille and that of Racine." These lectures were delivered before various educational institutions, such organizations as the Alliance Française, women's clubs, and occasionally under distinguished personal patronage, such as that of the Russian Ambassador, at Washington. Her kindness of heart is well illustrated in the fact that on two different occasions her lectures were read privately at the bedside of Miss Litchfield, in Baltimore. In Miss Litchfield she found a very charming woman, speaking French fluently, with ready tears of sympathy for her account of the women who fell as victims of the revolution, but cheerful and animated in spite of her years of physical inability.

The bust of Sidney Lanier, at the home of Mrs. Turnbull, Miss Litchfield's sister, together with a visit to the tomb of Poe, calls forth a brief comparison of the two poets, to the decided advantage of the former. Mlle. Vianzone is of a very firmly, one might almost say aggressively, religious type of mind, and in Lanier, "faithful in a life of suffering and want to the purest ideal," she finds a striking contrast to Poe, "qui a si mal usé d'un très beau talent." Through Mrs. Turnbull's younger son, then a student in Columbia University, she passed an hour in the "Brick Church," after the dispersal of the Sunday morning congregation, listening alone to the organ, under the touch of Mr. Archer Gibson, with all the more delight that the time was mostly given to the music of her compatriot Widor, an especial favorite of both organist and listener. On other occasions we find such artists as Sembrich and Calvé ministering personally to her pleasure, so that one does not wonder that week followed week in an almost unbroken dream of delight.

NATURALLY this kindness made a deep impression. "L'hospitalité américaine dépasse toute concurrence," we are told on one page; "L'hospitalité américaine est fabuleuse," it is put elsewhere, and again and again her gratitude wells up in one form or another. Of course her character and connections made it inevitable that the better and brighter side of American society should be brought beneath her gaze. The doors of our "houses of mirth" swing rather to those less intellectually inclined. The American homes and mothers and young girls that she saw were not such as to fill her with alarm for the future of American society.

> I have seen a great many mothers during the past three months, and, without exception, they passionately love their children. But they know how to put a proper restraint upon their love, bringing their children up in the enjoyment of freedom and responsible for their own behavior, so as to make virile characters of them, feeling a sense of duty, and possessing an individuality of their own.

American girlhood as she saw it is essentially true-hearted, frank, and natural in its faults as in its good qualities, not brazen and forward in its coquetry; mentally wholesome, earnest, and devoted, and giving excellent promise for the future. Worldly women there are, who feel maternity as a mere burden, and are ready to throw off all burdens for the futile glitter of mere social pleasure, "mais ces femmes-là ne sont pas une spécialité du nouveau monde. * * * Elles existaient bien avant le découverte de l'Amérique."

AS a devoted daughter of the Church, American Catholicism, its leaders, and its institutions, drew her constant attention. She is proud of Secretary Bonaparte, whom Cardinal Gibbons had praised to her before she met him as "a great man and a great Catholic." She is pleased with the intelligent and persistent devotion to necessary reforms, as all thoughtful American citizens may well be pleased. In one educational institution of her Church she finds a portrait of Cardinal Gibbons, and opposite it another of a young woman, décolletée. "Je m'étonne; c'est shocking." Her attendant smiles and explains the relation of the offending portrait to a certain benefaction. Alas! the Protestant pot may not call the Catholic kettle black on this score. We have heard, however, that a great university of the Far West has found a solution of the problem by honoring such personal mementos of benefactors with a special room, the key of which is not always to be found during the presence of visitors whose sense of fitness might be shocked. Mlle. Vianzone tells an amusing story of a little girl friend who went with her on one occasion to call on Cardinal Gibbons, and who came away very much distressed for fear the Cardinal, as judged by his form, was not getting enough to eat! The Cardinal will doubtless consider himself highly complimented. Ecclesiastics of whatever faith, in this land of plenty, are not traditionally considered as fit subjects for anxiety on that score. As to American Catholicism in general, Mlle. Vianzone is pleased with its condition and prospects, and finds no apparent ground for the frequent assumption of its radical variation from the European type. The dignity, the majesty, the absence of undue haste seen here in the exercise of public worship she regards as in very pleasing contrast with the usual American bustle and hurry.

THE success in achieving the practical and comfortable in America was one of her earliest impressions, but she found exceptions as the time went on. A journey or two by night turned her unalterably against "les horribles sleepings," as she designates the Pullman cars. "J'aime mille fois mieux nos sleepings d'Europe." After a delightful dinner in one of New York's most charming homes, where Mme. Calvé was one of the little group of guests and voluntarily added to the delight by the informal rendering of old French songs, without accompaniment, she wanted to devote the next morning to unbroken labor in her hotel. "But I was interrupted every moment by the accursed telephone, so convenient and yet so unendurable."

Time did not reconcile her to American haste. The Americans run all the time, she says. They run to the theatre, and even when they are not late they run to their seats after entering the building. She is caught up by this rush, forced into it, but never convinced of its necessity. Occasionally she pulls out of the current into some eddy and rests a while: "Sans cela, la machine aurait craqué." For the three or four days' repose which she felt to be absolutely necessary before taking ship on her homeward voyage she was obliged to flee to Canada, where she had spent the portion of her visit not given to Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, and New York, (with a flying visit to Chicago, where she delivered a lecture arranged for by Mme. Calvé and visited the university and the packing houses of Mr. Swift,) and when finally on her vessel she rejoices that she may now fairly "bathe herself in repose." "Ah! combien je suis fatiguée!" We can assure the reader of these delightfully interesting letters, however, that fatigue is one emotion from which he will find himself absolutely free when he arrives at the end of the volume. On visiting the University of Chicago the author was highly amused by the "co-eds," who lined up at the vestibule and greeted her with a characteristically American college yell: "Rah! rah! rah! for Mlle. Vianzone!" And so will say many who catch the contagion of her own enthusiasm only through these letters.

Another Guide to Rome.

Guide books to Europe seem to be much in demand this year, owing to the unprecedent rush to foreign countries, so that another little volume will not only be timely, but useful. A new edition of Augustus J. C. Hare's "Days Near Rome" is being issued by The Macmillan Company. It is edited by St. Clair Baddeley, author of "Robert the Wise, King of Naples," &c. The book is divided into "excursions," each of which is fully described, and the principal and most important sights in the cities pointed out. The numerous illustrations are from photographs and reproduced in half-tone. There are also a couple of colored maps. The book is a handy 16mo., bound in pliable black cloth.

"Philosophy of Religion."

> A philosophy of religion must not start from any ready-made philosophical system. In a certain sense all thinking must be systematic, for "system" means, literally, "that which stands together," and our thoughts must be prepared to stand the most rigorous test in this respect. * * * * Religion is itself a mode or form of spiritual life, and it can only be truly estimated when it is viewed in its relation to other forms and modes of this life. * * *

Thus writes Dr. Harald Höffding of the University of Copenhagen in the opening chapter of his work on "The Philosophy of Religion," which The Macmillan Company is bringing out in an English version by B. E. Meyer. "Philosophy of Religion," he explains, is used by him in the sense of "a mode of thinking which makes religion its object." It has been his aim to treat of all the essential aspects of the religious problem, "not only with the intellectual interest which cannot fail to be excited by so great and comprehensive a subject-matter, but also in the frame of mind evoked by the consciousness that he has here before him a form of spiritual life in which, for centuries long, the human race has stored up its deepest and innermost experiences."

The subject has been divided into three parts—epistemological, psychological, and ethical. The full explanatory and reference notes have been put together in an appendix. Prof. Höffding's works have been translated into English, and, among the more familiar ones, are "Outlines of Psychology," "The Problems of Philosophy," and "A History of Modern Philosophy."

The Man at the Throttle.

THE RAILROADS, THEIR EMPLOYES, AND THE PUBLIC. A Discourse Upon the Rights, Duties, and Obligations of Each Toward the Other. By John E. Miles. Boston. Pp. 199.

The man behind the gun came to his own in public estimation during our recent argument with Spain, and now the man at the throttle puts himself forward for recognition in a manner not a little surprising. Skill with the pen and success as an advocate are not exactly the qualities and record which would be regarded as characteristic of the man on the footboard, and yet they may be possessed by others of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers as well as by the author, the Chairman of their Legislative Board. The book which he has published for the gratification of his order and himself gives a peep behind the curtain regarding his activities in behalf of his union before the Massachusetts Railroad Commission. Sundry other chapters inform the reader how railway employes feel toward their employers, and how the public ought to feel toward this interesting calling. Other chapters relate to legislation, the responsibility for railway accidents and their prevention, and so on. The book will be appreciated in the circles for which it was written.

CANADIAN ROMANCE.

HEARTS AND CREEDS. By Anna Chapin Ray. Illustrated by drawings by Alice Barber Stephens. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

PREJUDICES are often provocative of the picturesque. Especially is this true of race and religious prejudices. Therefore, when the most self-willed and haughty English beauty of Quebec insists on marrying the devout French Catholic it is only to be expected that complications of a more or less vivid nature will ensue.

We know as well as did the fair Arline's disapproving family that trouble is in the wind.

Just how much this trouble is egged on by St. Just, a Frenchman of another sort, just how Arline's ambitions for a salon come near to wrecking both her husband's and her brothers' careers, how the merry little American girl with the Puritanical name of Patience and one or two prejudices of her own happens to get tangled up in this milieu, how the good English lord who, according to jovial brother Jimmy, was a terrible duffer at Eton, comes to stand so faithfully by the little coterie of friends, how at last St. Just gets the just reward of his machinations and in displaying his own evil nature illuminates for Arline her husband's hitherto unappreciated qualities, all make entertaining reading.

Moreover, Quebec is one of the nooks and corners of the world that we do not tire hearing about, and Anna Chapin Ray, who has successfully made it the scene for one of her earlier stories may be said to know whereof she speaks.

In this new book she shows the curious mixture of cosmopolitanism and provincialism of such a quaint town in an enlivening way, and even interests us in discussions of Radicals and Conservatives, and the veritable tempest in a teapot which the political scandal turns out to be.
